What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, Aug. 26

Aries (March 21-April 19): Haste and impulse go hand in hand today to mix things up—if you let them. See the weekend as a separate experience altogether.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Expenses get out of hand all too readily with just a little thoughtless behavior. Everybody has his own program for the day.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): It seems that your recommendation has an electrical quality, reflecting inner tension. There's little likelihood ideas will fit others.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Look to see where your long-term self-interest lies, leave the byways unexplored for the moment. Be a bystander.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Get the facts straight from objective estimates of disinterested parties. Your own judgment is not what it should be these days.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The doings of others may concern you so much you forget to attend your own affairs well. Cooperate with those you love.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Rely on no promise, however grand the benefactor to be may appear. Plans are at work, so be them worthy of your participation.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Expect delays and possible interference and be glad you do not have to commit yourself yet. Do some quiet research.

Sagittarius (Nov 22-Dec 21): Leave career efforts aside today, or restrict them to routine. You may hear little of other people's feelings in words.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your thinking tends to hold to past ideas and theories. Current conditions are different and require further study.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Neither take nor give unsolicited advice today, as you have not the whole story on how others' problems arose.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Moderation in daily living becomes you well now. Consider even the dullest routine as a passing phase—get on with it.

To Your Good Health

Bride Has Problem With Her Fiance

By G. C. AHOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am about to be married. My fiance and I have a serious argument. He reads your column and would believe you.

He has been told that a virgin has a very "tough skin that has to be slit open by a doctor before her wedding night.

I feel that, because I won't go to a doctor for this reason, he now thinks I'm not a virgin.

This may not seem a serious problem to others, but it is very serious here.—W.J.M.

Your fiancé is misinformed, but not as misinformed as is the case with some bridegrooms who in by some trivial occurrence even in early childhood. Or the hymen may be thin enough so that it merely stretches instead of rupturing and causing discernible bleeding.

If a girl has had the hymen ruptured when she was a child, or if she has a very thin stretched one that does not bleed, she has no way of proving that she is a virgin. This has caused all sorts of uproar and unhappiness in those cases in which the bridegroom was insistent on proof of virginity yet didn't know the facts.

All she can do is tell him she's a virgin and expect him to take her word for it. And after all, what proof does he have to offer, except to expect her to accept his word?

At the other extreme, occasionally a hymen is so thick and tough that the only recourse is to have a doctor cut through it by a simple procedure, by the way, it can happen that way, but it is seldom necessary.

On that basis, I dare say you can decide what to do. My suggestion is that you just let nature take its course, as women have been doing all through history.

A visit to the doctor is wise for quite other reasons, however: to determine your general health, perhaps get some reliable information on pregnancy or birth control if you want or need it.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: One of my friends is thinking of marrying a man 15 years of age. She is a virile, wide-awake person in her late 20s. She is wondering if there will be any sex life with a man that age. I cannot answer her. Is this within your province to answer?—R.G.C.

Some men that age are sexually active; many aren't. Your friend is asking the wrong person when she asks you. Or me. The only authoritative answer would have to come from her gentleman friend.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Exactly how do birth control pills prevent pregnancy? What does the pill do to the body—P.F.

The pills are a mixture of hormones. As you know, when a woman is pregnant, she stops ovulation, and when she doesn't ovulate she can't get pregnant again.

Well, the pills change the hormone balance so it resembles that which occurs in pregnancy. Thus, naturally, the state of pregnancy has occurred and ovulation ceases. Then you can't get pregnant.

Bidding Quiz

You are South, neither side vulnerable. The bidding has been:

West	North	East	South
1 ♥	Pass	1 NT	Pass

What would you bid now with each of the following four hands?

1. ♠ AK1032 ♥ J74 ♦ 6 ♣ 962
2. ♠ AKJ984 ♥ K85 ♦ 32 ♣ QJ10
3. ♠ AJ ♥ 74 ♦ 853 ♣ KQ976
4. ♠ KJ75 ♥ Q932 ♦ 7 ♣ KJ83

1. Two spades. The notrump bid downplays the 16 to 18 points, balanced distribution and one or more stoppers in diamonds. However, though each partner seems willing to play the hand in notrump, you should be quite willing to do so, for with 6-3 3/7 distribution and only two high card points you are much more likely to do better in spades.

As a matter of fact, the odds favor North's going down several tricks in notrump, while it is approximately even money that you can make two spades. This is because in notrump your spades may turn out to be worthless, while in a suit contract they are sure to pull considerable weight and produce a sizable bundle of tricks.

In the sequence shown, two spades is a weakness bid. In effect it states that there is a better chance of making two spades than one notrump. It strongly urges partner to pass.

2. Two spades. Here, game is just around the corner — since you possess 10 high card points — and you apprise partner of the good news by making a jump response of three spades. You plan to pass if partner's rebid is three notrump or four spades.

3. Three notrump. Nine tricks in notrump are much more likely than eleven tricks in clubs, and you therefore go directly to game in notrump. It would be tactically wrong to respond three clubs, for while this response would be forcing it would also be pointless.

4. Two diamonds. You must naturally think in terms of game with 11 high card points facing as few as 18 point overcall, but with 4-4-4-1 distribution, notrump is not very appealing.

The best way of finding out whether partner has four spades or four hearts — which would make a major suit game a much more attractive proposition than a notrump game — is by making a cuebid in diamonds. The intention is to raise North to four if he responds two hearts or spades, and to raise him to three notrump if his response to the cuebid is two notrump.

Tomorrow: The rebiddable trick.

Teachers to Delay Qualification Plan

KIMBERLEY, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario Teachers' Federation was told Thursday that the controversial proposal for a governing council to pass on teachers' qualifications will not be presented to the provincial government for at least a year.

"It will not be an overnight decision," Ian Fife, OTF president, said of the plan, which earlier in the federation convention received a cool reception from Education Minister Thomas Wells.

Mr. Fife said one of the first steps would be a study of what is happening in other professions. A report would be prepared by the OTF executive for a spring meeting of its board of governors, and he expected the subject would be debated at next year's convention.

Thursday's session of the convention drafted a set of qualifications of teachers for use by the proposed governing council, should that body's establishment be approved by the government.

But Mr. Fife said the set of resolutions, known as the principle, were subject to change on the basis of what is practical.

The first incident involving a family of three or four occurred a week ago. The family has since been released from hospital.

The commission said the cost of 1973 models will be no higher than the cost of similarly equipped current models.

May Get Job

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister E. J. Benson was unofficially reported in line Thursday to succeed J. W. Pickersgill as president of the Canadian Transport Comm'sion.

Hong Kong Police Smash Spy Ring

HONG KONG (Reuter) — Detectives found a Kremlin plan to recruit spies throughout the Far East in the trouser pocket of one of two Soviet agents caught with two Hong Kong businessmen, a reliable source said today.

The Russians—one of them of Chinese ancestry—were detained after special branch police raided the home of one of the businessmen last month, the sources added.

The South China Morning Post newspaper said today the police raid smashed a Soviet spy ring operating in the colony.

According to the reliable source, a Russia master spy posing as a marine superintendent controlling repair work on Soviet ships there, was the first step in setting up the ring in 1969.

The Russian, identified as Alexander Trusov, invited one of the Hong Kong businessmen to Moscow where he was asked to spy in Hong Kong in return for contracts with four Soviet export agencies—Medexport, Novoexport, Raznoexport, and Exportlion, the source added.

He was given codes and instructions to contact Soviet couriers masquerading as seamen on Russian cruise ships stopping here.

MOH Optimistic

Dr. Page, Brantford's medical officer of health, said he personally thinks the concept of molding the delivery of health services into one major body is a good one.

"But I can also see great difficulty in setting up effective councils throughout the province," he added in commenting on Health Minister Richard Potter's announcement of an expanded role for district health councils.

Ontario Crops Face Potential Disaster

By ARNIE HAKALA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Leaders of Ontario's agriculture industry say they don't want to be alarmists but with not a lot of sunshine and warmth in the east month, Ontario crops face a potentially disastrous situation.

One of the most immediate crops in jeopardy are tomatoes in Kent and Essex counties of southwestern Ontario.

Jack Howard of Hamilton, secretary-manager of the Ontario Vegetable Growers Marketing Board, said the $17 million tomato business needs some sunshine fast to ripen the fruit.

Mr. Howard also explained that $17 million was a figure only for tomato growers.

Crop losses, he said, hit processors, packagers, stores and eventually the consumer.

Other crops which need the sun are apples, grapes and tobacco.

Already, hay and fodder crops have been severely damaged by heavy rains in several eastern Ontario counties as well as an area between North Bay and the Ottawa River border of Quebec.

Jim Rainford, associate director of the emils and crops branch of the Ontario ministry of agriculture research station in Vineland, Ont., said most apples in the Georgian Bay area to tobacco in the Dubl area have been affected.

Frost killed tobacco and in the Niagara peninsula many crops have been hit with growth crack, a condition where fruit absorbs so much moisture that it splits.

Much of the hardest crop was lost because of crack and there is concern for other Niagara fruits.

In addition, said David Sangster, a fruit crop specialist with the Ontario agriculture ministry, there is the problem of fungus diseases setting in because of the moisture.

Mr. Rainford said:

"It certainly is not the kind of year that farmers are going to look back on and remember fondly."

To date, the most serious losses have been in hay and crops which are grown to provide dairy and beef cattle with fodder during the winter months.

Farmers in the North Bay and eastern Ontario areas are already talking about selling their herds and looking for other jobs.

Other than that they may be faced to import grain and hay for their herds, a venture which will cost considerably more than home-grown feed.

Another problem has been that many farmers have been reluctant to buy crop insurance, "in that they have never experienced a loss that made them aware of the complications.

One farmer commented:

"It's just like any other insurance, you don't realize how valuable it is until you're hit and don't have it."

Mr. Howard said:

"Till the best technology in the world can't cope with the whims of nature and that is what we are up against."

He added:

"There have been some bad seasons in certain areas of the province but we've always been able to fall back on another area. This year it seems that everything is bad. Where do we go?

"In my memory, there has been nothing as bad as this."

Ontario Now Pays More

Federal Legal Aid Plan Costs Low

OTTAWA (CP) — The annual bill for the federal government's legal aid scheme unwrapped Thursday will be less than that paid by Ontario for its existing provincial plan.

Justice Minister Otto Lang said when he announced the federal proposal that its $11.5 million cost would provide a "decent and adequate" legal aid service for persons charged with criminal offences.

By comparison the Ontario plan cost $12 million last year, giving subsidized legal counsel to people involved in civil proceedings as well as criminal cases.

The federal plan is to be administered by the provincial governments who are now studying the proposal.

A federal contribution of 50 cents per citizen will be given to provincial governments wanting to participate. That will mean a $3.9 million gift to Ontario's established plan but might not allow poorer provinces enough to create effective new schemes.

Prince Edward Island, for example, would get only $56,000 because of its small population. That's less than the annual income of many lawyers.

Other provinces with operating plans are New Brunswick, Quebec, Manitoba and Saskatchewan. The federal offer may mean a saving to them, they are unlikely to reject it.

Announced just before an expected election call, the legal aid plan does not represent a major chunk of the federal budget, about .06 per cent. In addition the amount is less than one-third that given away by artists by the Canada Council.

Mr. Lang admitted at a news conference Thursday that the offer — about .46 per cent or 46 per cent of the total cost of any provincial plan—could not guarantee comprehensive legal aid coverage.

"I personally thought of it in terms of our contribution being enough—at 90 per cent—to provide a decent kind of plan, not necessarily the richest, not necessarily the most generous, but decent and adequate.

"I'll be quite happy, of course, if some provinces decide to spend more. But I think, in terms of a national minimum standard, this would be a level of adequacy."

The same sort of mathematics apply to the crime compensation scheme announced at the same time.

The federal government offers five cents per person to provinces establishing a fund for the compensation of victims of violent crime. While Ontario would get $381,000 towards its own compensation plan—which paid out about $800,000 last year—the smallest province, Prince Edward Island, would get only $5,560 to award its victims or persons injured, mentally or physically, in acts of violent crime ranging from murder to indecent assault. The money would go to the victim's dependants if he died.

Compensation rates are to be set by the provinces, which agree they may not establish a plan that would have the federal treasury paying for more than 20 per cent.

Mr. Lang said the provincial justice departments will have great freedom in designing their legal aid plans. The two basic requirements are that aid be available for those in need and that persons accused of crimes carrying the death penalty or 10 years imprisonment be allowed to choose their own lawyer.

Persons in need are defined as those who would have to go into "substantial debt or would be forced to sell modest necessary assets" to pay for their own counsel.

Rural Postmasters Are Acting Tough

OTTAWA (CP) — The dedicated and unassuming rural postmaster, who as the sole federal representative in many communities provided services beyond the call of duty to the public, is becoming more militant.

This is the message the leaders of the 8,000-member Canadian Postmasters' Association hope to bring home to the federal treasury board as they begin negotiations this week for a new working contract. The old one expires Sept. 30.

For the first time since collective bargaining was introduced into the public service in 1967, the union has opted for the conciliation-strike route instead of voluntary binding arbitration.

Under federal law, public service unions can choose either arbitration or conciliation and the right to strike in their attempts to reach contracts.

The change of heart among rural and small town postmasters was brought home earlier this year when 83 per cent of the membership voted for the conciliation route. Union President D. A. Blackie says the members were tired of seeing the wages of other postal workers draw away from their own pay levels.

China Refuses Bangladesh Seat

First Veto Cast

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Blocked by a Chinese veto of its application for UN membership, Bangladesh will attempt at the General Assembly debate this fall to revive its bid for admission.

China, in an anticipated action Friday night, cast the sole negative vote in the Security Council to prevent admission of Bangladesh.

Although 71 of the 15-member nations voted for the immediate entry of the former eastern region of Pakistan, a veto by one of the five permanent council members was sufficient to nullify the majority vote.

Bangladesh representatives said they would press in the three-month assembly session beginning Sept. 19 for the moral backing of the organization's 132 members.

The assembly cannot reverse a council decision. But an overwhelming expression of support in the assembly for Bangladesh's membership could result in a recommendation that the Security Council reconsider the matter.

Ambassador Huang Hua of China, defending his delegation's first use of the veto told the council that since joining the United Nations last October China had decided "it must act according to its principles."

The principles at stake, Huang maintained, were those involving compliance with assembly and council resolutions of last December. Adopted following the India-Pakistan war, they called for withdrawal of troops and repatriation of prisoners of war.

Huang said India and Bangladesh detained 90,000 POWs, 10,000 of them civilian detainees. He also charged that Indian troops were still in Bangladesh.

Army Is Running Munich Olympics

MUNICH (CP-AP) — A million visitors are expected to pass through the expansive Olympic Games site during the 15 days of competition starting Sunday. Tickets are sold out for most events.

In what amounts to a major military manoeuvre, some 25,000 members of the West German armed forces are helping run the mammoth operation.

Willie Daume, President of the West German Olympic Organizing Committee, says without the help of the nearly two divisions of troops it would be impossible to put on the games.

Soldiers are working as everything from drivers to medical orderlies, bone boys, musicians, plumbers, printers, communication experts and interpreters.

The army has set up 29 kitchens staffed by 1,433 men capable of feeding 40,000 persons.

The military also has supplied some 40,000 beds for athletes and journalists.

The troops have built 12 bridges, 12 large parking lots and 43 guest houses at the Olympic site.

The soldiers, many of whom wear their hair nearly shoulder length in the style of the modern German army, are under orders to be on their best behavior.

As for the troops themselves, there are complaints about long hours, high prices in Munich and the loss of their weekends.

Auto-bomb Kills Two Militiamen

BELFAST (AP) — A bomb planted in an abandoned car killed two militiamen, two men were found dead, and three persons were shot and wounded in a riot against British troops today, authorities reported.

The two militiamen, members of the volunteer Ulster Defence Regiment, were part of a four-man patrol investigating the car when it blew up near Enniskillen, 85 miles southwest of Belfast. A second explosion in the Enniskillen area slightly wounded 13 soldiers and wrecked an army truck.

The bullet-riddled body of the man was found in the Roman Catholic Old Park section of Belfast. Later the body of another man, dead from multiple bullet wounds, was found in an area between the Protestant Shankill Road area and the Catholic Crumlin Road district.

Seek to Prosecute

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Labor Relations Board has reserved judgment on an application by striking employees of Dare Foods Ltd., in Kitchener, for permission to prosecute the company under the Labor Relations Act. The International Union of, United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Soft Drink and Distillery Workers of America claims the company has tried to intimidate employees in an attempt to break the strike.

Hate Literature Said Issued By Gaglardi

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — Liberal Leader David Anderson and Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi clashed Friday over what Mr. Anderson said was hate literature being distributed by Mr. Gaglardi's campaign office.

Mr. Anderson said on a Kamloops open-line radio show that literature handed out in Mr. Gaglardi's office was "gutter sniping, dishonest, disreputable and absurd."

The moderator of the program, Bob Epley, said pamphlets he was given at Mr. Gaglardi's campaign office included a reprint from American opinion magazine entitled "Canada: How the Communists took over." The article referred to Prime Minister Trudeau as a man who admires "Mao Tse-tung and said the prime minister views federalism as "a tool with which to impose communism on Canada." The pamphlet also referred to former prime minister Lester Pearson as "Red Mike."

The literature also included material from the Canadian Intelligence Service, which was accused of disrupting hate literature during the 1968 federal campaign.

Mr. Gaglardi telephoned the radio station while Mr. Anderson and Kamloops Liberal candidate Bill Mercer were being interviewed and said he knew nothing about the pamphlets.

Irish Fleeing Bleeding Land

BELFAST (Reuter) — The killing and violence in Northern Ireland is resulting in more emigration than at any time since the Great Potato Famine of the 1840s.

The sound of gunfire in the streets, bombings and murders are driving young families away in droves, mostly to Canada and Australia. More than a century ago, they headed to the United States to escape starvation.

Walter Jennings, the immigration adviser of the Canadian high commission, said 330 persons applied to his office to emigrate to Canada in July. And he believes the figure for August could be much higher.

In April, May and June the number of applications totalled 1,217 doubled the figure for the same period last year.

Jennings said the people applying to emigrate are highly qualified.

"These are the kind of people Northern Ireland cannot afford to lose. Not only the quality, but the number of applicants continues to increase."

Finding Jobs for Asians Will Prove Difficult Task

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's decision to admit several thousand Uganda Allans met with support from economists, labor leaders and social workers here Friday but there were warnings that it will be difficult to find jobs for all of them.

"We can't just sit back and do nothing," said David Archer, president of the Ontario Federation of Labor. "The government's decision is defensible on humanitarian grounds."

"Obviously there isn't enough work for people already here. But then not every immigrant becomes an unemployed person. I understand these people are fairly well trained and they may well be an asset to Canada," he said.

Ottawa sources said Thursday the government expects to admit 3,000 to 5,000 Asians who are among the 50,000 being forced out of Uganda because Uganda President Idi Amin says they are "sabotaging the Ugandan economy."

In Toronto, economist E. P. Neufeld of the University of Toronto said it is important for Canadians to realize "that some kind of immigrants are not going to be absorbed very quickly."

He said many will have experience in operating stores and businesses but "the small businessman is not going to get established overnight."

Reuben Baxter, director of the Canadian Council on Social Development, a non-governmental organization, said Canada should be congratulated for its "humanity."

He said Canada as a humanitarian democracy "has no other choice but to open its doors to absorb some of these people."

But he predicted there would be discrimination if the Uganda Asians concentrate in a few localities.

"When they become highly visible in groups, they'll invite the displeasure of other Canadians."

Donald Montgomery, president of the Labor Council of Metro Toronto, said there aren't enough jobs in Canada now and the government will have to give them special aid.

"I'm not opposed to that. I just hope they won't be exploited as most immigrants are when they come here."

Cooling Off with the Ducks

Cooling off after a trail ride near Orangeville, Ont., northwest of Toronto, 14-year-old Cathy Bonsel rides her mount, Sorrowful, through a pond usually only inhabited by ducks. The ducks are likely to have more company over the next few days as muggy 80 degree weather continues in souther Ontario.

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth will attend the Olympic Games next week and give a reception for athletes from the British Commonwealth, Buckingham Palace announced today.

Prince Philip and Princess Anne will accompany the Queen. Anne, 22, is an accomplished horsewoman and was a strong contender for the British equestrian team at the Munich Olympics.

CNTU Wants Ballots Spoiled

MONTREAL (CP) — Members of the Confederation of National Trade Unions will be encouraged to spoil their ballots in the next federal election by scribbling an "insult" to Prime Minister Trudeau, a union executive said Friday.

Fernand Foisey, secretary of the Montreal central council of the CNTU, said at a news conference people in the labor movement will be asked to use phrases such as fuddle-duddle.

Mr. Foisey said the scribbling of insults on ballots will be all the CNTU, which has about 200,000 members, plans to do in the next election "because we have already decided not to concern ourselves with the federal structures anymore."

"We just want to pay Trudeau back for some of the insults he has fired at us."

Earlier this month, Parti Quebecois leader Rene Levesque said his party would encourage voters to spoil ballots in the next election.

Stranded Tourists Leave for France

MONTREAL (CP) — More than 100 European tourists, stranded here for two days because of an air charter mixup that set off a demonstration outside the offices of a local travel service, left for France Friday night.

The demonstration began Thursday when about 100 of more than 500 members of the Association of European Families, scheduled to leave Wednesday for Geneva, and the Canada Club Yverdon, expected to go to Zurich Thursday, protested the flight cancellations outside the office of Interservice Europe Ltd.

A spokesman for Air France said the airline had arranged to fly stranded French passengers to Paris Friday night on a special flight at a cost of $120 by order of the French government and would carry about 300 persons, he said.

Cancellation of the charter flights had caused problems for groups of Canadians in Europe. Both Swiss flights were to return to Canada with Canadian tourists.

In Zurich, about 40 tourists, mostly Canadians, were stranded Wednesday after their charter service flight was cancelled. Another 150 Canadians were camping out at the Paris office of Interservice and more were stranded in Brussels and Geneva.

In Ottawa, the Canadian transportation commission announced it was trying to arrange return flights for charter passengers stranded in Europe. It would try to restore the original arrangements or make Air Canada aircraft available to fly during the weekend or on Monday.

Canadian embassies abroad would be asked to help organize the return trips.

Alex Bordet, owner of Interservice said Thursday the flights were cancelled after his charter Balair Ltd., a Swiss-based charter airline, $36,000— the balance due for the Zurich-to-Montreal - flight. Balair refused the money.

Otto Gerwasch, managing director of Balair, said Interservice owed money for two previous flights.

"We gave them to last Monday to pay. By Monday at noon we didn't get the money. We got in touch with the government in Ottawa and notified them that we were cancelling the flights due to breach of contract."

Neither man was available for further comment Friday.

Senior Citizen Housing Needed

PICTON (Staff) — A survey of Prince Edward County by the Ontario Housing Corporation, has revealed an effective demand for 66 senior citizen self-contained apartment units in the downtown area of Picton.

The OHC has recommended Immediate development of the needed accommodations since sewer and water services are readily available.

He said Knox-Gelatin is still connected to the system, for minor water requirements and for fire system reserves.

Representatives of the OHC met with county council in May and decided to conduct a second survey of senior citizen housing needs since the initial one omitted Hillier response, apparently because of confusion in its presentation.

A publicity campaign for the new survey was begun in June and cliipout advertisements were inserted in local newspapers. Pamphlets also were held in Picton, Amelia burg and Wellington. The OHC program and location factors were explained to interested senior citizens.

An OHC report stated "the consensus of the meetings appeared to be an almost unanimous preference for self-contained apartments, rather than hostel units and an equally strong preference on the part of those willing to live at Picton for a downtown site, rather than a county home location."

The majority of a group of 45 senior citizens attending the OHC meeting at Wellington, favored OHC developments in the village as soon as the construction of sewer facilities permits it. The OHC already has constructed 18 senior citizen units in the county, and of its latest recommendation for 66 extra units is implemented there will be a total of 82 OHC senior citizen units in Prince Edward.

Water Bill Goes On

TRENTON (Staff) — A firm that no longer operates in Trenton, will still be required to pay for water it probably will never have a chance to use.

Knox-Gelatin, which closed down its Trenton operation June 30, has requested the Public Utilities Commission waive its penalty clause which requires the firm pay 75 per cent of its base bill for each month up until December.

The practice employed by Trenton, is based on a peak month billing system. A firm which uses over 100,000 gallons in one month, will pay for this amount.

As long as the company does not exceed this 100,000 gallon mark, it will be required to pay for only 75 per cent of this original gallonage. Once the six-month period ends, they pay for only that amount of water actually used.

Should the firm go over the original gallonage used in its peak month — the 100,000 gallons in this case . . . the peak is re-established at the new figure, and a new five - month period goes into effect.

PUC chairman Charles Hilton explained this charge is made because the utilities commission must maintain a quota of water, plus pumps and lines necessary to move it.

"There is a terrific capital expenditure by ratepayers which has to be maintained," he told fellow commissioners. "We, as a public utilities commission, have to have a certain amount of water in reserve and the fact that we provide service is what ratepayers are paying for.

"We can't begin, as a corporation, to charge just for what they use. It costs a lot more to maintain a system for commercial users than for domestic users."

Mr. Hilton said a company that goes out of business shouldn't expect to receive different treatment than one still operating. "They asked for this system originally," he noted.

Apple Co-op Optimistic

Twenty apple growers in the Brighton, Northumberland and Trenton Ridge county areas marketed more than 100,000 bushels of apples last year.

And they're looking forward to a better crop this year, with the quality higher and the quantity about the same.

Rains that hit the district during last year's picking season lowered the keeping quality of the fruit, said a spokesman for the Quinte Fruit Growers Ltd.

The apple growers' co-operative is finding new markets to replace the drop in apples market lost five or six years ago.

"We received only a token order last year, for about 10,000 bushels," said the spokesman. "Since the Common Market decision in Europe, Britain is getting her apples from France."

But the fruit growers are looking to the Caribbean Islands for further markets. Local growers also ship to western Canada and to the United States.

"The western market goes up and down like a yo-yo, depending on the crop out there and the prices," said the spokesman.

Developer Will Pay

TRENTON (Staff) — Dufferin Developments Ltd. have been faced with an $11,200 expenditure for their new subdivision in the Southwest portion of Trenton, south of Highway 2.

At Thursday's meeting of Public Utilities Commission, commissioners were asked to approve the plan of subdivision, forwarded to them as a formality by town council.

The PUC agreed, however, Dufferin Developments to pay $200 for each of their 56 lots in the subdivision, for installation of underground electrical services.

PUC manager Douglas Manley told The Intelligencer the PUC at one time paid for overhead electric systems. However, for what he termed "esthetic" purposes, the PUC now demands underground services. Dufferin's new development is the third housing subdivision faced with this type of expense.

Pool Filling Service Up

TRENTON (Staff) — Residents or contractors who pay the Trenton Public Utilities Commission for their swimming pools, are now faced with an added expense of $10 for the job.

Utilities commissioners voted to add an extra $10 fee to help pay for wear and tear on hose.

Until now, the fee was $20 for filling the pool, plus between $15 and $20 for labor costs.

Commission chairman Charles Hilton expressed concern over use of PUC hose for such jobs, and explained there was no adequate way of draining them after use. He also drew attention to the fact that the hose was constantly being run over by cars when connected to hydrants.

Mayor Duncan McDonald suggested Fire Chief Cecil Ellis be contacted to see if the fire hall tower could be used to dry the hose. Also, he said, Chief Ellis would be in a good position to comment on damage done by motorists.

He amended the motion to collect an extra $10, "as long as we collect it" to replace hose when needed.

A Place to Stand for Workers to Lay Sewer

Each day, 10 trucks operate a shuttle service between Point Anne and the Moira River, carrying their payload of dirt to form a temporary road down the river's eastern bank. Work crews will later dig through the makeshift road and down into the rocky river

Bears Sighted

MADOC (Special) — Wild life is still holding its own along Highway 7.

Mrs. Margaret Derry of Hudson reports sighting a bear and three cubs on the highway last week. Accompanied by her family, Mrs. Derry was returning from Mosher's Restaurant on the Black River Road, when, as they turned on to the highway, they saw the four bears on the north shoulder.

The bears crossed the road, and Mrs. Derry said she was amazed at the speed with which the animals bounded across the highway before approaching cars from the west came around the bend.

bed to lay a four-foot-diameter sewer line. Bill Jeffreys — operating the earth mover — said "because the river is about five feet higher than normal, the road had to be built to provide a workplatform for crews. Once the sewer line is in place and covered, the 10 trucks will return to shuttle the dirt back out of the river."

Man's 'Kindness' Bear's Worst Enemy

One of his jobs each summer is to handle complaints about foraging bears lured by some of the more than 1,000 campers who use the park each year.

Algonquin, Ontario's largest provincial park with an area of 2,000 square miles, is rugged wilderness for the most part with individual campsites backed out of the bush.

But Algonquin's location — 160 miles north of Toronto and 125 miles west of Ottawa — makes it an ideal camping spot for Canadian and U.S. tourists and this is where Tom Regan's summer headache begins.

Each time he answers a bear complaint, feeds a camper, or knows he is going to end up with somebody getting angry, no matter what course of action he takes.

Some campers are terrified at the sight of a bear and insist it should be killed. Others are animal lovers and are not as vehement in their demands that the bear be destroyed.

The situation in Algonquin is not different than in most areas of Northern Ontario where berry crops, especially blueberries, have failed and bears have had to look for alternate sources of food.

There is no count of how many have had to be destroyed in the province but the animals have been shot throughout the park boundary. They have become a danger, especially to curious children.

Regan has four avenues open to him: He can bring in a live trap and try to relocate the animal into it so that it can be transported out of the area or shoot the animal a specially designed dart-gun-like apparatus containing a drug that he can hit it with, a tranquilizer dart, or he can kill it with the rifle he carries.

Unfortunately, the animal's death warrant has almost certainly been signed once the complaint is turned over to the conservation officer — and ironically it is the animal lover who is to blame.

"Once the bear gets a taste of the food campers have with them, it's impossible to get him back to living on the food he eats in the wild," Regan said in an interview. "Why should he spend all day trying to get his fill of berries when there's an unlimited supply of nourishing food at the campsites?

"The same people who were feeding the bear in the afternoon and who wouldn't bear of us shooting it are the ones who call us out at 3 a.m. when the bear has come back for another meal," said Regan. "They've changed their minds in a hurry and want us to kill it right then — in the dark."

The people who get upset when a bear destroys their tent — something they have had to do many times in the past — usually fail to realize the drawbacks of the three other possibilities, Tom said.

With the tranquilizer dart, it takes up to 20 minutes for the bear to go to sleep. Then the Anectine solution to take effect and an angered bear can do a lot of harm in those minutes.

The powdered drug is ineffective as well because it takes about 30 minutes to knock out the bear and by then he can be several miles away or sleeping it off in dense undergrowth where it is impossible to spot him.

And every time Tom brings the live-trap into a camping area, a flock of curious campers crowds around it, poking their heads inside and risking being bitten. The bear by this time is cooped up in the open-ended box and is frightened by a cable attached to a lanyard — the tripping mechanism.

The officers have been successful in live-trapping only 15 bears this season and all of caught and in most cases were taken away from most of the curious campers.

And so, because people will not heed the warnings posted throughout the park about not feeding the bears and about keeping all their food locked in the trunk of their car overnight, the bear is condemned to death.

What bothers Tom Regan every time he has to kill a bear to get rid of a "nuisance" bear is that the animal could be allowed to live a full 20 years in the park only a very small area of Algonquin is opened to hunters during bear season — if only people would co-operate.

"Man and bear can live happily side by side in the park without making contact," said Regan. "But there is no way they can become friends. The kindest thing you can do for the bear is to leave him alone."

Prince Edward Board Seeks Participation

BLOOMFIELD (Staff)—The Prince Edward County board of education has requested "serious consideration" for inclusion in a pilot project for an educational resource allocation system under development by a government task force.

He said an educational resource allocation system "is a highly structured means by which a school system can improve the quality of its education program."

This improvement is reached as a greater understanding of community needs is developed and the system is examined in relation to meeting them.

"The system will require a school division to recognize its role in the community, to develop concrete statements of planned accomplishments, then apply the available resources to attain the stated goals and objectives," said Mr. Lawless.

He stressed emphasis on analysis and evaluation allows the school system a better understanding of its goals and enables it to manage its affairs more effectively.

The education resources allocation system outlined by the task force director includes goal setting, objective establishment, programming, program structure and analysis, budgeting and evaluation.

This program was developed to direct resources in "the most efficient and effective manner possible" and emphasizes the optimum uses of all resources.

The need for this optimum use is heightened, according to Mr. Lawless, by a period of changing priorities and "real competition for available resources."

He noted economic growth has been more the product of inflation than of increased productivity. Consequently a smaller base for the support of expanded or new programs has resulted.

"A shift in public emphasis to greater support of health and welfare services and environmental conservation and control has created new competition for available resources. Also, the public now questions the validity and relevance of some educational programs.

Mr. Lawless said his task force has four main objectives, among them a goal to develop a resource allocation system encompassing planning, programming and evaluation by 1975.

Preparation of a guidebook for use by the entire school system also is an aim.

Development of an accounting and data system with sufficient flexibility for a computer or manual system was mentioned.

The task force, in addition, hopes to work with school boards for the next four to five years to assist with the development and implementation of a resource allocation system.

Mr. Lawless remarked the task force hopes to work with a minimum of seven boards in pilot projects to gain ideas of possible problems.

In the summer of 1973 additional manual probably will be developed allowing schools not in the pilot project to begin the program with assistance.

By the end of October, 1972 the task force expects to have 10 to 12 pilot projects under way.

Mr. Lawless said the public must be informed steadily of the program's efforts and he stressed the need for "community input."

He suggested the greatest difficulty in the project perhaps will be in developing the attitudes needed to make it a success.

He said the system will not achieve what it should if it is applied only at the level of board and administration. It must "permeate the school system."

In a question period following Mr. Lawless' remarks, trustee Edward Rutter said he hoped the Prince Edward board would receive "serious consideration" for the pilot project.

Board chairman James Plomer said more should be undertaken for the taxpayers' education dollar under the proposed program.

Staff Reassigned

BLOOMFIELD (Staff) — A teacher exchange between Prince Edward Collegiate Institute and Queen Elizabeth school has been announced this year by the Prince Edward board of education as a step in examining the feasibility of an integrated kindergarten - to - grade - 13 teaching program.

Major staff changes effective September 1 for the 1972-73 school year include the transfer of PECI vice principal Douglas Trumble to Queen Elizabeth elementary school as its principal.

George Elson, a PECI department head has been named coordinator of English from grades five to 13 at both PECI and Queen Elizabeth school.

Edward Brown will act as coordinator of science from grades five to 13 in the two schools.

At a board meeting last night it was announced Mr. Trumble and his new teaching team have been given the responsibility for initiating a modified form of kindergarten - to - grade - 13 integration and presenting to the board with recommendations for future development.

Parental concern regarding the open area teaching concept implemented at Queen Elizabeth school has prompted extensive board research into the program.

A policy statement issued by trustees last night declared, "The board is resolved that it has established that the teaching program at Queen Elizabeth including the open area teaching is competitive with those of all other elementary schools in the county. Pupils graduating from Queen Elizabeth school are adequately competent and progress as well at the secondary level as students from the other schools."

The board has announced its intention, however, to maintain close observation of the Queen Elizabeth teaching program in an effort to isolate and eliminate any possible sources of parent dissatisfaction.

Interest in the open area teaching program at Queen Elizabeth school was heightened when a number of parents requested and received transfers for their children to other county schools.

The question of student transfers was raised at town council and councillors William Lane and Harry Abram this spring attended a meeting of trustees to discuss the reasons for them.

Queen Elizabeth school is the only school in Prince Edward County where an open area concept of teaching is followed through special provision of accommodation.

Present principal of Queen Elizabeth school, Carl Reid, who is experienced in both the educational and financial aspects of school budgeting, will be transferred to the board office in an acting capacity. He will assist the 1972-73 school year assisting the director of education in working with the teaching staff to produce the basic information necessary to allow implementation of program budgeting.

Trinidad Impresses Teacher

A separate school teacher with the Belleville and District Education board has returned from a visit in Trinidad impressed with the industry, ambition and motivation of the islanders.

Basil Arbour, director of orchestrics for the separate school system here spent four weeks this summer working with Trinidad's orchestra conductor, Rev. Terrance Julien.

"It was an experiment, to find out what we can share with them," said Mr. Arbour. "But we learned more than we could ever give them."

The Ontario English Catholic Teachers' Association sponsored the exchange. It paid expenses for Mr. Arbour and his family, but there was no salary involved.

Mr. Arbour spent a week in Trinidad schools where they closed for the summer half a day and worked with 22 teachers.

Each religious body runs its own schools, with government support, resulting in schools under the auspices of the Presbyterian, Anglican and Catholic churches and the Muslims, Buddhists and Hindus.

But children, regardless of their faith, attend the nearest school and Mr. Arbour encountered no religious discrimination.

Trinidad has 161 Catholic schools based, like the others, on the English system.

"The education system is well developed and standards are very high," said Mr. Arbour. "Education is at a premium and everybody wants to achieve."

However, only 25 per cent of the school population gets beyond grade 11, stopped by the hurdle of stiff examinations at that level.

"Although the schools are overcrowded and lack the materials we have, the children are happy and open and standards are high," Mr. Arbour said.

Hydrants Hidden

TRENTON (Staff) — The town of Trenton recently found six of their hydrants in awkward positions. One was hidden by a hedge. Another was too close to a wall. Four were too low for servicing.

The problem of the hydrants was referred to the Public Utilities Commission by town council. The PUC fined two of the hydrants, and is now faced with the problem of the remaining four.

The utilities commission decided Thursday to return the problem to council, request they ask the property owner to move his hedge. The remaining three hydrants are located on land in the Sidor Subdivision, and the PUC refuses to take responsibility for them.

They claim the hydrants are not up to their standards and past attempts to have Wasil Sidor rectify the situation, have met with no response. PUC manager Douglas Monlow told commissioners a letter concerning hydrants, which dates back to 1967, met with no action.

Morse Robb: Vision For the Blind ?

Morse Robb Gets Patent For TV Device for Blind

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Yesterday's mail brought good news for Morse Robb.

He was jubilant — and with good reason.

With scientific precision, the Belleville area inventor has been working across a threshold he believes will be an early breakthrough in aiding the totally blind.

Mr. Robb is certain his electronic development — a miniature television system which projects images onto the skin of blind persons — should be on the market in two years' time.

The economy of its design may be measured by its price — key elements in its acceptance, he indicates.

He has been applying for U.S. and Canadian patents and yesterday's letter was a significant marker on the years-long research path: Confirmation from U.S. authorities granting all his patent claims.

"I never expected it so soon, so quickly," he said happily, before returning to work on the intricacies of what he calls the Robb Viewscope.

The device is packaged in a headband and will weigh less than a pound, claims Mr. Robb. It will enable persons who are totally blind to distinguish shapes, movements and discern daylight from darkness.

Its practicality is in its miniaturization. The result of years of lone research by Mr. Robb at his Trent Road home on the Bay of Quinte shoreline west of Belleville is even wrapped one design after it had been patented in 1968 because he believed it too unwieldy.

There have been other developments since that hour which make him optimistic of its commercial production.

The first three working models of the device are finished in another year.

Then: "I think in two years it'll be on the market in the first small way."

After that, hopefully, the device will be in mass production.

Coincidentally, his project is similar to research in the United States where two Californian scientists have been working on the same science principles.

The system under development in the U.S. uses a television camera mounted on eyeglass frames. The camera is connected through a vest-worn battery network to a shield of electrodes taped to the stomach, which traces camera-activated impulses on the skin.

One of its developers, Dr. Carter C. Collins, says a blind person using the system can learn to read the alphabet in a few dozen hours. He says the units might eventually be available for private use at a cost of about $5,000.

By contrast Mr. Robb's system mounts camera, power pack and invisible shield in a single unit across the forehead. The camera would be focussed by a hand-held palmsize adjuster.

If marketed, Mr. Robb estimates his system would sell at first from $500-$900. Demand should eventually lower the price to around $400.

As yet, Mr. Robb doubts if any device has been invented that will enable the blind to read normal-size print. What may be discerned are enlarged letters printed on a card. But system defining fine details is "a good way off."

And today, the blind already receive much of their information by audio processes, he says.

However, he's certain the Viewscope will expand the potential of blind people and expand their work opportunities.

"They'll be able to do lots of jobs the blind cannot do today. No question of it," predicts Mr. Robb.

Inspiration for the system dates from World War II when Mr. Robb — whose first major invention was an electronic organ in the 1930s — was working on field gun production in Montreal.

He taught blind persons special hand - weaving as part of the production process. In 1963 his interest in producing a substitute vision device for the blind was revived in a conversation about use of photocells in machine operations.

Intensive research followed. Recently Mr. Robb has been joined in his work by Belleville electronics expert Robert Sands.

Mr. Robb's inventiveness dates from his teens. When he was 14 he proposed a project seeking torpedo to a British government war inventions department.

In 1937 he first publicly demonstrated an electronic organ. It went into production in 1938.

Marine Museum Grant Sought

PICTON (Staff) — The South Marysburg marine society has petitioned Prince Edward County Council for a grant to complete the interior of a marine museum now under construction at South Bay.

Allan Railey, chairman of the society, said the marine museum will offer many benefits for the entire county and remarked that more than 2,500 persons visited the marine's park last summer.

An annual mariners' service held at South Bay United Church drew a crowd of approximately 500 persons interested in Prince Edward's marine history.

Mr. Railey said completion of the museum's interior would cost from $4,000 to $5,000 so that it will be a credit to the county and serve its full purpose."

The shell for the museum now is under construction at the mariners' park and the new cement block building planned will cost an estimated $5,000.

Funds for the museum's shell were raised by the marine society in co-operation with South Marysburg township council.

County warden Ross Benway said Tuesday night that the marine society's request for a grant would be referred to the finance committee for consideration.

New Batawa

House Floor Area Contentious Issue

BATAWA (Staff) — Owners of homes in New Batawa and prospective owners told a zoning meeting Monday that a minimum floor area for homes in the community should be increased "or we could have the same shacks here we have now."

Gathered to discuss a new zoning bylaw for a section of the community, many attending pressed for an increase in floor space from 850 to 1,000 sq. ft.

Planner Frank Stolkamm of the Quinte Planning Board told the audience of 70 at the community centre decision to cut the required living area of homes by 150 sq. ft. had followed a request from Bata Industries.

Stolkmans said the argument for reducing the square footage was that it would not deter senior citizens from building in a redeveloped Batawa. He said senior citizens would not necessarily require 1,000 sq. ft. or three bedrooms.

"I do not want an 850 sq. ft. home next to mine," said the man who has built and built a new home in the redevelopment area. .

He was reminded by the panel that up until now there has been no protection except on the townsite and Bata Industries could have built any kind of structure next to him.

One man charged the company with breach of faith, saying Bata had led prospective home owners to believe 1,000 sq. ft. would be a minimum.

"Faith has been broken," he said, adding he had made an agreement with the firm to build a 1,000 sq. ft. dwelling.

No decision was taken on the floor area but trustee Jack Bush of Sidney advised the assembly here "if the people concerned want it changed, it can be changed." Prospective buyers have been told to inform Bata Industries of their wishes.

Coming to grips with a zoning of new Batawa brought a remarked that those here that "the company give assurance this will be an R1 residential area."

Moreover, the gathering expressed displeasure with a non-conforming use provision in the new zoning bylaw that would permit existing older homes to stay despite the fact they would not comply with new zoning regulations.

John Harris, Bata's community development officer, assured the owners and renters-to-be that this provision was not intended as a vehicle for keeping small older residences of the area standing.

He said "all these houses (about 70) will be demolished before the lots are sold" assures for new residences. He added all new services will be installed for the area of New Batawa.

Garage May Be Fire Hall

STIRLING (Special) — Stirling village council has made an offer to purchase the original premises of Wells Pord—Mercury Sales Ltd. located on the north side of Front Street for new premises for a fire hall for the community.

The offer has been accepted, but as there are several legal aspects to be completed no details of the offer can be revealed.

Stirling has been contemplating replacing the existing fire hall facilities on Mill Street for some time. Further emphasis was placed on this move in the recent survey of fire fighting facilities by the Ontario Fire Marshal. One of the leading recommendations was for a new hall.

Council has been considering whether it would be proper to buy some existing property, or try and build what was needed. Recent letters Anderson said that the present accommodation will be considerable saving to the taxpayers over building new premises.

Wells Ford Sales Ltd., under the proprietorship of Harold Wells and Ted Mercury are joined by his son Allan, has been in business in Stirling for about 40 years. About five years ago they built new showroom facilities across the highway from the garage where service work is done. For some time they have been planning to build additional facilities to put the service department at the showroom.

Widely-Travelled

Members of the priesthood are among the most travelled and dedicated of citizens, as witness that news story the other day about Father C. M. Van der Heyden who has taken over as the priest in charge of St. Vincent de Paul parish in Deseronto.

Father Van der Heyden spent 39 years as a missionary among the Hindu population of India, a term which we would certainly expect to culminate in retirement. Instead he comes to Deseronto from his native Holland where he has just celebrated 40 years as a priest.

Intensely interesting also is the career of the man he succeeds, Father C. Snoeren who was ordained in London, England, in 1952, has taught in seminaries in England, Ireland and Holland and for nearly seven years worked as a missionary among the Maoris of New Zealand.

This brings us to an interesting fact about the Maoris. Always on a fairly equal footing with the pakehas (whites) in New Zealanders' there is now an increasing incidence of inter-marriage while educational opportunities for young Maoris are also on the upgrade.

A recent article in The Auckland Star said that a young Maori elite is rising up through educational institutions. Young Maoris are now found in law, medicine, the Church and other fields which until recently were the domain of the whites.

"There has been a spectacular advance in the education of Maori children in the past decade" the article points out. "The number in secondary schools has doubled and this, in turn, is expected to double again by the end of the 70s."

Similarly more are attending university and the young people are having more to say about the affairs of the country which have a direct bearing on their race.

No doubt Father Snoeren would notice a difference if he were "down under" now. Incidentally, he will be returning to Deseronto, to take up further missionary duties, after a visit to his native Holland.

Asians for Canada

Canada's decision to absorb some of the Asians being expelled from Uganda, thus easing the pressure on Britain, is a commendable gesture and one which is eloquent of this country's basic concern for the welfare of peoples of all races.

The Trudeau government's action should also serve as a salutary lesson to Uganda's President Amin and to other African nations, whether white or black dominated, which incline toward racist policies.

At the same time we as a people need not be too smug on this score. It is idle to pretend that while we have a Bill of Rights and a measure of tolerance for the coloured races does not exist. We were reading for instance of East Indians in British Columbia who are disliked for their industrousness and the prosperity that this brings to them. It is the same with the Asians in Uganda. They are the merchants and professional people of the country, but in the eyes of President Amin they are aliens and profiteers.

Yet Canada needs more people and as we grow we will shed a little more our somewhat narrow, parochial outlook. We are a great deal more cosmopolitan and tolerant than we were in the period of the open-gling one and the absorption of the Asians will carry it farther along this desirable path.

In Belleville we have many new arrivals, from Europe as well as other parts of the world and representing many races. They are a distinct asset to our community and it is noticeable that they seem happy in our midst. It may well be that some of the Asians will come here too and this will further enhance the international character of our population.

Bridge Link

Speaking of bridges as we do from time to time, here is something the Swedes have done. They have constructed a 10-mile (said to be Europe's longest) link connecting the island of Oland in the Baltic with the mainland. It will be open for traffic from October 1, just in time for the Swedish winter which matches our own.

Perhaps this effort by the Swedes will give the Ontario government some ideas relative to the situation across the Bay of Quinte, although having almost completed the $250,000 resurfacing program on the existing causeway it is clear that it is going to have to suffice for a while.

There is also that plan mentioned a while back about linking the Ontario and New York shorelines and the intervening islands. As of now it seems to be little more than a pipe dream.

Possible Election Ploy

Postal Strike Could Be Chance For P. M. To Play Strongman

By RICHARD JACKSON
from The Intelligencer's
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The axe is back around Parliament Hill for far more than enough years and you develop a certain sensitivity in your bones.

And now, unless it is a touch of the old rheumatic bones, are telling you that the government has something extraordinary to the works.

Something that perhaps something entirely new.

For the election whether it comes this fall or 'even next spring.

And whatever it is. Prime Minister Trudeau is the heart and soul of it.

Look at it this way.

The government, in these months and weeks running up to an election, is just not in good shape.

Unemployment remains stubbornly high, and nothing the government can do, even in the line of subsidizing thousands of neo-jobs in no-work projects costing hundreds of millions of dollars, seems able to bring it down.

The cost of living, taking off like a new . style quick - lift Sioi aircraft, is taking out of sight, with even the crop-ruining bad weather now beginning, conspiring against the government.

The civil service, arrogantly ignoring the Prime Minister's threat to cut it back and teach it manners properly responsive to the taxpayers, puffs ever up in pride and power. And the great-and growing faceless bureaucracy tightens its red-tape stranglehold on the levers of government.

The jobless students are sore.

The taxpayers, facing another three percent increase in income tax in the new year, are angry.

Even some of the government's own trusted agents, disillusioned, have been breaking faith, to say nothing of their oath of secrecy, and leaking confidential reports telling of waste, extravagance and a completely careless disregard of the taxpayers' dollar.

So the Liberals, ever the practical politicians, weighing all the negative factors, find the prevailing situation winning in national confidence.

What to do?

Well, remember when the blazing Trudeau sun was at its apogee, and the country stood dazzled by its very brilliance?

Trudeau the Strongman who declared a national emergency, proclaimed the War Measures Act and called out the Armed Forces.

At no time — before or since — did he stand so tall and sun-crowned.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, by cruel comparative contrast, was a nobody going nowhere.

And who was Tommy Douglas? Only the respected leader of the New Democrats, moving over for David Lewis.

There was only — Pierre Trudeau. National hero.

And the Liberals will never forget it and how astoundingly popular he was.

But that was October 1970

And this is late August 1972.

So what can Pierre Trudeau do now to recapture the old magic

Answer: He can — and will — be presented as a Man of Muscle. The Great Leader of Decision. The Only One — and no possible alternatives in sight — with the guts to do what must be done.

But what is that?

Wage and price control to saddle and bridle galloping inflation. The polls are for it. Popular move.

Tough measures to bring the rampaging unions into line. The public opinion surveys say people are long since sick of strikes, especially in the municipal, provincial and federal service.

And conveniently, the strike-happy postal workers could be getting set to strike. Pierre Trudeau just the opportunity he may be looking for.

The postal workers are again talking strike — It is almost an annual exercise, and it has been, at times, more than just a threat — this very fall.

If the election is called and the Post Office strikes, with political, and all other — it still stopped, what a stroke of luck for a Strongman.

Remember Trudeau is an excellent politician, a polished actor with a great sense of drama.

VD Clinic in Hospital

From The Brockville
Recorder and Times

The recently established VD treatment clinic at Brockville is averaging 10 new patients a week, the board of the Leeds, Grenville and Lanark district health unit was told Thursday evening.

Dr. G. M. Abdelnour, pathologist at the Brockville General hospital, who is now medical director of the newly formed VD clinic, described its fantastic progress to date.

He was introduced to the board by Dr. Vera Soudek, acting medical officer of health, who explained that the VD clinic is a first aid treatment at the General hospital for venereal disease. However, she felt that this is not enough to solve the problem and wants to go into more depth. While the clinics started several weeks ago because of the patients' needs, she felt that they also really need to have the disease and its implications explained by a public health nurse.

The clinic is open in the emergency department of BGH every evening, six nights a week, from 7 to 9 p.m.

Dr. Abdelnour said it has been found necessary to have a doctor on the spot at the clinic, as there are so many sensitive people with the problem to talk to.

"In many cases we have to reassure them that they haven't got venereal disease — that there is nothing wrong with them. They can't seem to get this same reassurance from nurses and want to talk to a doctor," he said. "We even get calls from Kingston," he said.

The fact that no names or hospital insurance numbers are necessary, is one reason the clinic is so popular with the youngsters, he pointed out.

The doctor thought eventually it would function only two nights a week, but would continue on the nightly basis for a period of time.

Vice-chairman Omar Johnson wondered if there was anything that the health unit could do to help.

Dr. Abdelnour replied that Dr. Soudek had been most cooperative and they were working very closely — "in complete agreement."

Dr. Soudek said she had given the clinic the services of a public health nurse — but it really needs two. She expected that Mrs. Shirley Lyons would be available to help at the VD clinic.

Son of Founder of Apartheid Has Misgivings About Policy

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — The son of the man who gave apartheid to South Africa has misgivings about the results of his father's race-segregation policy.

Rev. D. F. Malan has expressed these doubts from the pulpit of his Nederduitse Gereformeerde Kerk—one of three Calvinist Dutch Reformed denominations which provide theological support for segregation.

His father, Daniel F. Malan, led the Nationalist party to victory in 1948. The word "apartheid" was applied to Malan's rigid separation of the races. Nationalists still hold power, but apartheid now is known as "separate development."

Whatever the name, it's just not fair, says Malan.

He has delivered several sermons condemning suppression and exploitation of non-whites in and out of South Africa as may be doomed unless whites change their ways.

The passages which support the official line on race began sledging at the clergyman. He declined to discuss a session with church elders.

"You can draw your own deductions," he said later, "I am still minister of the church."

His criticism, mild compared with that expressed by some clerics, is significant because it comes from a member of the establishment church. The three Dutch Reformed churches are the religious home of most Afrikaners, the descendants of Boer settlers, who are closely allied to the government. Prime Minister John Vorster's home in Brey, Jacobus D. Vorster, heads one of the three churches.

Malan says he believes the approach of some non-Afrikaner clergymen to the realities of race risks creating unrest congenial to communism. But he warns against the practice of labeling critics of government policy as Communists or unwitting dupes.

"To bear false witness against your neighbor is more sinful than to unwittingly aid your enemy," he said in an interview.

"Of course I am causing unrest myself, but then I appeal to an authority which Afrikaners have to acknowledge. If they reject what I say, then they must reject the Bible."

His father was himself a Dutch Reformed minister before entering politics. The newspaper says: "I can do more as a minister. My father wasn't free. He had to conform to what was wanted by the voters."

Malan graduated as an engineer before switching to the church and served as an unordained minister at a Lutheran church in Cape Town before coming to the pulpit in Johannesburg's Melville section 12 years ago.

We Get What We Want

By The Rev. Gordon C. Smyth

Whom does Jesus, the greatest of teachers, label fortunate people? "Blessed are those who hunger and thirst for righteousness, for they shall be satisfied" (Matthew 5:6). The New Testament repeatedly states this philosophy, which sounds strange to modern ears. It is connected with the view that a person achieves his ambition whereby his hunger is satisfied.

Many people challenge this philosophy. They argue that the opposite is true. Life is a continued striving to get what one fails to get — a hunger that is doomed to remain unsatisfied. But, in the Beatitudes, Jesus confidently asserts, "Ask, and it will be given you; seek, and you will find; knock, and it will be opened to you." Even of hypocrites, he says, "They also receive their reward."

Conduct, that is to say, fulfils its destiny when you somehow, even less sufficiently desired objective is reached. What is really wanted, you obtain. Why does this not appear to be the case? We may not realize what we are actually asking for and what the answer must inevitably be.

We ask, for instance, for money, and we anticipate a reply of happiness. But Jesus chides us. We only get money, which is an entirely different thing, as many a sweepstakes winner finds out. Or we ask for popularity. That is like asking for a soap bubble and expecting to get a brilliant ball. We cannot work for the temporary and obtain the permanent.

If, then, it is true that we are to get what we ask for, the secret of happiness is to want the right things and to want them very much. If we hunger and thirst for false things, we shall get them. Oh yes, we shall get them; and get the unhappiness which comes of this awful disillusionment that we have hungered so we are filled. The secret of life, nor a political party, nor any organization, can satisfy us indefinitely, let alone thrive, on dishonesty and greed. Only what value aims should be in harmony with its public performance. If they are not, discordant sounds eventually come out.

But if we are really hungry for righteousness, if we want to be good (as distinct from pious) as somebody thirsty wants water; if, as Jesus says, our meat and drink is to do God's will as revealed in the Gospels, then that need will be supplied. "He satisfies him who is thirsty," says the Psalmist, "and the hungry he fills with good things."

Not with power or popularity, but with righteousness. The longing soul seeks the best because it wants to attain the best blessedness. If nobody else can convince you, look to Jesus!

Retraction Demanded

Sexual Happiness Called Basic Right

FRIBOURG, Switzerland (AP) — A Roman Catholic theologian who says sexual happiness is a basic human right has been told by his Rome superiors to make a retraction or else lose his chair at the university here.

Prof. Stephanus Pfurtner received this word from the father-general of the Dominican order, Aniceto Fernandez, refusal to comply would result in his losing not only his right to teach at a theological faculty, in addition, he was instructed to submit all his writings and teachings to censorship.

Bishop Pierre Mamie announced that Pfurtner was banned from giving any public lectures or publishing any writing in the Fribourg diocese.

The actions drew no immediate comment from the professor, who came from West Germany and had taught here since 1956. He has a book, Church and Sexuality, coming out soon in Germany.

Church pressure has been mounting since he presented a paper, "Notes on Sexual Ethics" before a small audience in Bern last fall.

In essence, he suggests that the sexuality of a mature individual be controlled by his own conscience and responsibility.

"Society has no right to interfere with the sexual freedom of a mature human as long as this activity does not have any socially damaging effect," says a key sentence.

He proclaims: "All humans have a right to be happy. The right to sexual happiness is a part of this basic human right . . . If sexual behavior prevents lasting happiness, it becomes immoral. If moral rules prevent it they have validity."

Initial reaction from his superiors early this year was an offer to take a sabbatical and to reconsider his "theses." Declined, he was quoted as saying that he felt it was "ethically inadmissable to retract a teaching conviction which I have gained in long work."

Other faculty members supported the idea of a sabbatical and demanded last February that they be heard in any proceedings that might be instituted against him by the Vatican's Congregation of Faith.

Support in the Swiss press has been nearly unanimous for the professor. Reformists have likened the Vatican attitude to its efforts to kill divorce legislation in Italy.

Lutheran Rituals Changed

NEW YORK (AP) — Parts of the traditional marriage ritual terming the husband "head of the wife" and directing her to be submissive to him no longer are required in a new Lutheran marriage service being used in the United States.

Nor does the bride's father "give" her away, implying she lacks the independence of the bridegroom. The custom derived from ancient times when daughters were regarded as possessions and were turned over to the bridegroom for a price.

"We feel that they should be regarded as equal partners in the marriage," says Rev. Eugene L. Brand, head of the Inter-Lutheran commission on worship which drew up the new service.

It omits the usual bridal promises to "honor" and "obey" the husband, leaves the minister pronounce them man and wife as in customary. Instead, they themselves declare that compact.

In principle, this always has been the case, with the minister being only officiating witness to it even though he formally pronounced them wed. Basically, however, it is their own "pledge of faithfulness" to each other that unites them, Dr. Brand noted.

Matching the procedure with the principle, the key part of the new service reads:

Minister: "If it is your intention to share with each other your laughter and tears and all that the years will bring, by your promises, bind yourselves now to each other as husband and wife."

The couple, in turn: "I take you, (name), to be my wife or husband from this day forward, to join with you as we share all that is to come and with the help of God, I promise to be faithful to you as life gives us life together."

The minister: "(Name and name), by their promises before God, and in the presence of this congregation, have made themselves husband and wife. Blessed be the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit, now and forever."

The new ritual, published June 14 and already authorized for trial use in the 3.841 parishes of the Lutheran Church in America, allows a reversal optional phrasings. With limits, it also permits the couple to write their own vows.

Religious Movements Begin Amid Ridicule

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
The Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — From the start, religious movements have begun in the midst of ridicule. In fact, mockery gave many of them their names. And hints of that same process are around today.

It spoke up in the "Jesus freak" label pinned disparagingly on the free-wheeling devotional movement among youths that has spread widely outside the churches, causing raised eyebrows among churchmen.

Historically, the fun-poking at religious movements is hardly an old story. It has marred the origin of many major Christian denominations, which often have been poignantly tagged for a few examples:

The name Methodist was a sarcastic barb aimed at early participants in the movement launched by John Wesley at Oxford University in 1729, involving the strict rules of daily study, worship and service to the poor.

A stymester of the day gibed: "By rule they eat. By rule they drink. Do all things else by rule but think."

Fellow Oxford students expressed their contempt in a variety of nicknames, such as "Bible bigots" and "Methodistical." Actually, Wesley later abandoned the rigid regime, and stressed a "felt experience" of acceptance by God as a free gift.

But the roaring name stuck, to become a badge of honor to some it as their own, even though the "methodical" system'it seeking salvation was dropped at the outset.

A similar case is that of the Society of Friends, commonly called Quakers.

The name, now used in positive sense, first was hurled at them in derision in a period when they were under severest persecution in 17th-century England.

Put on trial before a skeptical magistrate in Derby, their founder, George Fox, told the judge he should "tremble a he word of God." Thereafter, scoffers referred to them as shakers or "Quakers."

They came to use the name themselves.

Baptists, originally calling separatists, got their name from their insistence that converts could be rightly baptized only at the age of reason, instead of in infancy.

Even the early Christians first got appellations in mockery by Greek and Roman pagans, who called them "Atheists" and "Christians." The missionary-apostle, Paul, writes that believers first were called by the name at Antioch. The new faith was thus launched under the early Roman Empire, and faced wide persecution.

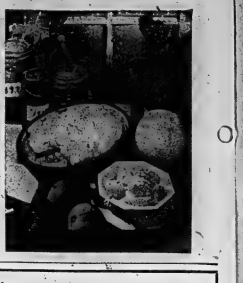
Right Time of Year for Fresh Peach Cobbler

Peaches are truly September gold. Right now the orchards are at their very best. If you can take a ride into the country you'll find it a magnificent sight to see the boughs bending under the strain of luscious golden fruits, just begging to be picked. And picked they are when the fruit is firm and sweet, ready for you to capture their mellow goodness.

Peaches and dairy products have had a long and happy association. Whoever first coined the expression, "They go together like peaches and cream" knew what he was talking about. Old-Fashioned Peach Cobbler is a good example. No one's baking powder biscuit could rival Grandma's but when she baked them atop orchard-ripe peach slices and served them warm from the oven with dairy fresh cream — well the results were indescribably delicious!



Why not recapture this experience in your own kitchen! It's easy this time of year. Thicken sliced fresh peaches and spice them lightly with cinnamon and cloves. Bring sparingly of biscuit batter on the hot fruit and bake till a golden brown. Keeping the fruit hot means the biscuits will be light and tender and the doughy layer forming on the bottom. Take the cobbler warm from the oven and generously pour cream (spiked with brandy if you like) over individual servings.

You can use 10 per cent cream, frequently known as cereal or coffee cream, or 18 per cent cream often referred to as table cream. Either way you can't beat the taste of real cream here.

OLD - FASHIONED PEACH COBBLER
(Makes 6-8 Servings)

1 cup lightly-packed brown sugar
4 tsps. cornstarch
6 cups sliced fresh peaches
3 whole cloves
1 cinnamon stick
1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 tbsps. granulated sugar
2¼ tsps. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
1-3 cup chilled butter
1 tsp. grated lemon rind
¾ cup milk
2 tbsps. brandy (optional)
½ pint (1¼ cups) light cream

Preheat oven to 400 degrees Fah. In a saucepan combine brown sugar and cornstarch; stir in peaches, cloves and cinnamon stick. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until smoothly thickened, clear and mixture comes to the boil. Cover and continue to cook over low heat 5 min. longer, stirring occasionally. Remove spices. Cover and keep warm. Sift together flour, granulated sugar, baking powder and salt. Cut butter in finely. Add lemon rind and milk; mix lightly with a fork until just combined. Bring fruit mixture up to the boil and pour into a 2-qt. shallow baking dish. Drop tablespoons of batter onto fruit mixture, spacing evenly. Bake in preheated oven 25-30 min. Stir brandy into cream. Pour over individual servings of warm cobbler.

MR. AND MRS. DENNIS ALLEN

Allen – Alexander

Rev. A. Sutherland performed the August 19 wedding ceremony in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church of Suzanne Lynn Alexander, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Alexander of Belleville and Dennis John Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Allen, Belleville. Organist for the ceremon was R. Leslie.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose a floor length white silk organza gown in the Victorian style which featured a high neckline and a lace front on the bodice which came to a V at the shirred waistline. Her full sleeves were gathered to wide lace cuffs. A long, cathedral train fell from a tiered veil which was attached to a cap headpiece. She carried a white satin Bible which was covered by a cascade bouquet of pink roses.

Bridesmaids, Miss Penni Clarke of Belleville and Miss Gwen Streng of Napanee, wore identical gowns in the maid of honor except high-lighted by white floppy hats.

Flower girl, Miss Laurie Madigan of Parry Sound, niece of the bride, wore an identical dress to the bridesmaids and carried a basket of white mums and blue tinted carnations.

Mirror of Your Mind
by JOHN CONNELL

Do jilted men rush into marriage?

SOME do, but apparently more women than men are in a hurry to marry on the rebound. Perhaps jilted women want to prove they can marry despite the breakup which they will never admit was their fault. Then again, it could be that the jilted man wasn't in a hurry to marry in the first place. In the second place, many a man who gets tossed aside by one girl often finds a ready and willing shoulder to cry on without the need to marry so soon.

Can a 'former' lover become a leader?

YES; but he would have to be under rather dramatic circumstances. In a neighborhood or community emergency, the "loser" might be prevailed upon to apply his special talent or ability to help in the situation. After that he might be regarded as a leader and looked up to for inspiration and direction. The individual would hardly be a loner any more, though. He may have thus acquired the confidence he had been missing all along.

Are nurses child patients too good?

YES; and doctors and nurses are becoming increasingly concerned to watch out for young patients who don't "act up" in hospitals. The child who expresses his worry and distress over being in a hospital usually gets the attention he craves, of course. Now hospital personnel realize they must also watch the young patient who seems to accept his ill condition without fuss, to be sure he isn't holding torn apart inwardly by fears and anxiety.

Successful Living
A New Career Suggested

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: If a new career is more or less in line with the old one, but offers different challenges, changing careers even every five years makes a lot of sense. Otherwise, I would be inclined to have a longer stay in one job to make sure I was accomplishing all I could at that low particular area—perhaps as long as the 15-year term your consultant suggests.

The situation today is that changes are occurring so rapidly that even one job changes quite dramatically in terms of its demands and opportunities.

As you know, I have just recently retired and my one great joy is that at long last I have the power to choose. This capacity to make your own decisions is one of the greatest values in the retirement experience. — Jack Griffin, M.D. (Former Director, Canadian Mental Health Association.)

Dear Jack: How wonderful! I'm glad you put in that part about today's astonishingly rapid changes. It is all I can do to keep up with the reading that arrives on my desk about something new and different every morning.

Perhaps we should all set aside an hour a day to read up on what goes on. Trouble is, we are so busy making a living on that the very leisure time we are supposed to have keeps eluding us.

Dear Doris: I've just been engaged a little over two weeks and on our first visit my boy friend brought me an engagement gift. I didn't open it when he was here but waited till after he left.

My mom said I should have opened it while he was here so they could all exclaim over it but I think he'd have felt funny, don't you? What do you use my manners?

I wouldn't like someone swooning over me because I brought my girl friend a gift. In the future, what should I do? It's just wonderful to be—Engaged.

Dear Engaged: In the future, swoon — if that's your way of expressing yourself. Never fail to open an important gift, and indicate your delight to the giver then and there.

You have just become engaged. Right now you can begin thinking about how to receive, graciously, the gifts and kind deeds which you will experience at the time of your wedding.

Friends of yours will go to a good deal of trouble to surprise you, perhaps; they will certainly have consultations about things to give you.

It is up to you to be ready to accept them, to show pleasure when you open each gift; to look directly at the person who chose it and say thank you; and at the end of the opening of many gifts (at a shower, for instance), to speak to the room in general expressing joy and answering any questions they may have about your plans.

"The girl who is too embarrassed or too self-conscious to shine in this situation is really letting down her friends.

Dear Dogs: Please send me your leaflet on "How To Stop Smoking". My husband stopped two years ago and says he will never smoke again. Now my son is trying to quit. As for myself, I have never smoked and have don't intend to ever start. — Your Namesake.

Dear Doris The Second: Good for you. The more proof we have that the human spirit has the willpower to give up something which is like feeding itself poison, the more people we will persuade to do it.

I place the desired leaflet on "How To Stop Smoking" in its envelope with the greatest pleasure! (This helpful leaflet is available to other readers for 20 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope).

(Doris receives 10,000 letters a year, from readers. Please remember to supply the stamp for your reply.)

Ann Landers
Confession of the Past Could Be Time Bomb

Dear Ann Landers: Two years ago I was still a teenager. Three years ago I was still a virgin. My lover dropped me for another girl whom he later married when her father offered him a nice job. Now he's come into me at social functions he gives me a knowing wink.

What I remember most about our love affair was the constant fear of pregnancy. Like so many other stupid kids we had the idea that any attempt to prevent pregnancy made the relationship cheap and unnatural. (How crazy can you get?)

I now realize that virginity is a young woman's most precious gift. I am ashamed for having laughed at this concept and having considered it ridiculous and phony. My question is, shall I tell my wonderfully mature, highly-principled fiance about the past affair before we marry, or live in fear that the cad with the knowing wink will one day brag about his conquest and do me in? I hope you will answer. —Ann Onimous.

Dear Ann: If your fiance is wonderfully mature and highly-principled he won't ask. To tell your such information would be stupid. Such confessions might be considered good for the soul or some people call it clearing the air, but my mail tells me it can be a time bomb that might explode later and destroy a relationship.

Dear Ann Landers: As a cook (chef is the fashionable word these days) I was interested in the battle regarding Perma. I'm not saying the cook deserves to be tipped instead of the waitress, but I believe it would be fair to split it. After all, they need each other.

You expressed sympathy for the waitress who had to lift heavy trays. Do you have any idea what a huge pot of potatoes weighs? And those enormous roasts that must be lifted from the oven aren't exactly a bag of feathers.

During the summer months the waitresses have the benefit of air-conditioning while the cook is in the kitchen boiling with his soups and sauces. I've done both jobs and I prefer cooking because it is more creative.

I'm off work now—took a leave of absence to go on a diet. I've got to chase the 40 pounds I put on tasting and enjoying my own cooking. Which reminds me, Ann, tell your readers if they see a thin cook, don't eat in the restaurant. Which food's no good because the cook doesn't care.—Gertie The Gastronomist

Dear Gert: Thank you for letting us know what goes on behind those kitchen doors, and my compliments to the chef. But I'm afraid you are asking too much from the eating public if you expect them to take on a whole new layer of gratuities for service in the average restaurant. It is up to the staff to decide how the tips should be divided among themselves.

Dear Ann: I've got a touchy problem—and I do mean touchy. It's my dad. He can't keep his hands off me.

I'm 18, the youngest in a family of five kids. My dad is forever dragging me on his lap when I watch TV, patting my backside when I'm walking past him, or kissing me hello and goodbye even if I'm just going to the grocery store.

I told Mom I didn't like it but she says, "You're his baby, be nice to him."

I don't want to hurt his feelings but I am not a baby and I wish he'd keep his hands off. Any suggestions?—Touchy Me

The Eastern Look has come out more strongly in jewelry than in any other fashion. Most of it is merely oriental inspired but there's also a return to the real gem look, even if it's fake.

Award winner Kenneth Jay Lane believes this is the year of the carved jade and gilt look in a whole collection of jade bracelets, earings and rings as well as lead necklaces. Stanley Hagler found such interest in his Lee seaton's long Mandarin filagree fingertip rings that he has included them in his new collection. Other Chinese influences include giant Chinese character pendants, worn with pearly pieces in carved jade.

The long heavy necklaces that loaded down the Chinese Empress is the correct note for the new body decorator," says Cadoro. For linen pant suits and shifts it is a Bubble necklace of enormous amber and colored beads with a long dangling tassel. There are also smiling dragons fee a gold pendant with Jade, onyx and ebony drops.

This heavy look of Chinese-inspired jewelry is a continuation of the barbaric African theme of last season and the equally heavy and even more cumbersome look of the hardware jewelry of two or so seasons back.

Fall Look for Men

By Margaret Ness

Variety is the fashion spice of fall '72 life for men. There is everything from country gentleman to casually elegant looks. There's a more tailored interest paralelling the return to classicism in women's fashions.

Highlights for fall will be the importance of plaids and checks and the interest in the double knits. Grey flannel retains its popularity. Blazers are still top favorites, with a return to the original clean-cut blazer look.

For casual wear there's interest in the layered look, which women have found so satisfactory for their wardrobes. New are the U-neck sweaters to be worn over shirts.

In shirts, top interest is the new dress shirt where, as Van Heusen says, "neat and discreet take over from the wilder holds." White began to appear in the spring collections and is expected to come on strong for fall.

As for styling, it's the long point collar and a larger button down version. French cuffs are back.

SARIS IN STYLE

MONTREAL (CP) — When Rani Khanna came to Montreal from India in 1958, she was told by employers she would have to abandon her traditional sari for Western dress. Now saris are more common in Montreal and "if I went for a job now dressed like this, I'd have no problems," says Rani who with her husband Peter operates the Maharaja restaurant in downtown Montreal.

Girls' League Blossoms

Long Hair Hits Thurlow

The trend toward long hair has carried over into Thurlow minor sports, but even the most ardent supporters of the clean cut look wouldn't object, at least not when the sport is Girls Minor Softball.

A total of 120 girls are competing in the rugs softball loop this season, the first time that the sport has been operating in Thurlow.

"The girls really enjoy it, or at least most of them," advises league president Dianne Genereaux, "and they're really improving. At the first of the year one team had some girls who had played in Belleville and they were much better, but lately the other teams seem to have caught up."

The Thurlow girls are divided into two division,s junior and senior, with four teams in each group. The younger set (7-13 yrs.) is composed of teams sponsored by T and C Construction, Cannifton-Corbyville Women's Institute, Lou Williams and Sallan Fuels. In the senior category (12 - 18 yrs.) are teams representing Norway Market, Plainfield Metals, Omar Chisholm and Hugh McMullen Construction.

The teams play their games on diamonds located at Bird's Crescent, Point Anne, Harmony Public School and Plainfield. They are currently in the midst of a round-robin series to determine the league championship.

Plainfield Suffers First Loss

A change is not as good as a rest, at least as far as the Plainfield Metals' entry in Thurlow Senior Girl Softball is concerned.

Plainfield won three games — 28-21 and 31-18 over Hugh McMullen, and 20-6 over Omar Chisholm, but lost their other first-round round-robin play-off game 28-24 to Norway Market.

The loss, Plainfield's first of the year, left them and Norway's tied with 3-1 records after the first round.

Omar Chisholm was 2-2, including a 34-22 win over Norway's and a 25-19 victory over McMullen's, while McMullens emerged winless from their four games.

Full Speed Ahead

That could be the motto for the Thurlow Girls Minor Softball Association which has managed to field eight teams in its first year of operation. It's also the personal motto of Omar Chisholm's Yvonne Bowley as she steams safely into first during a senior girls playoff encounter with Norway Market. The leagues provide recreation for 120 Thurlow girls.

Beman Faces Toughest Match

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Deane Beman doesn't intend to give any ground to Jack Nicklaus going into today's first round of the rich U.S. professional match play golf championship.

"Anybody would be a damn fool if they said they'd be happy to play him head-to-head for a living," Beman said.

"But when I turned pro five years ago, I didn't come out here to back off from anybody."

The Beman-Nicklaus match, along with the match between Lee Trevino and defending champion DeWitt Weaver, were the features of today's first-round pairings.

The others have Miller Barber vs. Lanny Wadkins, Arnold Palmer vs. Don Bies, Jerry Heard vs. Len Thompson, Frank Beard vs. Paul Moran, George Archer vs. Babe Hiskey and Dave Stockton vs. Bob Barbarossa.

Jerry McGee, meanwhile, held a one-stroke lead going into the third round of the $100,000 Liggett and Myers Open, being played simultaneously on the 6,969-yard, par-72 Country Club of North Carolina course.

He had a 36-hole total of 140, four under par, after a second round 69. One-stroke back, at 141 were Dan Sikes, Ken Still, Dave Eichelberger, Dick Lotz, Jim Wiechers and John Schroeder.

Two Canadians qualified for the last 36 holes of the L and M tournament and two missed the cut. Qualifiers were Ken Kroll of Montreal, who shot a 71 Friday for a 143 total, and George Knudson of Toronto, who had a 73 round for 146.

Today's format call for the first round of the match play, which carries a total purse of $150,000 with $40,000 to the winner, to be played first. It will be followed by the third round of the L and M event, and that will be followed by the second round of the match play.

Seagren Fed Up

MUNICH (AP) — Bob Seagren has given up the fight. He has one athletic goal left, another Olympic gold medal in the pole vault, and then it's "goodbye to those jerks."

For years, the defending Olympic champion from Los Angeles has fought the track restrictions of athletes, winning a few battles, losing most. He has apparently lost the latest — over which kind of pole he can use in the Munich Games.

"Who wants to deal with a bunch of imbeciles?" said the 26-year-old Seagren. "I'm giving up — I'll use the old pole and to hell with it."

The International Amateur Athletic Federation recently outlawed the use of the pole with which Seagren set his world record of 18 feet, 5¾ inches. Seagren has heatedly defended the pole as "nothing unusual — it's not a super pole or anything."

The outlawed pole is, says Seagren, less than three-tenths of an inch smaller in diameter and only 1½ ounces lighter than the acceptable pole.

Eskimos Alone at Top After Trouncing B. C. 'Cousins'

Edmonton, after busy 29-7 romp over the Lions before a record home crowd of 37,541 Friday night, now are alone at the top of the conference standings with two of their four outings. Half of those triumphs have been in Edmonton at the expense of the last-place Lions.

"It was the best all-round performance we've had," Jauch commented after the mauling of the Lions. He was particularly pleased with Tom Wilkinson, the stubby 6-foot-1 Lion who has taken over as starting quarterback now that Bruce Lemmerman is out for two months with a shoulder separation.

"Wilkie called all the good plays," Jauch said. "We made some suggestions to him but all the good plays were his."

Wilkinson got off to a rather shaky start before settling down to confound B.C. with an adroit mixture of running and passing plays. On his third play from scrimmage, he went back to pass, fell and lost nine yards. On the first play after getting the ball back, a handoff went astray and he scrambled on the turf to recover the fumble.

It was goofing up out there," he said later in the dressing room, "but the defence was doing a hell of a good job. Then I started to get a few plays going."

One thing he tried to avoid was interception, and he did. He didn't want his former team-mates to get "excited."

In the B.C. dressing room, coach Eagle Keys was bitterly disappointed with his team's performance. The linebackers weren't plugging the holes. "I can't believe it," he muttered.

Besides suffering their fourth loss in five games, Lions lost the services of punt-return man Mike Wilson, who went off after the first quarter with a dislocated shoulder. Edmonton escaped injuries.

Lions were never in contention. They couldn't get any sustained drive going. When they did get the ball, the front wall protection for sophomore quarterback Don Moorhead broke down and he spent a good deal of time trying to evade Edmonton pass rushers in his own backfield.

Edmonton passed for touchdowns to end Tyrone Walls, a first-year man from University of Missouri, and veteran Canadian Bobby Taylor. Backup quarter Dave Syme, a rookie from Simon Fraser University, passed to high-scoring Kansas end George McGowan for Edmonton's third TD.

Dave Cutler converted all three, kicked two field goals from 45 and 13 yards, and two singles on wide field goal attempts.

Less than nine minutes remained when Lions escaped a whitewashing. second-string quarterback Don Horne tried a deep to Larry Highbaugh for a 56-yard pass-and-run touchdown, converted by Ted Gerela.

Derek Paid Double?

TORONTO (CP) — Bob Wolff, lawyer for hockey star Derek Sanderson, suggests the colorful centre could possibly draw two salaries next hockey season if the National Hockey League's reserve clause is upheld in court.

Sanderson, who played last season with Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, has signed a five-year contract for a reported $2.75 million with Philadelphia Blazers of the World Hockey Association. But the Bruins are contesting the signing under the NHL's reserve clause.

"If the NHL's reserve clause is upheld in court, Sanderson could be Boston property for another year," Wolff said Friday during a visit to Team Canada workouts.

"He has signed with Philly in the World Hockey Association, to take effect Oct. 1." Wolff said. "But if the court rules he is Boston property for another year, I'd rather that he played instead of sitting out."

If the courts prevent Sanderson from playing with Philadelphia, he apparently is still guaranteed $1.8 million, Wolff suggests.

"Not only that, but we've got this deal, Harold, on the Philly payroll as a scout for $25,000 a year, which makes Harold one of the highest paid hockey scouts," Wolff said.

Goldsworthy Out by Nose

TORONTO (CP) — Bill Goldsworthy suffered a nose fracture Friday during a Team Canada scrimmage when Jean Ratelle attempted to hook-check him from behind.

"I tried to lift his stick and I missed," said Ratelle, the New York Ranger centre. "I didn't think I hit him that hard."

Sterner in WHA

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Swedish hockey veteran Ulf Sterner said Thursday he will attend the training camp of the Chicago Cougars of the new World Hockey Association beginning Sept. 17.

Sterner, 30, became the first Swedish player in National Hockey League history when he played a few games with New York Rangers in the '60s.

Sterner, who has played more than 100 games for the Swedish nationals, said he will sign with the Cougars after the training camp, if he gets a $30,000 contract for the half-year season.

Mother Nature Soaks Pennant Races

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mother Nature stepped into baseball's frantic American League pennant race Friday and night and Oakland Athletics only watched it had rained in California the way it did in Minnesota and Milwaukee.

The slender leads enjoyed by Detroit Tigers in the East and Chicago White Sox in the West took a downing of rain with the Tigers washed out at Minnesota and the White Sox at Milwaukee. As a result, one margin shrank and the other grew.

It was dry on the West Coast where the second-place Baltimore Orioles and Oakland clashed. And the defending champion Orioles used some ninth-inning lightning to rally for three runs and a 5-3 victory.

The comeback triumph, built around a clutch pinch single by journeyman Tommy Davis, boosted Baltimore into a tie with Detroit at the top of the East Division. The Athletics, meanwhile, slipped one full game back of Chicago in the West.

Elsewhere in the AL Friday night, New York Yankees, third in the East, remained in games off the pace by splitting a double-header with Kansas City Royals. The Yanks won the first 4-1 and dropped the second 5-1. Fourth-place Boston Red Sox moved within three games of the top with a 4-0 decision over Texas Rangers and Cleveland Indians edged California Angels 2-1 in 11 innings.

Dave Duncan's seventh-inning homer had snapped a 2-2 deadlock and record Tiger Hunter nursed the slim lead into the ninth. But Dave Johnson opened he Orioles' last chance with a single and Johnny Oates sacrificed pinch-runner Mark Belanger to second. That brought up pinch-hitter Davis, acquired only last week from Chicago Cubs, and the veteran outfielder delivered a tying ole score. Then as Don Buford followed with a

Peterborough Wins Preview

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Peterborough PCOs defeated Oshawa Green Gaels 17-10 Friday night in a preview of the final of the Ontario Lacrosse Association Junior A section.

The game marked the end of the round-robin semi-finals which eliminated Rexdale Warriors from contention. Peterborough had a 6-1-1, win, loss and draw record to Oshawa's 4-3-1 and Rexdale's 0-6-2.

In the Friday night game, Gord Floyd led the winners with five goals. Guy Letaulle and Jim Wasson added three each for Peterborough and Greg Lastic added two. Singles came from Brian Evans, Steve Plunkett, Randy Brian and Phil Hunter.

for the Athletics and Catfish Hunter nursed the slim lead into the ninth. But Dave Johnson opened he Orioles' last chance with a single and Johnny Oates sacrificed pinch-runner Mark Belanger to second. Don Buford followed with a triple, scoring Davis and a wild pitch brought home Baltimore's winning run.

The victory left Baltimore with a 64-55 record, the same as Detroit. Both teams are 2½ games ahead of New York, which split a doubleheader the day night, and three up on fourth-place Boston, which also won.

The Athletics, who could have moved within two percentage points of first-place Chicago, fell one full game behind instead.

The Yankees, who've spent the last 15 days no more than 2½ games off the East pace, remained at that distance by splitting with the Royals.

New York bounced from behind to take the opener. Bobby Murcer's 22nd home run of the year tied the seventh inning and then the Yankees scored three times in the eighth for the victory.

The Red Sox tightened the East race a bit more with Luis Tiant tossing a four-hitter to shut out Texas.

Dick Tidrow surrendered an unearned run in the first inning and then shut California out the rest of the way as Cleveland nipped the Angels.

Police Calm Bettors

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto police were called to Greenwood Raceway Friday night to quell a disturbance as several hundred fans complained about mutuels payoffs in the fourth race.

The hooping and jeering began when win, place and show payoffs were made on winner Skipper Will after the judges ruled the two-year-old bacer had caused an unfair start. The ruling was deemed a mutuels refund.

The mob swarmed around the cervice windows and some persons kicked garbage cans and wooden doors between the clubhouse and grandstand sections, yelling "We want our money back.

The judges ordered a refund only on the quinella pool to those who held the 1-3 combination and went along with the win, place and show payoffs according to Canadian Trotting Association rules. A total of $3,591 was refunded from the quinella pool.

Munich Games Billed As Most Lavish Ever

MUNICH (CP) — Germany opened her first Olympic Summer Games in 36 years today with peacetime pomp and ceremony, guaranteeing a 16-day run that has been billed as the most lavish Olympiad in history.

Officials said they hoped the bitter in-fighting that resulted in Rhodesia being barred from the Games would be the last "political" decision taken here as they turned over the grand-issue spectacle to the athletes—10,000 of them from 122 countries.

A worldwide television audience had a bird's-eye view of the opening ceremony that began at 3 p.m. (10 a.m. EDT) in Olympic Stadium. About 80,000 were on hand-seated and standing.

Some 12,000 athletes and officials paraded in their team dress uniforms around the West German middle-distance runner, Ilsedor Fischer of Passau, lighted the Olympic flame.

Greece, where the Olympics were born, by tradition led the parade of athletes into the stadium and West Germany, as host, brought up the rear.

Between Greece and West Germany, the countries marched in alphabetical order, but the alphabet used was German. So Canada—Kanada—marched with Asia and Esthopia—Aethiopi—with the Australians the exception was made for the United States, which is Vereinigte Staaten in German, the U.S. Athletes marched with the Us.

The Canadian team of 217 athletes and more than 19 officials was led by Doug Rogers of Vancouver, a heavyweight judo contender who won a silver medal in the 1971 Pan American Games. It was the biggest Canadian contingent yet at a summer Olympics.

Canadians were on the scene with high hopes as well as concern for medals. They will stage the 1976 Summer Games in Montreal at a much lower cost than the $600-odd million the German "Nazi Olympics" of 1936 run by Adolf Hitler never bargained again.

The Montreal organizers concede that their production will be more restrained. One Canadian official said: "We haven't anything to prove."

But after all, the Germans want to prove themselves to the world, he said, and "they have."

West German Pre-ident Gustav Heinemann, chief executive of the Games, entered the stadium on the signal of eight Alpine horns—curved wooden instruments about 20 feet long that emit a deep-throated tone. A 66-man military band played the German national anthem.

The teams followed in a combination of tunes from various countries played in march time.

With the huge army of athletes in place, more than 3,000 schoolchildren darted into the stadium with welcoming bouquets.

President Heinemann opened the Games, using the words of the Olympic constitution:

"I hereby declare the Olympic Games celebrating the 20th Olympiad in the modern era to be opened."

Eight gold medal winners—West German rowers who won in Mexico in 1968—hoisted the Olympic flag.

Another Olympic flag was transferred from Mexico City, site of the 1968 Games, to Munich, where it will stay in the city hall for the next four years until its shift to Montreal.

As Mayor Georg Kronawitter of Munich accepted the flag, Bavarian dancers" and musicians joined in the performance.

Then 3,000 Bavarian doves were released from the track and circled into the sky.

The most dramatic moment came when Zahn, an 18-year-old police cadet holding a torch lighted in Olympia, Greece, and accompanied by four other runners, circled the track. Then he mounted 162 steps up the stadium and over a ramp to the platform from which he touched off the flame that will burn through these Games.

Six mountain men from Berchtesgaden using ancient blunderbusses fired three 30-gun salutes.

More than 5,700 relay runners had carried the flame 3,400 miles from Mount Olympus to the heart of this Bavarian city in more than 1.5 million steps. A cheering throng of 50,000 was on hand to welcome the torch as it was handed over to Spiridi Louis—Marathon—King's Square—Friday night by a white-clad runner.

As the Olympic flame rose, 22-year-old Heidi Schueller of West Germany mounted the podium and became the first woman to take the Olympic oath in Summer Games history.

The athletes departed, ready to compete, starting Sunday.

DOUG ROGERS

Standard Bearer Bitter

MUNICH (CP) — On the eve of the Summer Olympics, Doug Rogers of Vancouver levelled some strong criticism Friday against amateur sports in Canada, calling it a "bush league operation."

Rogers, 31-year-old airline pilot, won a silver medal in heavyweight judo at the Olympic Games in Tokyo eight years ago, and he said he's in the best shape since 1964.

But if his assessment of his medal chances is accurate, it's his only moment of glory at the 20th Olympic Game here likely Rogers will be the man who carried the Canadian flag into the stadium for opening ceremonies.

"I feel I can draw with anyone here," Rogers said.

"There are four or five guys here who can beat me, depending on how I fight. I fight conservatively, +I should draw. If I open up, chances are I could lose."

Canada has a large population of "handwagon jumpers," he feels.

"There's little support until you win a medal. I took five years out of my life to train in Japan before the Tokyo medal. I wouldn't have had it any other way, but it cost me a lot of money. I could have used some support in those days."

Philly Finds It Futile

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Southpaw Ken Reynolds of Philadelphia Phillies has lost 12 straight baseball games, but he says manager Paul Owens, "I don't want to give up on him."

Reynolds dropped a 6-1 decision to Cincinnati Reds Friday night to tie a team record for futility.

The left-hander, who hasn't won since last season, duplicated Russ Miller's mark of 1928 and consecutive losses in the National League and major league records.

The National League record for consecutive losses, is 18, shared by Clifton Blanks of the 1910 Boston Braves and Roger Craig of the 1962 New York Mets. John Nabors set the major league record of 19 with Philadelphia Athletics in 1920.

"I hope that Reynolds doesn't get shelled out of baseball," said Owens. "With a little luck, and if we'd score some runs for him, he could easily be pitching .500 ball instead of being 6-12."

Reynolds' mar wins, the Reds improved on their strong first-place margin in the National League West as the second-place Houston Astros lost to Montreal Expos 4-3 and fell nine games behind.

Reynolds' had an unaccustomed 1-6 lead, but failed to hold it in the fourth inning as the Reds came up with five runs—two on opposing pitcher Don Gullett's single.

Elsewhere, the Pittsburgh Pirates split a doubleheader with Los Angeles Dodgers, winning the first 7-2 in 13 innings and losing the second 4-3.

Manny Sanguillen's run-scoring single in the 13th inning gave the Pirates their first-game victory. Bill Buckner drilled a two-run homer and Claude Osteen scattered nine hits to give the Dodgers the second game.

City Boasts Twin Titles

By RANDY DERRY
Sports Staff

Most cities east of Toronto are more than happy to have an Eastern Ontario Baseball Association champion once every five, six or seven years but Belleville has the distinction this season of having two EOBA champions.

The Belleville Yardmen tykes and the Conductors and Brakemen peewees swept aside all opposition in this zone to each capture EOBA honors in their respective divisions and enter the Ontario Kingston and Peterborough in four straight games and begin the OBA quarter-finals Sunday against Burlington while at the same time the peewees also knocked off Kingston and Peterborough to gain the playdowns against Sudbury.

"We have some real good stickers on this club, in fact I suppose hitting is our strong point," commented coach Ron Lapenestre of his Yardmen tykes who maintain a bevy of .400 hitters plus Mark Crawford's team leading .800 average. "I feel we have a real good shot at the title this year because we have good pitching and great hitting."

The tykes may need that combination as they enter the stretch drive of OBA where teams from Sudbury, Brantford, Ottawa, Chatham, Hamilton and Toronto has emerged as the best in the province.

"I've heard that Burlington isn't expecting much trouble from us. Well, that's the situation we like to be in because that's where we've been before and still came out on top," states the first year tyke coach who also gets help from Steve Burke and Charles Doran.

The team almost didn't have the chance to come out on top at all when a lack of a sponsor forced the squad to the brink of disbandment before the Bellevilla Yardmen saved the day, paying their road on the playdowns.

The Yardmen are mostly first year players, a good sign for future tyke teams, held together by a handful of sophomores, Mark Crawford, Steven Walmsley, Garth Sulyr, Sean McDermott, Steve Meeks and pitcher clean-up hitter Dale McTaggart are the second year boys who have the steadying influence on the other players. Louis Crawford, Glen McQuaid, Charles Deenn, Jay Hickmott, Dave McGaw, Curtis Labelle, Jim Gibbs and John Dent round out the team that has fashioned a 7-0 won-lost record over the year.

The Conductors and Brakemen peewees have an even better record under their belts but are hoping to stretch a 15-2 won-lost mark further with a sweep of an unknown Sudbury commodity.

"We haven't heard a thing about them so we'll have to wait and see what they look like when we'll have to play it by ear," states peewee manager Ray Hall who along with coach George Mills have watched their team steadily improve over the season to now where they are probably seeing the best ball played by the Trainmen.

"They got together in the first round against Kingston and I'd say they are at their peak right now," commented Hall of the club that has won the Cobourg Tournament and at the present is batting in the 32 team CNE Tournament where the Belleville nine have won their first two starts. "If they can keep going like they have the last six games we'll be alright."

Doing alright shouldn't be any problem for the team which is mainly comprised of second year players, most of whom were on last year's nine which fell in the first round of the EOBA playdowns to the eventual OBA finalists from Kingston, Bruce Brand, Brady Mills, Gary Stapley, Mike Burke, Peter Hall, Andy Lapenetta, Tony Bernard, Billy Gow, Ed Marinesa, Howie Cross, Bruce Mellon, Peter Manderville, Dennis Greer, and Rory Radford make up the Belleville team.

Manager Hall admits the team size on the average is a bit small out what they lack in size, baseball ability more than compensates. "It's a strong balanced team. Any one of the boys can hit. When one tails off another picks up and when you add good pitching with Peter (Hall) we should have a pretty good chance."

They get their first chance Saturday when Sudbury is scheduled for a 5 p.m. Parkdale engagement. The Tykes Sunday contest with Burlington begins at 2 p.m. also at Parkdale.

Defence Keeps Thurlow Peewees Going

The best offence has been a good defence for the Thurlow Merchant peewees this season.

The Thurlow minor baseball squad has managed to parlay top notch infield defence and strong pitching into a shot at the all-Ontario "D" division championship.

Coaches Bob Revoy and George Beer list these two factors as the major ones that have helped carry the Merchants to a 12-2 record during the regular season and a win over Orono, Newcastle and Frankford in the round-robin series to determine the Eastern Ontario Baseball Association champion for their group.

Shortstop Terry Pascoe, whom George Beer says is "the best in Eastern Ontario" leg agued the Merchants' infield defence, while the pitching has been handled mainly by Ken Revoy and Randy Adams, although no less than six Thurlow players can be utilized as moundsmen.

The Eastern Ontario champs faced their big test of the season today in the opening game of the best - of - three OBA "D" finals against Fenwick. The game was the second game of the series played at Harmony School, commencing at 1 p.m. with second game of the series slated for Sunday afternoon in Fenwick.

All Hands On Deck

Infield defence has been a major factor in carrying the Thurlow Merchants to the Eastern Ontario peewee "D" baseball championship this season, and that commodity has rested mainly in the capable hands of Barry Beer, Terry Pascoe, Dennis Quinn and Randy Adams. Thurlow will be gunning for the all Ontario title when they open their series with Fenwick this weekend.

Bantams Scaling Heights

Reaching the heights may have been the toughest job assigned the Thurlow Minor baseball league representatives but the BYBP bantams aren't satisfied with that alone. The Belleville Yardmen are into the OBA "C" playdowns against Fort Henry Heights and hoping to surpass that mark.

The Thurlow bantams would have to best the Kingston area team in a two-of-three series to scale the heights. The first game of their OBA playdowns will be against Fort Henry Heights today.

The bantams have relied on the infield work of Tony Latone, Dave Andrews, Bird Sullivan, Bruce McDonnell and Rod Dafoe and the fine pitching work of Terry Holgate, Brian Masterson and Ted Foster to fashion a 5-5 EOBA record this season.

Trainmen Fire Boiler in 6th

The CN rode pitcher Perry Sole's two-way performance to an 8-3 Industrial Softball league win over Schaft-Warner Friday to enable the trainmen to take a 1-0 lead in the best-of-five semi-final series.

Soule tossed a five-hitter at Stewart Warner and had a three-for-three night at the plate, including two singles and a triple.

His best hitting support came from Hanser Thomas's brace of triples and a single and double by Mark Sheridan.

Fred Davis went six innings on the slab for Stewart Warner, who held a 3-0 lead before CN got one run back in the fourth, two in the fifth, and exploded for five in the sixth, four of which charged to reliever Jim Henn. Ed Christopher's two singles made him the leading hitter for the losers.

Mead Johnson were winners from the word go in their 10-5 decision over UIC, starting off with four runs in the top of the first inning, five more in the top of the second, and never looking back.

Ken Osborne allowed the five UIC runs in his four innings, before Sonny Holoway blanked the losers on one hit over the last three.

Soviet Referees Like Vodka Instead of Beer

TORONTO (CP) — Referees from five countries were huffing and puffing at Maple Leaf Gardens Friday to get in shape for the Canada-Russia hockey series when Scotty Morrison announced:

"OK, the next sprint is for a case of beer."

Yuri Karadin, one of two Soviet officials from the National Hockey League referee-in-chief through an interpreter: "Beer, nyet. Vodka, da."

He then told the interpreter to tell Morrison that Russian drinkers made bad referees.

"Vodka drinkers are better."

In addition to the Russians, there are officials from West Germany, Czechoslovakia, Sweden and the United States who began training here Thursday.

"The purpose of getting all the referees together is to achieve consistency and uniformity," said Morrison.

"We will go over the rules and discuss the interpretations of them—especially the judgement calls like interference and boarding.

"Just as important, we want the officials to be in top physical condition and we plan to work the hell out of them with sprints, stops and starts, continual skating and muscle-building exercises."

Dynamite No Bomb

TORONTO (CP) — Dynamite gained steadily on the last two-and-a-half legs Friday to deliver Detroit rival Aggressive and win the right to challenge for the Lou Marsh Cup trophy.

Dynamite, a 29-foot sloop skippered by Lloyd Ecclestone, won the 21-mile race over a triangular course by two minutes and 15 seconds.

The winds of seven to 10 knots were light but they were the heaviest of the series to date on the Lake Ontario course for the trophy that has been presented for Sir Great Lakes Sailors since the 1850s.

The lead was swapped several times after Dynamite won the start but she churned home on the last beat.

She will meet either Mirage or Merrythought, the twin sloops now undergoing trials out of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, in the best-of-five series that starts Sept. 10.

The Canadian defender is to be named Monday after two races today and two more on Sunday.

"Better put your glasses on, Coach. You've been studying that red dog play to the tackling dummy for 10 minutes!"

Lewis Aids Imperial Oil and CGE To His List of Welfare Firms

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — David Lewis, New Democratic Party national leader, Friday added Imperial Oil Ltd., Canadian General Electric and Canadian Marconi to his list of companies that are on "corporate welfare."

Mr. Lewis, here to open the campaign headquarters of Ken Boulton, NDP candidate in the riding of Middlesex South, recently has been listing corporations which have received substantial aid from the federal government.

At a news conference, Mr. Lewis said that during Prime Minister Trudeau's term in office direct grants to corporations which do not include other investors like tax concessions, tax cuts and tax remissions . . . accelerated depreciation allowances." increased to $530 million from $281 million, a jump of 35% per cent.

"And during the same Trudeau years, average unemployment increased from 4.6 per cent in 1971, to 6.4 per cent in 1971, or by 33.3 per cent." Mr. Lewis said.

Mr. Lewis quoted from Canadian General Electric's annual report which said that the average number of employees in the company was 17,000 in 1971, a decrease of 10.2 per cent from 1970.

Yet from 1965 to 1971, General Electric received $4.5 million in grants, he said.

"Now look at their financial record. Their net earnings between 1967 and 1971 were $31,643,000 while the income tax they paid amounted to $16,777,000 at an average rate of 12.61 per cent. . . . In those same years, General Electric had net income or profits of $71,357,960 after they had taken advantage of all depreciation allowances and deferred taxes made available to them by Liberal governments.

"Thus, General Electric, between 1967 and 1971, were able to claim depreciation of 755,804,000 and had deferred taxes of $33,130,000. . . . In fact, the company in 1971 had accumulated a reserve of almost $43 million for deferred taxes."

He said the situation of accumulating reserves for deferred taxes has been "both wrong the professional accountants' associations over the past few years because it is becoming embezzlement."

"If you take the time to read their journals, you will see discussions on the subject as they try to work out some solution to maintain integrity about the rip-off being so obvious.

"In most cases, this reserve for deferred taxes is growing annually and while in theory it is paid to the government eventually, in practice it is unlikely that the government will ever see a penny - if it because the corporations, quite legally, will continue to build up the reserve forever."

"From 1965 to 1971, Imperial Oil in Canada had net earnings of $1,526,000,000 and said income tax of $290,000,000, or a rate of 19 per cent, the corporate a married man with two children would pay if he were making about $11,000.

"Why were Imperial Oil's wages so low? Because in that six year period they were allowed depreciation and amortization allowances of $861 million and deferred taxes of $197 million. After other deductions and current taxes, the company was left with net income or profits of $709 million. . . .

Mr. Lewis said that in the same period Imperial oil received various grants totalling over $28 million.

CP News Briefs

KIMBERLEY, Ont. (CP) — Rev. J. Frank Kuvanagh, principal of the Catholic Central High School in London for the past three years, was elected president of the 105,000-member Ontario Teachers' Federation Friday.

Father Kavanagh, a former tennis champion, will take a one year's leave of absence from his London school to serve the federation.

Speaking of a proposed governing council of the OTF, he said the aim was "not to be self-governing and keep people out but to bring in and involve the public."

"We will come to an agreement on certification (of teachers) and evaluation in OTF, then, after we get our own house in order, satisfy the community at large," he said.

He said there would probably be more legal generated for legal equalized grants for elementary and secondary schools.

"As the number of education take eight to 10 years," he said.

"We're going to look at the moneys allotted to community colleges," he said. Figures showed community colleges get $1550 per student and secondary schools get $1,000 per student.

Grade 12 is very familiar to the first year in a community college so why the difference of $750,? and Father Kavanagh.

Geology Ignored

MONTREAL (CP) — A Canadian geologist said Friday the Canadian International Development Agency is failing to utilize available geological expertise in its program of aid to developing countries.

Duncan Derry senior delegate for Canada in the 24th International Geological Congress here and past president of the Canadian Geological Association, said the agency should be training geologists specifically for foreign aid work.

"One of the best ways to raise the standard of living of underdeveloped countries is through geology," he said in an interview. "We're not doing it in a very efficient way."

One part-time employee represents the agency's sole expenditure on technical geological advice within its organization, he said.

"To large a proportion of funds is being spent on such things as public relations and too small a proportion on technical expertise."

Moscow Trying To Stop People Wasting Bread

MOSCOW (AP) — With a disappointing grain harvest ahead, the Soviet Union has launched a drive to stop people wasting bread.

Newspapers, filled with reports on the grain harvest, also have been printing stories decrying the waste of bread and grain.

"It is necessary to respect every piece of bread."

Pravda, the Communist party paper, said on two trips in the Ukraine each sentenced to a year in jail for trucking 1,000 loaves of stale and moldy rye bread to the garbage dump.

Vechernaya Moskva Evening Mcscow—said cafeterias in Moscow delivered 114 tons of leftover bread to farms for animal feed in six months. In order not to throw away, they had to hand the bread away."

All such articles are quick to say there will be no shortages of bread and that Soviet collages will never bear the words "No bread" that our people have heard about for years.

But such assurances make Russians uneasy, especially with the heightened official concern about the grain harvest and occasional newspaper references to "a difficult agricultural year."

With that, Gelman testified, the man grabbed him, put a straight edge razor to his neck and took the rest of the lawyer's money.

"Tonight when you are alone ask yourselves. What are you doing? Nobody is ready answers fed to you by mite from basic training . . . I know that if you suffer and if you have left Vietnamese under peaceful conditions, you would hate the men who are sending you on bombing missions.

"Have you any idea what your bombs are doing when you pull the levers and push the buttons?

"Should you allow these same people another hour to define for you who your enemy is.

"And, how does it feel to be used as pawns?"

No other parts of the transcripts were released.

SHAWNO NUGGETS

MURDERED FOR HIS GOLD

by SOURDOUGH SAM

Time was when this area was a hunter's paradise than a young rooster in a chicken coop.

When I was knee high to a runt pig, my grandpappy used to tell how Dickey Lake got its name — that's one of the four lakes up here.

Anyways it seems as how Mr. Dickey brought some gold dust and gold bars with him as a grubstake, hidin' the stuff in his woodland cabin.

But word got around about the gold, for in 1859 he was murdered on his homestead.

Grandpappy said a servant of Mr. Dickey was hanged for the crime. Yet folks told as how the man hanged was innocent, used to say.

Didn't mettin to tell you such a morbid story, but you can't linker with history, 'less you're a professor writin' a book.

These days, Shawano's a much happier place.

What with all these new folks movin' in and settlin' up house, things sure seem to have taken a turn for the better.

Open Pit Joe on my own up here, I'd forgot the sounds of woodpeckers splashin' around in the water, an' hearin' fellers brag about the mess of fish they've caught. The only thing I don't like about here is the smell of them cookouts the women folk dish up. It's enough to scare an old bachelor off his nogzin.

Better chase a bobcat up a varnish tree than try to shoo a flockin' mare, as Cousin Jeb used to say.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

Sunday, Aug. 27

Aries (March 21-April 19): Abrupt shifts in program are par for current condition. You can be stubborn and hold your ground without resort to angry words.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Spending Sunday at home has native advantages this week-end early. Don't be surprised if others come to you for advice.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Get up early, do your share of work, then get out of it for a real change. Don't get stuck with a peaceful quiet.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Expect others to be sensitive this Sunday, so resolve to let them be while you work out some of your own riddles.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are in line for critical review this Sunday. Be assured that much of the comment is favorable and go right ahead serenely.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Small groups manage quite well this Sunday, while large assemblages experience diversion, conflicts. Avoid fatigue.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep calm while dealing with changes, as they tend to work out better than original plans or casual drift of habit. It's a long day.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Moderation and self-adequacy are your keywords for successful living this Sunday. Deal with unfinished correspondence.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Get in some serious study, self improvement activity. Friends and family tend to be out of touch with your plans.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Tact and self-restraint are needed. Remember that younger people tend to learn from their own decision-making experience and errors.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Long-simmering questions come up for airing, perhaps final answers. Sudden sweeping changes are out of order, need preparation.

MONDAY, AUG. 28

Aries (March 21-April 19): Take the initative, make changes work and get started before someone else begins. Seek full information on financial questions.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Whatever creative effort you've made now comes under inspection. Do further research, some course diverging from usual habits.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Co-operation becomes more feasible late in the day specially for idealistic programs. Let your friends in on a secret.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): It's a field day for gathering conflicting opinions while being discreet about your own. Coping with younger people comes easily.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Give people and their burdens time to settle into some sequence, then pitch in to redeem all your commitments. Make no new promises today.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Reach out for fuller communications now. Pack up neglected correspondence. Pull family resources together for better investment.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Try to get co-operation in starting new projects, remembering that despite restless activity, you are on at your best level of business skills.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Patience with mid-day confusion puts you into a good spot to take advantage of passing opportunity—move fast when you do.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Once you've been patient with early false starts and revisions, the day turns fortunate for your real interests.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Home and possessions are both a joy and a burden today. Reconcile leads to departures from plans. It's a long day.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): There's a dividend in doing the amenities with friends and relatives. Somebody can put in a good word for you where it counts.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Try to better your material resources, whether it means taking on different tasks, or demanding a larger share of what you produce.

To Your Good Health

Weather Affects Some Noticeably

By G. C. THOMPSON, MD

Dear Dr. Thompson: Please define, if possible, a condition. I have read about and confirmed what I have experienced, that there are people who are affected by climate, which causes both physical and mental changes due to humidity, falling of the barometer, etc., very often putting people in a depressed and irritable state and feeling bloated and ungainly.

I have asked doctors over many years to classify this condition and explain or help with medication, but they knew not of what I spoke.

I am still plagued by it. People ask me why my eyes are almost closed on a sunny day, and if I told them it would rain the next several days it would be almost funny to them, so I bear and grin.

I let this article about it, but it did not refer to treatment, but the condition was a fact. Do you know of this condition? Are doctors becoming aware of it? Can anything be done? — Mrs. E.

A most interesting question, but a most baffling one. Are doctors becoming aware of it. They've been aware of it for many years, but explaining it, or knowing what to do about it, is something else.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	2♦	Pass
2♥	Pass	2♠	Pass
4♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead — Jack of diamonds.

Declarer can't pull a rabbit out of the hat if there isn't one in there, but sometimes the rabbit is there and declarer fails to find it. For example, consider this deal where South is in six spades and West leads a diamond.

Declarer wins in dummy with the king and, let's say, plays a club to the ace followed by a low heart to the queen. East wins with the king, returns a club, and now South must do do in regardless of how he plays the rest of the hand. He cannot successfully ruff two hearts in dummy and therefore finishes down one.

Oddly enough, after winning the diamond lead with the king, the best line of play — the one that offers the greatest chance of success — is to lead the ace of diamonds at trick two and on it discard the ace of clubs!

For practical purposes, this assures the slam. The plan is to make use of dummy's Q-J-10-9 of clubs and score three club tricks regardless of which defender has the lead.

Thus, in the actual case, declarer easily comes home with the slam by leading the queen of clubs at trick three and discarding a heart. West wins but cannot stop South from making twelve tricks consisting of six spades, a heart, two diamonds and three clubs.

The outcome is the same if East is the player with the king of clubs. In that event, his king gets caught as the queen is led from dummy, and declarer again scores three club tricks. Of course, when declarer eventually gets around to drawing trumps, he leaves the A-K before leading a third trump to the queen to utilize whatever clubs are left in dummy.

One letter stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Apartheid's Foe Coming to Canada

EDMONTON (CP) — A white Anglican leader from South Africa, whose imprisonment last year by the republic set off a howl heard around the world, is to visit Canada for three weeks later this year.

The visit by Very Rev. Gonville ffrench-Beytagh was announced Friday by the Anglican dean of Edmonton, Very Rev. Randall E. Ivany.

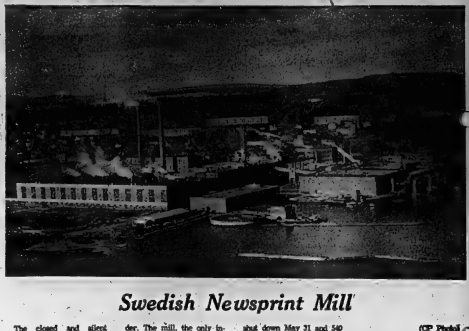
A vocal opponent of the republic of South Africa's strict racial policy—apartheid—he was arrested and detained incommunicado by the South African police in January, 1971. Such detention is provided for by the country's Terrorism Act.

A week later, he was charged with "unlawful activities" under the Suppression of Communism Act and set free on $7,000 bail. Communism is banned in South Africa.

After a storm of protest by church leaders all over the world, three United States churchmen visited South Africa in Dean ffrench-Beytagh's behalf.



On June 30, a 19-count indictment was laid against the dean under the provisions of the anti-terrorism legislation and his trial began Aug. 3, 1971, in Pretoria, the administrative capital of South Africa.

He was accused of "advocating violent revolution" through the distribution of banned pamphlets and of having received and disbursed money from a prohibited group in London, England.

Dean ffrench-Beytagh admitted disbursing $70,000 for relief aid to men imprisoned for political offences and told the Transvaal division of the Supreme Court that the banned pamphlets which led to his arrest had been planted in his home.

He was found guilty on three of the charges and sentenced to five years, the minimum sentence. The maximum is death.

But the appellate division of the Supreme court reversed the conviction and sentence and the dean was permitted to leave the country. He now lives in London.

Three Premiers Not Opposed To Special Status for Quebec

QUEBEC (CP) — Canadian premiers outside Quebec differ widely on this province's place in Confederation and whether Quebec should have special powers compared with those of other provinces, says a survey published today.

Premier William Davis of Ontario, one of seven premiers quoted in an article in Le Soleil newspaper, a strongly federalist Quebec City publication, appeared less definite on the issue of special status than the other six.

One premier, Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia, accepted "without condition the principle of a particular status for Quebec."

Two others, Allen Blakeney of Saskatchewan and Ed Schreyer of Manitoba, gave qualified approval to the idea in interviews.

Three premiers rejected special status—Peter Lougheed of Alberta, W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia and Frank Moores of Newfoundland.

The interviews took place over a period of three months.

Mr. Sauvageau said Premier Davis criticized the centralizing tendencies of the federal government, but did not appear to like the idea of a particular Quebec society either.

"There is a great diversity in the country, even in Ontario," Mr. Davis said. "A diversity of interests, of cultures. But there is a tie binding it together and I would like to think this tie crosses the whole country."

Premier Regan, however, said:

"I accept without condition the principle of a particular status for Quebec."

"I agree with the idea of one division of powers for, Quebec with the federal government and another for the other provinces, with fewer powers for the other provinces," Premier Regan said.

Premier Balkeney says the special status of Quebec has been recognized since 1867, the year of Confederation.

"Here in the west, and particularly in Saskatchewan, we believe we need a strong central government to meet our economic and social problems, unfavorable freight rates, the question of markets for our products, etc., as problems which only provincial governments cannot settle.

"However it is clear that the people of Quebec have legitimate aspirations of seeing its provincial government become a base of support for French culture in Canada. To do this, Quebec needs different powers from those of Saskatchewan."

Premier Schreyer said he does not agree with the two nations concept in the judicial sense of two sovereign states.

On the other hand, he doubted English Canada would resist if a majority of Quebecers opted for independence.

Dock Strike Threatens Grain Trade

VANCOUVER (CP) — Russia faces the threat of a poor harvest and is bidding heavily on the world grains market; Japan will call tenders Nov. 1 for wheat shipments; China promises it will be a long-term customer for Canadian wheat.

A pretty situation for Canada, the bread basket of the world. And a pretty picture for British Columbia, whose ports handle all the shipments to China and Japan and a solid chunk of the traffic to Russia.

But the picture is out of focus.

Prairie grain elevators are full. Vancouver elevators are bulging and 4,940 loaded rail-way grain cars are stacked up in B.C. and Alberta. There are about 20 million bushels in the Vancouver elevators, another 10 million bushels in the box cars and millions more sitting in prairie terminals.

Not one grain boat has moved from the port of Vancouver since Aug. 7. Not one grain boat has moved from any of B.C.'s six major ports since Wednesday.

About 40 deepsea freighters swing idly at anchor in Vancouver harbor. Twenty of them are waiting for grain; and every one of these is going either to Russia, China or Japan.

The big question is: How much cash-billing is going on in government purchasing offices in Moscow, Peking and Tokyo?

Ports Still Closed

VANCOUVER (CP) — It was more of the same today for longshore and maritime employers' bargainers who spent most of the weekend trying to reach an agreement that would end a British Columbia dock - workers' strike that started last Wednesday.

The tieup meant delayed cargoes, no movement of Canadian grain exports normally shipped from Vancouver, layoffs for grainhandlers in the port and protests from the Prairies. Sunday there were 31 ships waiting in B.C. ports.

Federal Labor Minister Martin O'Connell, who came west Thursday for a first-hand look at the tieup, left for Ottawa by air Sunday, leaving members of his department to keep tabs on negotiations which were to continue today.

Meanwhile, at a meeting Sunday, members of the Grain Handlers Union—who work at elevators handling grain prior to loading at ships—voted 43 per cent in favor of a controversial conciliation board report.

The report had earlier been rejected by the elevator companies as too generous a settlement in a 36-month dispute with the grain handlers. The companies are Alberta wheat pool, United Grain Growers and Burrard Terminals.

Union spokesman Henry Kanes called the employers' complaint about the report "a political move designed to influence the vote of Prairie farmers in the next federal election."

Under terms of the conciliation board award, the grain handlers would receive a 40-cent-hourly wage increase on each year of a two-year contract, on existing rates of $4.16 for laborers and $4.80 for tradesmen.

Maritime Premiers Agree New Constitution Needed

QUEBEC (CP) — Canada's three Maritime premiers agree the country's constitution should be changed.

But Florian Sauvageau, managing editor of Le Soleil, said in an article published today they were not agreed on the form a new constitution should take.

The Quebec journalist interviewed the premiers of Canada's other nine provinces over a three-month period and published his first article on the discussions Saturday.

Premier Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick told Mr. Sauvageau that Canada needed a more flexible, less rigid federalism.

It is pointless, he said, to think of "my provincial rights, my federal rights, as if we were at war." This can't work," and added he was speaking not only about Quebec but other provinces as well.

Mr. Hatfield has no objections to Ottawa's spending power.

"Provincial governments will have more problems in the future if they refuse federal participation when their people want services."

Premier Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia said Quebec needed special status within Confederation to maintain French culture in Canada. He was upset about the federal government's unlimited spending power and its intrusion into provincial fields of jurisdiction.

And Premier Alex Campbell of Prince Edward Island said he would like to see a clearer separation of powers between the federal government and the provinces.

Premier Hatfield believes Quebec should not have any special status that could not be applied to all provinces.

He accepted, however, the fact that there are two distinct societies in Canada.

"When I go to Quebec, or to northwest New Brunswick, it's not a question of opinion. It's a fact. I see it, I sense it. It's like saying China doesn't exist because you don't recognize it," he said.

Premier Regan recognizes that Quebec has a "special problem," the responsibility to conserve the French culture. And to cope with this problem, Quebec needs a special status.

Premier Campbell does not foresee any great changes in the country. There is a sizable alternative, he told Mr. Sauvageau—either one country and two languages or two countries.

While he did not want to force federalism on a province, Premier Campbell said there was nothing better than the present system "for all Canadians whether they live in British Columbia, Nova Scotia or Quebec."

If Quebec separated and became one nation, "we would have to be good neighbors but we wouldn't have any obligations."

McGovern Fund Audit Requested

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying the results could be "very revealing," President Nixon's finance committee has asked congressional investigators to audit Senator George McGovern's fund - raising records as closely as they did the Republicans'.

"There must be no reluctance on the part of the General Accounting Office to pursue as McGovern's staff the kind of investigation it has with the (Republican) finance committee," Maurice Stans, the Republican committee chairman, said Sunday.

The former commerce secretary's four-page statement, distributed by Nixon's official Committee to Re-elect the President, said:

"It is apparent that the strong and persistent pressures placed on the GAO by Democratic members of the Congress are responsible to a high degree for the inaccuracies in the report."

The GAO report suggested that up to $300,000 of Republican campaign funds had been misused and turned the case over to the U.S. justice department. It said "it was impossible to close certain gaps" in the investigation involving funds donated to the Republicans but which turned up in the account of a Miami man, one of five arrested in an apparent attempt to bug the Democratic party headquarters in Washington.

U.S. Seeking To Cut Share Of UN Costs

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States has launched a new campaign to reduce the American assessment for the United Nations to "no more than 25 per cent" of the world organization's regular budget.

The U.S. rate in 1972 amounted to 31.53 per cent, or $64 million, the highest of the 132 UN members.

In his first budget as UN secretary-general, Kurt Waldheim has asked the Genera? Assembly to approve expenditures of $254 million for 1973, an increase of 5.77 per cent from 1972.

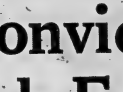
Hanoi Raids Heavy

SAIGON (CP) — American fighter - bombers destroyed or damaged more than 170 buildings Sunday in the heaviest raids in 4½ years in the Hanoi - Haiphong area, the U.S. command announced today.



Heavy B-52 bombers made strikes Sunday and early today in the Saigon area, the closest raids to the South Vietnamese capital since the 1968 Tet offensive.

The command said that air force and navy jets attacked 20 different targets in the Hanoi-Haiphong area, including three army barracks, the northeast rail line to China, railway yards, supply barges, storage and fuel depots, and anti-aircraft missile and artillery batteries.

It was the heaviest attack in the Hanoi-Haiphong area since March 1968, U.S. officials said.

North Vietnam said five American jets were shot down and some pilots captured. The U.S. Command made no mention of any losses.

Air force Phantoms using 2,-000-pound laser bombs destroyed two railway bridges on the northeast rail line, the air force said.

"I was recalled for car theft."

Volunteer Army Aim Of Nixon

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — President Nixon called Defence Secretary Melvin Laird to the Western White House today to report on efforts to create an all-volunteer Army.

Some Pentagon officials hope to place the military draft in mothballs in mid-1973 and keep it on a standby basis in case of a defence emergency. "The days of the selective service draft are numbered," Laird said earlier this month.

The president and Mrs. Nixon got in some low-key campaigning at their oceanside home here Sunday night, entertaining some 400 show business personalities at a poolside reception.

After greeting each guest, Nixon pleased the crowd by talking about his past for motion pictures and adding, "But I like my movies made in Hollywood, made in America."

Pair Caught Near Prison

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

WARKWORTH — Three inmates of the Warkworth Medium Security Institution remain at large today following a track - and - field type escape by five men this weekend.

At 10.20 p.m. Saturday five inmates of the prison were in full view of members of the staff, "put their heads down and ran for the fence" a spokesman for the prison administration said.

"They are all young and healthy and don't have too much trouble getting out," he said, referring to the scaling of a 14-foot fence which surrounds Warkworth.

One of the men, whose sentences ranged from two to 20 years was armed. Security forces have been calling on Ontario Provincial Police for assistance.

Between 40 and 50 officers combining police and guard patrols began combing the area. Roadblocks were set up.

Sometime between 5 and 6 a.m. Sunday, a car containing what prison officials believe to be three of the inmates drove through a roadblock at the junction of Highway 30 and county road 9 near Warkworth.

The car went off the road, crossed a field and became tangled in fencing as the driver attempted to enter another field. Three men emerged and prison guards, who had manned the roadblock, gave chase. The car's occupants were lost in the undergrowth. The car had been reported stolen by a Campbellford resident visiting in the area. Damage to the vehicle was slight.

At 3:35 p.m. Sunday, two men were observed by a prison area resident who contacted Brighton OPP. The arrival of Constables Robert Clayton and Raymond McNicol at that detachment led to the arrest of two escapers.

McKeough Said to Own Share in Subdivision He Okayed

TORONTO (CP) — For the second time in a month, an Ontario cabinet minister is involved in a controversy over land investments.

This time, the man on the spot is Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough and the controversy involves his interests in a Chatham, Ont., subdivision for which he had to give subdivision approval in 1969 while he was municipal affairs minister.

The McKeough affair comes less than a month after it was discovered that Dalton Bales, attorney-general, and two partners purchased 99 acres of land in Markham Township at a time when the province was privately considering a plan to promote growth to the east of Toronto.

Opposition leaders called for the resignation of Mr. McKeough.

"He will have to hand in his resignation," said Stephen Lewis, NDP leader. "The premier will have to accept it."

Robert Nixon, Liberal leader, said Mr. McKeough's approval of subdivision plans was a "clear-cut and serious conflict of interest."

"His usefulness would be very much in question if he is inclined to stay on if the facts are as described."

Mr. McKeough's land holdings were disclosed Monday in a copyrighted story in The Globe and Mail.

The newspaper said Mr. McKeough's approval was necessary before South Chatham Estates Ltd., could proceed with one of the largest subdivisions in Chatham. Mr. McKeough and other members of his family own 25 per cent of Southam Chatham Estates, Ltd.

The Globe and Mail said company officials estimated they will make between $140,000 and $250,000 profit by the time development of the 75-acre subdivision is completed.

Mr. McKeough, appointed municipal affairs minister Nov. 23, 1967—still responsible for any future final departmental approvals for the company's lots.

Mr. McKeough is in Munich, Germany, on government business.

Donald Beeney, a press officer for Premier Wilson Davis, said Mr. McKeough had said, "I have discussed the entire matter with Premier Davis and any further comment will have to come from him."

Mr. Beeney also said that two weeks ago Mr. McKeough and the premier discussed Mr. McKeough's "assets and liabilities."

Mr. Davis said he will not comment on the matter until he

At Least 7 More Die In Ulster

BELFAST (CP) — Guerrillas kept up pressure on the British army today with shooting incidents here and in Londonderry after a weekend of violence which claimed at least seven lives.

The army said the weekend deaths—which raised to 538 the number to die in three years of violence—included nine since police report three skulls were found in the debris after a bomb exploded in Carrickfergus Racetrack, 20 miles southwest of Belfast.

One man, believed to be a guerrilla planting the bomb, was confirmed to have died but medical experts were studying remains before officially adding the other two to the total.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the Republican Northern Resistance Movement, Michael Farrel, told a protest meeting in Belfast Sunday that an internment order may be issued this week for Ann Walsh, 18. She was questioned last week by police in connection with a bombing.

Double Levies to Top Agenda

Complaints about having to pay for both county planning and Quinte Planning are expected to highlight a closed-door gathering of local leaders and provincial government officials tomorrow.

The meeting, called to discuss the problems of Quinte Planning Board, is aiming to gather the heads of QPB municipalities for face-to-face dialogue with officials, Ed Cornelius and Bill Farrow, of the ministry of treasury, economics and intergovernmental affairs.

Murray and Brighton townships had Brighton Village contributing both to QPB and Northumberland Durham planning, will be asking for relief from the burden of paying double levies. Sidney and Thurlow expect any decision applied to Murray and the two Brighton will also apply to them (as they pay for Hastings County planning as well as QPB).

Quinte Planning Board chairman Jack Bush says the chances are good that the problem will emerge at these townships from county planning.

He says "I think we have gotten through to McKeough (provincial treasurer Darcy McKeough) on that."

Murray and Brighton township and village will be arguing they pay among the highest per capita levies for planning in the province because of the dual payments.

Sidney, Brighton and Thurlow were given a substantial cut in the amount they must pay by decision of county council. The council has permitted to the two municipalities to pay about 25 per cent of the regular county levy.

However, one local official says "we do not get any service for it. It is like throwing money in the waste-basket."

County clerk - treasurer and county administrator Carl Bateman explained the county position on possible release of the townships from county levies in an interview today.

He said Sidney and Thurlow have agreed to accept the reduced - rate county levy. This was negotiated," he said, "it is not so much the amount of money but the principle involved of the thing."

Mr. Bateman, says like the townships in question, the county of Hastings has also made its position known to Keough — a position in opposition to release of the townships from county levies.

Reeve Bush says assurance will be given during the session in the Sidney township offices that all municipalities will get their fair share of Quinte planning.

"One of the problems has been that everyone wanted his share in the first year," he said.

Murray and the two Brighton area reps expected to tell the meeting they have had trouble getting service from QPB but QPB planning director says no request for, services by these townships has been turned down.

One source said today "these two municipalities are bothered . . . unless something concrete comes out of the meeting they will stay opposed to Quinte Planning."

The broader question of getting value for tax dollars will be raised by Trenton whose mayor, Duncan McDonald, will ask what is in QPB for us. He feels the QPB levy may be better spent.

However, the most far-riding issue will be the question of double levies.

Carl Bateman expressed the personal view that release of the townships from the levies would be an erosion of county authority.

Last Day of Work

Perry Parks, 18, (right) was one of five students working for the city parks department during the summer who have won the praise of city parks managers. "We have been most pleased with the performance of the students this year who have proved to be an exceptional bunch," said Ed Burleigh, general foreman. Norm Pigden, helping with the boat- and manager of Zwicky's island marina once, said "the boys have been great." The students were assigned to every aspect of the parks program. Some planted flowers and maintained gardens while others patrolled beaches and parks for garbage. It is expected that more will be hired next summer. Both high school and university students were used in the program. Perry leaves the park today to return to school with the remainder of the boys continuing until Sept. 1.

500 Attend AA Meeting

More than 500 members of the alcoholics anonymous organization representing every province and several states, gathered in the Legion Sunday for their annual conference.

"You had to be there to understand what the group is all about," said Bob.

Only first names are used to protect the anonymity of all concerned.

"The real weapon of the AA is the fellowship that develops between members," said Bob. "We can't cure the disease, but we can arrest it through friendship."

The subject of the conference was the arresting of the problem before it ruins the person.

Panel discussions were held during the day with three speakers on each panel representing Montreal, Ottawa and Niagara Falls.

"This is the healthiest part of the program," said Bob. "People with troubles can sit down and listen to one of these speakers and really relate to them. They can see how the speaker fought the battle and draw knowledge and courage."

The guest speaker was Torontonian Matts. Matts, an associate member of this correspondence, addressed the group with — what was termed — "his personal success story".

"These are the things that people in our position really need to hear," said Bob. "We need to know about people who made it, to give us the initiative to follow suit."

Organizers for the conference were exuberant about the facilities and the quality of service at the Legion, which is only designed to hold a group of 500.

Conference will be held in Belleville again next year.

They are David MacDonald, 19, of Brantford, servant five years for robbery with violence, theft and escaping custody, and Allan Merredth, 21, of St. Catharines, serving two years for theft. No violence was reported in their robbery.

The three men who remain at large have been identified as Terrance Potvin, 21, of Ottawa, serving four years and 10 months for break and enter, possession of stolen property and parole violation; Frederick Koch, 24, of Toronto, serving six years for robbery and possession of narcotics and Cyril Huard, 27, also of Toronto, serving 20 years for robbery, and attempted robbery.

Institution director, William Westlake, said Huard had already served four years of his sentence at a federal reformatory when he was brought before the magistrate to the institution seven days later. He said Huard would have been eligible for parole in the near future.

Director Westlake said the prison realizes the potential for the weekend as far as prisoner activities were concerned.

There was no undue reaction other than that he said.

He said this was the first escape in a year, describing Warkworth's record of escapes as "one of the lowest in the country."

Among participants in the hunt was Constable Edward Arthurs, Belleville detachment, OPP dog handler, who arrived at the scene with Sabre, the young German shepherd which has had wide experience, including assistance in capturing one of the Milhaven Prison escapees this month.

Car Bursts Into Flames

A Toronto man was forced to flee his car last night when it burst into flames on Highway 37.

Andrew Anka, 324 Wellesley St., East, watched as his vehicle burned at the rear of Thurlow's fifth concession. Department of fire and airport police and Ontario Provincial Police were both called to the scene.

The mishap occurred at 3:45 a.m.

Charge Laid

A Stirling man has been charged with break and enter with intent after being found inside the Canadian Tire Store on Coleman St. early Sunday morning.

Stephen Douglas Gliddon, 21, of 122 Frankford Road, Stirling, was discovered in the building shortly after 4 a.m. Entry was gained by a slipped lock.

returns to Canada in a week from London.

Darcy McKeough's older brother, Stewart, was asked last week by The Globe and Mail whether Darcy had provided money in South Chatham for Stewart's "Yes," said Stewart McKeough.

Stewart McKeough, who is secretary and one of the directors of the company, declined to say how much of the profit the provincial treasurer will personally collect.

Stewart McKeough said his brother was aware an application for subdivision approval by the municipal affairs department would be made by the company when Darcy bought four-fifths of the firm.

Stewart McKeough said there was no conflict of interest in the decision of family members to invest in the stock of the private companies and the appointment of Darcy McKeough as municipal affairs minister in December 1967.

"No way," said Stewart McKeough. "His position had nothing to do at all with our decision to give it a chance to make money."

Darcy McKeough resigned his interests in Triple Ten Investments, incorporated Feb. 8, 1968. This company had no small subdivision in Chatham as was first reported. It was given government approval and was partly developed, Stewart McKeough said.

Triple Ten Investments sold 39 lots and five cottages and made a small profit."

Stewart McKeough said Darcy's income is that great. "It wouldn't be enough to send him to Harvard."

The family then searched for another property, said Stewart McKeough.

The family became one fourth owner of Quarters Development Ltd. which was incorporated Oct. 29, 1969. The company acquired title to 77 acres on Nov. 25, 1969, which it says is subdivided. The land was purchased for $275,000 and will be subdivided into 215 lots, which will sell for $1,000.

Stewart McKeough said, "It was a good piece of property and Darcy was given a chance at subdividing the land."

Stewart McKeough said he considers the family's investment in the company as a loan and that he and Darcy McKeough attended company meetings.

Stewart McKeough said he and other company officials never consulted Darcy McKeough about subdivision options.

"In no way shape or form did we go to Darcy and say excuse that line or speed it up," said Stewart McKeough. "I'm not crazy.

"We'd have to have 16 holes in our head to put any pressure on him," said Stewart McKeough. "How obvious do you think that would be?"

Stewart McKeough said he did not know his brother would be minister responsible for giving government approval for the company's subdivision plan.

Stewart McKeough said that applications for subdivision approval was received by municipal affairs officials including Mr. Farrow in 1969. The plan received draft approval from Darcy McKeough Dec. 20, 1969, according to G. M. Farrow, director of planning administration in Mr. McKeough's treasury and economics department.

Draft approval crashes a developer to proceed with his development, subject to specific conditions regarding services such as roads, water and sewers.

Darcy McKeough gave final approval of 19 lots in Scotton Bay, 1970. In June, 1971, Dalgety Bales, who had become municipal affairs minister, gave final approval for 16 more lots in Scotton Bay. Mr. Farrow and Bales gave final approval for 40 more lots.

Cars Blaze In Trenton

TRENTON (Staff) — Trenton firemen had little chance to catch up on early morning sleep. Twice this weekend they were called out in the small hours to fight car fires.

At 3:15 a.m. Saturday firemen extinguished flames in the front seat of a 1961 Pontiac owned by Mrs. Kathleen Archer of 28 Lorne Ave. The car parked in her driveway had the front seat and ceiling upholstery virtually destroyed.

And then just as the weekend was officially over, an alarm was called in at 12:46 a.m. today at the Quaker Oats factory at 106 Dufferin Ave.

A 1967 Envoy Epic owned by plant employee Raymond Lufkuser 119 College St. E., Belleville was on fire. Damage was confined to the interior and engine compartment.

No estimate of damage in either fire has been released.

PEOPLE HAD BOILS IN BIBLICAL TIMES
They are often mentioned in the Bible. A boil's redness, swelling, local "tenderness", and great tenderness as a fluid-filled core develops, gives a picture of a typical infection. Boils are usually caused by a staphylococcal variety of bacteria which remains confined to the area of their entry.
It is called a boil when on the skin's surfaceyou abscess when it involves deep tissues. A carbuncle is a cluster of boils and a felon is a special type of boil affecting the thick tissues of the pad of a finger-tip. Never squeeze a boil or a pimple. This spreads the infection. Diabetics, patients with vascular disease, hardening or arteries or Buerger's disease, require immediate medical attention.

Bay Yields Two Bikes

Two divers combing the bottom this summer have recovered a pair of motorcycles, one intact, the other stripped to frame and engine.

Found were a 1969 Triumph motorcycle, stolen from Robert Pair of RR4, Belleville, last October, and part of a 1946 Harley Davidson, reported stolen from Kelly Trahan of 582 Sidney St. nearly a year ago.

Meter a Ringer

TRENTON (Staff) — Some time ago, Trenton PUC employees installed a water recorder and transmitter unlike any of the 13 others used in the town.

According to PUC commissioners, who met Thursday, selection of this particular unit was not authorized by them.

Apparently, the consulting firm of Gore and Storrie Ltd. approved schematic drawings of a Fischer - Porter Canada, Ltd. product . . . the unit purchased by Albert Delerse Construction Limited for $1,-500.

However, Gore and Storrie say they gave no final approval.

Mr. Delesse has informed the PUC he won't remove the transmitter-recorder because he will lose $1,900 if he returns it to the company.

The commissioners say their tender called for purchase of a Bristol system identical to 12 now in use, "or an approved equal."

PUC manager Douglas Manlow will meet with Gore and Storrie representatives in Toronto on Monday, to see what arrangements can be made.

Surprise Catch

MADOC (Special) — A Pennsylvania angler landed a 10-pound muskie last Sunday when still fishing in Moira Lake for small pickerel. He was using a small hook baited with a minnow.

Paul Marshall of Rochester, Penn., reported that the fish measured 34 inches long. He has been fishing for pickerel and bass since 1941, and has landed about 10 muskies during that period.

Mr. Marshall, who has been coming to Madoc every year since 1951, says that fishing has been good so far this summer.

Sgt. Bouchard and Wife Dorothy Share Proud Feeling

Sergeant Awarded Medal

TRENTON — A Middleton Park flight engineer was named among 19 Canadians honored for acts of bravery in an announcement from Ottawa on Saturday.

Sgt. John Daniel "Butch" Bouchard, 28, of 38A Regina Crescent of Canadian Forces Base Trenton, risked his life to control an aircraft fire that threatened the lives of personnel at Canadian Forces Base Uplands at Ottawa on Dec. 12, 1967.

Interviewed at his home on Saturday, Sgt. Bouchard was surprised to learn of his good fortune. He said that although he was proud he was selected to receive the medal the other three members of the crew on duty that day, whose names had slipped from his mind in the interval, were equally deserving. His story of the incident goes like this.

"It's hard to remember now because it all happened so quickly then. Another corporal was inspecting the inside of one of the big fuel tanks on one of the C130 Hercules aircraft in No. 12 hangar. In the tank in the wing beside it was about 4,000 pounds of jet fuel.

"It was a malfunction in the extension cord to the neon light being used for illumination that set off the fire apparently. There were still puddles of fuel laying on the bottom of the empty compartment."

Bouchard, then a corporal crew chief, grabbed a foam extinguisher nearby and went down into the tank to the rescue of his companion already engulfed in flames.

He pointed out that lot of credit should go to the young airman who continued to feed him compressed air from an apparatus from the top of the wing. The corporal who was saved suffered some burns on the face, otherwise no one else was seriously injured.

Sgt. Bouchard emphasized on Saturday he intended to accept the medal on behalf of his crew as well as himself if it was possible.

A native of Ottawa, he was serving with 436 Transport Squadron at the time of the fire and moved to Trenton with the unit when it was transferred here. He is the father of seven children, five sons and two daughters.

The announcement on Saturday follows on the heels of another piece of good fortune the Bouchard family experienced about a month ago. They won $4,500, the second prize in the Yardmen's draw.

Busy Signal Foils Forger

A call from an alleged Bell Canada employee nearly cost a Belleville woman several hundred dollars Thursday.

The woman was told Bell wanted her to leave the phone off the hook for half an hour while tests were made on the line.

While she was following orders, a man entered the Royal Bank of Canada on North Front St. to cash a cheque on the woman's account. The teller phoned to verify the cheque, only to find her line busy, and told the man he would have to wait.

Bell Canada claims it does not make such calls to customers.

Meanwhile, Belleville police are holding the cheque.

Response Good For Clinic Funds

MADOC (Special) — The canvas of the Madoc Medical Centre is continuing, as workers report a good response to the cause. More than $9,000 has been raised so far, and the canvass will go on as long as anyone is interested.

Mrs. Terry Fox, Mrs. Gail Blakely and Mrs. Robert Kirkwood have been knocking on doors in the residential section and Jack Stewart, together with some councillors, is canvassing businessmen.

Donations are also being accepted at the Toronto-Dominion Bank.

Preliminary work is now going on at the site of the medical centre. High tension wire over the property has been moved, the survey has been made and legal documents are in the process of preparation. A revised set of sketch plans was presented to the board of directors this week and the services of R. M. Kostuck Associates were engaged to prepare working plans.

Miami Furore

The Chief of Police said it best with regard to the demonstrations at the Republican convention. "If these people are for peace in Vietnam," he asked pointedly, "why are they not for peace in Miami?"

Consider the incident in which a man trying to hold his seven-year-old girl in one arm and his eight-year-old boy in another being pushed and punched while cops pulled leans over and screams "Murderer!" repeatedly in the terrified girl's face. Consider the raging, contorted faces, the psychopathic abandon of the tire slashers, the complete lack of restraint on the part of these missionaries of hate.

No worse, some will say, than the ghastly events of an immoral war in Southeast Asia, but there is a difference between conflict of ideology on the battlefield and everyday conduct at home. The act of legitimate protest does not have to be reduced to the trappings of anarchy.

To their credit not all of the young people involved in the Miami protest liked what they saw. Some interviewed said they had been in favor of a peaceful demonstration. But of course that is not the objective of those who manipulate these events. Rather it is to create as much trouble and disruption as possible and get arrested in the process. That accomplished, the enemies of America and of the free world can point, in their hypocrisy-ridden way, to a "repressive, fascist, imperialist" society.

Voyage of Legend

Isabelle Dombro is a native of Edmonton and a former teacher in the Eastern Arctic and northern Saskatchewan and Alberta. An attractive blonde woman, she and her husband Dietrich, a 47-year-old native of Konigsberg in what then was East Prussia and their two sons, Lawrence 8 and Dexter 16, have set off on an unusual voyage. But let's begin at the beginning.

Theirs is a real story of romance and adventure. Mr. Dombro came to Canada in 1951, worked at a variety of jobs from prospecting and drilling to geophysics and real estate. He and his wife met on an Indian reserve in northern Alberta and after their children were born they set out to see the world. They spent four years in Germany, a year in Morocco, another in Austria and eventually headed for Lebanon.

It is from here — from the ancient port of Tyre — that the Dombros have embarked on their latest and most ambitious exploit. Clad in Phoenician dress they have set sail in a plywood ketch, constructed in two months by an amateur boat builder in Beirut, on a 35,000-mile, two-year voyage across two oceans to the west coast of North America. Their objective: to prove that it was possible for the Phoenicians to have discovered America 3,000 years ago, centuries before Columbus — and of course before the Vikings who are believed to have inhabited a remote corner of Newfoundland for a time.

The idea for the adventure, incredible as it may seem, came from legends they heard from Indians in British Columbia about "bearded white men with hooked noses landing on West coast cons ago." In Beirut they discussed these legends with a professor at the American University there and this led to a conversation about the Phoenicians and their far-reaching voyages of exploration, legend says to Scandinavia, the Cape of Good Hope, China — and the Dombros believe, America.

We are not all of Dombro mettle, but in contemplating their lifestyle, their courage in a fascinating past and their willingness to venture into an unknown and perhaps hazardous future, there is a lesson for our somewhat artificial society and our often puny undertakings.

Perhaps Mrs. Dombro's experience places in the best relief our cosmic importance or insignificance as the case may be.

"After 10 years I was ready for a change. I loved teaching Eskimos and Indians but I was becoming narrow and I think that is the trouble with a lot of classrooms in Canada today.— the narrowmindedness of the teacher."

But let's not blame the teacher altogether, for are not most of us cast in a rather narrow mold, compared with people such as these?

Future Election Issue

Ottawa and Provinces Debate Spheres of Influence

By FARMER TESSINGTON
From The Intelligencer's
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—There is not sufficient time before the coming general election for the issue of federal and provincial rights to develop as the key one of the campaign. But if present trends continue, there is little doubt that in the election after this, the issue will be one of the top two or three.

The debate about whether the federal or provincial governments should have greater or lesser powers and over which areas of responsibility each should exercise authority is, of course, not a new one. It has been going on since Confederation in one form or another. But for a long period in our history, particularly in the Mackenzie King era and through the war years, the issue was largely dormant.

It was only after the war, and more precisely in the last 10 to 15 years, that the issue has become rapidly larger and more important. Despite a series of federal-provincial conferences, it remains as knotty a problem as it ever has been in our history.

Coincident with this revival of provincial muscle-flexing or, perhaps because of it, Canadians have been electing liberal and independently-minded provincial leaders. One needs only to think of Premier Bennett in British Columbia, former premier Manning in Alberta, Tommy Douglas and the late Ross Thatcher in Saskatchewan, John Robarts in Ontario, and even Joey Smallwood in Newfoundland, to realize that the federal government has been faced with some tough bargainers in recent years.

The drive for greater provincial autonomy has had its greatest expression in Quebec with successive governments battling Ottawa on almost every front—opting out of programs, negotiating separate deals and generally, in the view of many other Canadians, throwing a monkey wrench into the comparatively superb workings of joint policies and programs.

There now are definite signs that some other provincial premiers are taking a more militant attitude toward Ottawa. Alberta's Premier Peter Lougheed has declared that Quebec must no longer be isolated. He has been quoted as saying that either Alberta or Ontario must stand with Quebec so it is not left alone "even if we do not wholeheartedly support Quebec."

Buoyed by such unusual expressions of support, Quebec Premier Bourassa has waxed little time in setting the talks afoot and reopened talks with Prime Minister Trudeau on the contentious social affairs question, as well as on a new sharing of financial resources and greater control in such areas as broadcasting, urban affairs and manpower. The recent premiers' conference in Halifax gave clear warning that the provinces are going to be tougher to deal with in the future, not just in regard to the contentious off-shore mineral rights argument, but in a wide variety of other issues.

Even Ontario, which received outstanding leadership in the past on the constitutional issue from former premier Robarts, has been making nonsensical noises about establishing its own consulate in the United States.

It is true there are some areas where the federal government should relinquish some of its authority to the provinces. As Paul Hellyer suggests, it doesn't make much sense for Ottawa to be passing judgment on whether an NHA house can be built four or six feet from the lot line, or whether a bathroom must have 100 or 120 square feet of space.

But the federal government, of whatever political stripe, must display a great deal of backbone on the larger issues if Canada is not to become balkanized. Politicians of every province should be encouraged to think of themselves as Canadians first and Albertans, Quebecers, or Nova Scotians second.

A period when the seeds of separatism are finding fertile grounds is not a time for the federal government to become a mere cypher or just a collector of taxes money to be handed over to the provinces to spend. Canadians from sea to sea should be guaranteed not only equal opportunity but equal services and facilities. Only a strong central government can do that.

Election Neuroses

By DON O'HEARN
From The Intelligencer's
Queen's Park Bureau

Two groups that will be most happy to see the federal election act of the war are the opposition parties here.

Through a curious set of circumstances both the Ontario Liberals and the Ontario NDP are quite hung up until Prime Minister Trudeau gets the national vote over with.

First the Liberals.

Their circumstance, of course, is that they are trying to operate without, for practical purposes, a leader.

Bob Nixon has resigned, in the meantime is acting as a caretaker, and though he is doing a good job in this capacity there is the point at the top to drive the party.

The missing drive could be provided even if the party could schedule a convention—get some sort of one.

But until the Trudeau election is out of the way it can't do this —as just one incidental reason convention centres must be booked months in advance.

So the party is marking time. The NDP is in a really curious situation.

This is that it has a father and son at leaders.

Though this possibly would not be recognized, the actions of son Stephen Lewis in Ontario are to quite some extent controlled by the fact that Father David Lewis heads the national party.

In Ontario, Stephen has had troubles in the party.

The presence of the Waffle group has been the public and the obvious one.

But it has not been the only one.

The NDP has a great deal of internal unrest at the moment. It is a mixed-up party.

There are those who believe that Stephen Lewis himself is one of those most mixed up. That in fact, he has considered double ds as to whether he wants to continue to lead the Ontario party.

But he hardly would say anything about these with a federal election campaign imminent. Certainly he wouldn't get out of line for fear this would react against the party nationally, and against his father.

Hudson Institute Chief's View

U.S. Can Do Without Our Resources

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The physically and mentally big Herman Kahn, head of the Hudson Institute in New York State, the best known of American "think tanks," says the United States can get along without Canadian resources altogether.

In fact, says the controversial and constantly challenged Kahn, the United States can not only dispense with Canada altogether, but can be entirely self sufficient into the 21st Century.

Subsidiary countries for the natural resources more than ever vital to the U.S. economy, iron ore, gas, oil and other minerals, says Kahn, include Australia, Brazil and South Siberia. So, says Kahn, who needs Canada anyway?

Mr. Kahn's extreme commentary made in Ottawa recently is ridiculous. The United States with only six per cent of the world's population, is consuming close to 60 per cent of the world's resources, a disastrous percentage.

The plump and pompous Kahn might have predicted if the majority of the world's peoples, living at subsistency levels, will still put up with this monstrous imbalance by the year 2000. That's the miraculous year when many of Mr. Kahn's wild prophecies are supposed to become realities.

Nevertheless, the man who thought up the word "megadeaths" for the tens of millions which would be killed for sure in the first drop of a nuclear weapon in a future nuclear war, does have a message for Canadians—especially the ones in Ottawa coping with our short term and long term foreign economic policies. What kind of resources export policy are we going to have, faced with a U.S. industrial and consumer market, whose demand for natural gas—and later fresh water—is going to be almost insatiable?

Unless we lay down firm ground rules, the Americans will want to bargain for all our natural gas, all our water. And the latest rejection of a major application for U.S. gas imports by the National Energy Board in Ottawa, indicates the government is aware our total reserves of gas are not limitless.

Brazil, presently ruled by a right wing, pro-business military regime favorable to the United States, may possibly also be in this position. That military regime seized power in 1964 from a quasi Marxist president, who was about to make his country into a huge Cuba of South Americas with no resources of any kind going to capitalist America.

As for Siberia, the cost of mining its gas reserves across Asia, over at least two zones to the impatient U.S. user, is staggering to visualize.

So, the onus is on our future federal governments, whether Liberal again, or perhaps Conservative, to bargain hard with Washington over resources policy.

And this is not all. We saw perhaps, the toughest example of U.S. self-interest since the reciprocity idea in 1911, in President Nixon's restrictive industrial legislation of last fall. The U.S. 10-per-cent surcharge and the DISC program hit hard at our secondary manufacturing industries for a time.

It is likely our foreign economic policy, rather than our foreign policy per se, will demand more attention from Canadian governments for the rest of the 1970s.

Count Leo Tolstoy, one of the world's great classical writers, was born in 1828—at Yasnaya Polkana, Russia. Tolstoy did not distinguish himself at university but by 1854 he was making his mark as a writer of a number of brilliant sketches of the Crimean War. After his return from the war, Tolstoy freed the serfs on his estate, became revolutionary in his educational schemes for the peasants and became known as a moral reformer. He married in 1862 and began his two masterpieces, War and Peace and Anna Karenina. He continued writing for a number of years, gradually giving himself up to politics and to the needs of the poor.

1949—The Chinese Communists announced the formation of a "people's government" in Mukden.

Common Market Parley

Schumann's Visit to UK Heralds European Summit

By CY FOX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The current visit to Britain by Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann of France indicates a new stage in the intensive diplomatic preparations for the proposed conference of Western European leaders in Paris later this year.

The summit conference would bring together leaders from the six present members states of the European Common Market along with top men from the four countries which plan to join the Market in the near future.

The conference is unofficially slated to take place in Paris at a time when Britain, Norway, into the Market will be barely two months away.

But the French, who seemingly have been anxious to get most the meeting, now want to ensure that the leaders who attend are not to have a delaying agenda for discussion.

Some observers even suggest that French President Pompidou wants a degree of prior assurance that the conference will end in an atmosphere of agreement.

In any case, it is certain that the meeting will be a crucial one, with the participants discussing the whole future evolution of the Common Market after the period of enlargement has been completed.

Councellor Willy Brandt of West Germany, whom Schumann visited prior to the French diplomat's British trips, said he assumes the suggested October date for the conference still stands and that preparatories will form the central theme of discussion for the assembled leaders.

The future shape of the world monetary system, as well as that of the enlarged Common Market is a question certain to provoke controversy at the conference, at the Paris meeting.

One source of dispute might take the form of differences between France on the one hand and West Germany on the other about the proposal—much discussed in French circles — for an eventual rise in the official price of gold.

Raising the price of gold would mean a devaluation of the American dollar as calculated on the basis of that until.

This in turn would diminish from the gold value of Bonn's immense dollar reserves

Even within the Europe an context, grounds for dispute among the Common Western countries are not hard to find.

For instance, French sources concede that the entry of the British pound earlier this year poses the likelihood of disagreement.

The French would like to see London re-establishing a fixed parity for sterling as soon as possible.

But they fear that the British plan to delay such a step as much as possible will certainly until some time after the Jan. 1 date set for Britain's official entry into the Market.

On the political front, disagreements are developing over whether there should be discussion of thorny questions such as the possible establishment of a permanent European political secretariat.

After Schumann's meeting at Chequers with Prime Minister Heath, British officials joined in expressions of confidence that the summit meeting would be held in Paris at the proposed time.

But whenever such a conference materializes, it will be faced with great issues magnified even further by the prospect of bringing together East-West meetings in the near future about the vast question of European political security.

Australia's Black Aboriginals Seek Recognition, Land Rights

CANBERRA (CP) — Talk of Black Power is being heard in "white" Australia. It is more a cry of desperation than determination, for the black aboriginals of Australia are one per cent of the 13 million population. They lack numbers, influence and organization.

But the cause of Australia's 140,000 full or mixed-blood aboriginals is stirring the conscience of the country's whites more than ever before.

This white concern over the plight of the minority blacks reached its climax after 200 police battled with some 60 aboriginals and their supporters on lawns opposite Parliament House in Canberra and 100 others in the aboriginals had been living in.

For six months the aboriginals had camped on the lawns, calling their protest tents the "Aboriginal Embassy." Thousands of tourists who visit the national capital had regarded the "Embassy" as an added attraction and had gone to see it to express support and put money in a collection box.

But the "Embassy" was more than a gesture for tourists. To the aboriginals it symbolized their demand for land rights. It was a deliberate attempt to embarrass the government which has refused land rights and embarrass it did.

Within two hours of a special ordinance being gazetted banning camping on commonwealth land, the police moved in with a surprising show of force. The tents came down, arrests were made, protesters and police were taken to hospital.

Now the Parliament House lawns are cleared of the "eyesore" and gardeners have been working to restore the grass to its usual lush greenness.

But the scar of aboriginal protest is with Australians to stay. Australian aboriginals have no rights as a group to land on this nation-continent where they have lived, according to anthropologists, for as long as 20,000 years.

Since the white man first settled here 200 years ago, he has acquired the land, the law and the logic. What aboriginal problem there was in the early days was settled according to the white man's own devices and sense of justice for the early pioneers were handy with the gun and in their isolation were responsible to no one but themselves.

The aboriginal was in no position to protest, let alone resist. Today things are different. Among the aboriginal community are some angry young men using the language of the American Negro. Their heroes tend to be more like Sokely Carmichael than Martin Luther King. "Pig" is the commonly used word for "policeman."

After the destruction of the "Aboriginal Embassy" on July 30, these angry young men were telling the newspapers and TV interviewers of the need for violence to fight the aboriginal cause. Black Power and the American experience were cited as models for the black struggle in Australia.

There are 20 aboriginal ghettos in Australia's cities where violent protest would be at all meaningful or effective. Most aboriginals live in the outback areas of the Northern Territory, Queensland and parts of New South Wales. So the aboriginals, in their relatively small numbers, must rely on strong white support in their fight for land rights, equality and dignity.

The most significant expression of white attitudes to the aboriginal question in Australia was in 1967 in a referendum on the transfer of law-making power from the state governments to the federal government. This involved changing the constitution but close to 90 per cent of Australians, regarding the referendum as a case of giving the aboriginals a better go, voted "Yes."

Since then little has in fact been done to satisfy the hopes raised by that referendum result. The feeling of injustice among aboriginals is in fact greater.

The government's stand against granting land rights for aboriginals is firm and inflexible. Shipping and Transport Minister Peter Nixon, a former interior minister who had responsibility for aboriginals in the Northern Territory, has crystallized the government's position by stating that land rights will not be granted because the government is against an "apartheid" settlement of the race problem in Australia.

The latest instance of land rights discontent came when a cattle station the government planned to buy for aboriginals was sold to an Adelaide businessman instead. Adding a touch of scandal to the deal was the fact that the station in South Australia was sold to the brother of the state's Liberal party branch president, Ian MacLachlan.

Federal Labor Opposition Leader Gough Whitlam demanded that the government act to get the property back and pledged that a Labor government would grant land rights to aboriginals.

Land rights are not the only aboriginal concern. Health official figures show that the infant death rate among aboriginals is 142 per thousand births compared with a national average of 17 per thousand births.

"Is aboriginal life cheaper than white life in Australia?" the angry young black men are asking.

And they are demanding better health services for aboriginals in outback areas.

The Road to Mandalay
A Highway for Smugglers

MANDALAY, Burma (AP) — The paddle steamers are still chunking along the Irrawaddy River on the road to Mandalay.

That's about all Rudyard Kipling would recognize in this crossroads town in upper Burma.

Scott of the last Kingdom of Burma, and an important administrative town of the British who toppled the Burmese monarch, Mandalay now is a major trading point for smugglers. They are doing great business under chairman Ne Win's "way to socialism."

"Smuggling keeps this country going," said a veteran observer of the Burmese scene.

It is easy to believe. The nationalized People's Shops are almost bare of goods. But wait down to Zegye market and you can buy almost anything you want, from imported cigarettes to black market Coca-Cola.

Rice, cattle, teakwood, metals like tungsten and gold and precious stones are smuggled into Thailand and sold for hard currency for a fraction of their value.

With this currency, the smugglers buy goods unobtainable in Burma—quality cloth, watches, plastic products, soaps, perfumes, radios, spare parts.

They sell these in market town like Mandalay at 100 percent profit to finance the next cycle of the smuggling.

The smugglers run risks, mostly from Burmese army troops who may stop them, seize the contraband to sell it themselves later on.

The Burmese smugglers hire security guards from the Karens and other ethnic minorities who are in rebellion against the central government. The Kachens charge five per cent tax for goods crossing the Thai border into Burma. For an extra fee they provide pack elephants, ponies and protection through their territory.

Mandalay is a relay point for goods coming from India, Laos and northern Thailand. Muslimen in lower Burma is another major smuggling town.

The smuggling has given Mandalay an atmosphere of prosperity that the capital Rangoon lacks. There are few motor vehicles, but transportation is provided by horse-drawn buggies equipped with hard acma tasseled harness and oil lamps.

Mandalay is also a Buddhist center of learning. There is a peak of Mandalay Hill it, covered with a giant hive of temples and monasteries. It takes an hour and a half to climb the steps.

The Burmese are amused at the palace now is military headquarters for the region.

The big turn-of-the-century steamers, some of which date back to the pre-war days of British administration, take three weeks to go from Rangoon to Bhamo near the Chinese border.

The only sign that the British were here for 63 years is a small tattered edifice of the Church of England.

Prophets of Doom?

ROME (AP) — Are they prophets of doom or "the conscience of mankind?"

Both these descriptions have been applied to the Club of Rome, an influential group of industrialists, scientists and economists trying to call attention to problems threatening social and economic progress in the world.

The club was founded in 1968 but remained little known prior to its report titled "The Limits of Growth." This recent study foresees the collapse of the human race if present growth rates continue and predicted levels are achieved.

In fact, the Club of Rome is not a club. Its only connection with Rome is that its president and founder, industrialist Aurelio Peccei, lives here.

It is an informal group of 75 persons of various nationalities and professions who meet from time to time in different cities.

"I like to think of us as an invisible college," said Peccei in an interview. "We are a multinational group with this in common: We want, in a civil way, to try to change the value system of the world in order to adapt it to present-day reality."

Peccei heads the Latin American division of Fiat. He says that giant auto-maker and the Volkswagen Foundation have provided the bulk of the club's financial support.

Volkswagen put up $250,000 to finance the study of the Limits of Growth, conducted at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"Perhaps we're the con science of mankind," he said.

Peccei predicts disaster for a world choked by a bursting population and pollution and short of natural resources." If the present growth rates continue.

How much time does mankind have?

"Maybe we have 10 or 20 years to right ourselves, for after that it will be too late. When the collapse comes, it will be sudden."

But Peccei said the world has the ability to cope with the crisis, provided man is willing to make sacrifices—to halt material progress and stabilize population to achieve equilibrium.

MD A Theologian

MONTREAL (CP) — Bruce Armstrong was a troubled man three years ago. He was a successful doctor with a good practice and a happy family but "I discovered I had stopped thinking."

Driving the problem home were the teen-agers who appeared in his office time and after time with drug-induced trauma.

"They asked me questions. Dr., Armstrong recalls. "and I didn't have the answers."

University seemed to offer a solution, however, and this spring, at the age of 47, he graduated from Loyola College strong says.

Accompanying the degree was the theology medal, awarded to "the student most creative and productive in the field of theology." His plans extend beyond merely studying theology. He says he would only need one more year of practical training to enter the ministry—a field "I'm considering after retirement from medicine.

Where does he find the time to study?

"I don't sleep very much.

"All my life I was a scientist. I never gave serious thought to questions like the relationship of man's mind—and man to the universe. But about eight years ago I suddenly realized I was uneducated." A scientist is very uneducated."

He has made time for teaching. Sunday school classes of young people aged 14 and 15 and also serves as an elder at Montreal West Presbyterian Church.

"Our society is not concerned with the individual," Dr. Armstrong says.

"It's automated, computerized. I realize now that in many of the technological ways I was seeing my pat ients this way."

His plans extend beyond merely studying theology. He says he would only need one more year of practical training to enter the ministry—a field "I'm considering after retirement from medicine.

Indian Woman Writer Ekes Out Meagre Livelihood

OLD CROW, Y. T. (CP) — Edith Josie, a 48-year-old Loucheux Indian woman whose News From Old Crow column has been reprinted by dozens of North American newspapers, says she's making so little money from writing that she has had to apply for welfare.

Miss Josie has been the Old Crow correspondent for the thrice-weekly Whitehorse Star since 1962 and writes about life in this Yukon Territory Indian village of 200, on the banks of the Porcupine River 80 miles north of the Arctic Circle.

Two daily newspapers—Edmonton Journal and Fairbanks, Alaska, News-Miner—also carry her columns on a regular basis and her detailed reports of village life have been printed intermittently by papers in Canada and the United States.

Edith Josie writes exactly as she talks, about things that are important to people in Old Crow—caribou migrations, muskrat trapping in the rugged Crow Flats muskeg country, the comings and goings of aircraft, the weather, hunting and fishing.

She writes with a disarming honesty about her friends and neighbors, using English words, but Loucheux tensing and phrasing. And somehow, the resulting blend produces prose that is both poignant and amusing, without resort to such frills as punctuation, correct grammar or spelling.

But Miss Josie says she is finding it difficult to keep bread on the table for herself and her three children.

She estimated that she earns less than $50 a month from her columns—her sole source of income.

To steal the phrase with which she starts each and every column from Old Crow, "here are the news" about Edith Josie:

She lives in a two-room uninsulated log cabin at the east end of the village that was built for her parents, now deceased, during the 1950s by the federal Indian affairs department.

The cabin is starkly furnished with a table, a couple of chairs and three beds pushed up against the rough wooden walls. It is heated by a wood stove that also is used for cooking, "and in winter it gets so cold inside as it does outside most of the time."

Miss Josie's brother lives with her and helps out occasionally. Chief Charlie Abel and the band council help her out with donations of food and clothing, as do her neighbors.

"It's kind of hard for me she said in an interview this summer. "I phone Indian affairs in Whitehorse to help me, if they could send me relief.

"They tell me I should write letter instead of phone collect. So I write letter but I don't get an answer. So I going to call them collect again, maybe if next payday don't have a letter on it."

She said she applied for social assistance for the first time two years ago, but was turned down. "They told me, you a news reporter, you shouldn't ask for help." This time, she has the backing of the band council.

Born in Eagle, Alaska, she moved with her parents to Old Crow in 1937 after completing Grade 7—at that, she has considerably more schooling than most of the adults in Old Crow.

Harry Boyle, then editor and publisher of The Star, selected her as Old Crow correspondent to round out his network of Yukon news reporters. The choice wasn't too difficult.

"There's no one else here then who can write the news. They never went to school to read and write and it's hard write the news then. They ask me if I write the news, just send them two, three sheets in longhand.

"They said it could go around and get the news on people, and also when plane comes into Old Crow I could put that in there—that's how I come to be writing the news.

The Star was fascinated with her first few dispatches and printed them verbatim—no editing, no correction of spelling errors, no changes or chopping of any kind. It's a tradition that has endured for a full decade.

During the 1960s The Star began publishing a yearly anthology of her columns entitled The Best of Edith Josie, for which she was given a 10-cent commission on every copy sold. The Star also pays her a flat correspondent's rate of $5 a column.

In 1966 Clark Irwin LTD. OF Toronto published a book of her columns, predictably entitled Here Are The News. The book is in its second printing and selling well. She gets a 10-per-cent royalty on the $3.95 selling price.

A Clark Irwin spokesman said in Toronto the book "was a great success" and described it as "a simplicissi piece of Canadiana." The first printing was "sold out completely" and there are "not very many copies left of the second printing."

But as Robert Erlan, current publisher of The Star, said: "Nobody gets rich writing a book that is published in Canada, and certainly, journalists don't ever get rich writing for Canadian newspapers."

In Miss Josie's column, readers can follow the progress of Stephen Frost and his fellow trappers during the spring muskrat trapping season on Crow Flats north of the village.

Her sense of what's important in Old Crow is distinctly different from the interpretation the rest of the world might put on any given event. For instance, when scientists crowded into Old Crow in 1963 to observe an eclipse of the sun, Edith wrote:

"Mr. Rev. J. Simon making nice feast with own money. Everybody had nice supper. They set table for white people and the Indians were eating on the ground by the mission. While they cook the sun is eclipse around 11 a.m."

Miss Josie gets a barrage of letters each year, asking her about trapping on the flats, the caribou migrations, hunting and requests for the "moosehead soup" recipe.

WRITES NEWS FROM THE NORTH — Edith Josie, a 48-yearold Loucheaux Indian who lives in a two-room log cabin in Old Crow, Yukon Territory, has been writing about life in the village for Canadian and American papers since 1962. Successful Living

Help Bridge the Generation Gap

By DORIS CLARK

You've heard them: "When I was a boy," "My mother would have turned over in her grave to see you do that!" "Things aren't like they used to be!"

We've all grinned and turned off the speaker who dares to recall what was once the way to do things.

Yet without the power to recall, to reminisce, we would have no sense of the continuous nature of life and no basis for judgment. The older person knows this, yet is baffled when his grandson scorns his longer look on life.

As one parent put it: "Thank God for the generation gap!" He felt if he hadn't learned anything in the extra 20 years he had on his own teen-agers, he would consider himself pretty dull. And wonder of wonders: When he expressed this to said teen-agers, they agreed with him.

Our young people want what we can give them in the way of Tips For Successful Living. But they need them handed out with some empathy and a willingness to listen to how they see things.

If conversation flows freely, youth and middle-age — and old age — can meet on exciting common ground.

Dear Doris: About nursing homes, the lady who wrote in, hoped she could look after her husband at home; and this is of course ideal. I am a registered nurse in charge of a 50-bed nursing home and we rarely tie people in chairs or disequilibrize them unless it is for their own safety.

One main point this lady made was that her husband still enjoyed company and had wonderful neighbors who came in to cheer him up. How lucky he is! We have people who haven't had even one visitor in years.

We cannot, replace family, neighbors and friends. Help us put more emphasis on the "HOME" part of nursing homes — in many cases company is needed more than anything doctors or nurses can do. — A Nurse Who Cares.

Dear Nurse: Young or old, people need people! Perhaps your message will prompt those who have lonely, elderly persons in such a "home away from home", to make a point of calling on them. Even a telephone call or a brief note can brighten the lonely one's day.

Dear Doris: I am afraid my mother-in-law-to-be is going to want to boss us a lot. Yet she is generous and has some good ideas; and I know I have got to make friends with her.

How can I handle this? — Nervous.

Dear Nervous: A while ago I suggested to the young brides that turning off mother-in-law without a trial run at making a friend of her is often poor thinking. She raised the man you love, didn't she?

Let's face it: Most brides cannot get through their household chores as fast as the woman who has been doing them for a good long time. If this new mother of yours has a good idea — ask her!

This will make her feel like something and will help bring you closer. It does not mean she wants to be boss — and shouldn't be!

Mirror of Your Mind

by JOHN CONWELL

Are most lies harmless fibs?

PERHAPS that is granting too wide an amnesty to the great flood of lies being told every minute of every day. Still and all, most of them could be called harmless fibs rather than malicious lies. Let someone tell a lie to hurt another individual and a trained observer could spot it. Most lies, though, are told to boost the teller's esteem; for some reason he just doesn't believe people would think enough of him if he simply stated the truth.

Can a child refuse to be spoiled?

YES, but that will happen about as often as a man will turn his back on an offer of a million bucks in cold cash with no strings attached. A child is usually spoiled so early in life that he almost always accepts it as his due. About the time he realizes he ought to quit being spoiled, he is too well established in "command" to give up the advantage he holds. He likes to control his parents with the power they have handed over to him.

Does a 'night out' invite trouble?

NO: a husband and wife can each enjoy a regular night out without feeling something has gone out of their marriage. A movie with the girls, a poker game with the boys, bowling—whatever takes the spouse out of the house gives a husband and a wife confidence that they can have interests apart from each other. However, when a night out is regarded more eagerly than a night at home, then a marriage might be headed for trouble.

Ann Landers

Braless May Have Cooper's Droop

Dear Ann Landers: I would appreciate the opportunity to reply to the Texas doctor who made the statement that "scientific evidence actually favors no bra." As a gynecologist I have seen and read of many cases of women who never wore bras. Do you know what they look like. Their breasts are flat. Very flat. The Cooper's ligament, unassisted, is not able to support the weight of the average breast. This condition is called Cooper's Droop.

Ann, please tell your women readers that going without a bra may give them a feeling of liberation but it will result in sagging breasts. Almost everyone has seen films of tribal African women which are conclusive evidence. The females have never worn bras and they all have Cooper's Droop. I hope you will print my letter so your readers will know that the El Paso physician does not have the support of all members of the medical profession. I am a—New York MD

Dear Doc: You have demonstrated the wisdom of obtaining a second opinion. Your word of warning may well have rescued a whole generation of potential Super Duper Cooper Droopers.

Dear Ann Landers: I just read that letter in your column from the guy who fell through a skylight while tripping. My story is similar, except I started with pills. From pills I went to smoking dope. This lasted for about six months. Then I decided to drop acid for a bigger belt.

My first trip was a brute. It was everything I'd ever heard it would be. I could hardly wait to try it again. That second trip was the granddaddy of all bum trips. Man was I fascinated. I begged my pals to take me to a hospital but they said I'd get asked a lot of questions and everybody would be in trouble. I went into a rage, crying and screaming and breaking up furniture. One sweet kid approached me to straighten my head out. I bit her full in the mouth. That convinced them to call my parents. I just couldn't face mom and dad. So I tried to kill myself by slashing my throat with a broken bottle. Crazy? You'd better believe it. I was on acid, librium, aspirin, amobobital, pot and booze.

My folks went through hell on account of me. I was really not keen on them. They took me to a private place for teen-age junkies and it cost them their life's savings. But they were really wonderful.

All this happened eight months ago and today I feel like a new person. I know now I was screwed up and stupid. I wouldn't go near a joint or a pill, let alone a sugar cube, for anything in the world. I am one of those people who shouldn't mess around with anything that will change the chemistry of my body. Even a glass of beer is off limits for me.

God gave me a second chance that some heads don't get. I'm going to spend the rest of my life helping kids who are goofed up on drugs and prove to God that I as worth saving.

Please print my letter so others who are in a bad way will know that they can make it back. If I did, anybody can.—Garden City Joe

Dear Joe: Welcome home. You've told a story that only a person who has lived through it could tell. Thank you for writing.

Maintenance Neglected by Large Number of Car Owners

VANCOUVER (CP) — There are two people every motorist hates to see.

One is the policeman who waves you to a halt after a driving infraction and the other is the man who stands in the entrance to the auto repair shop, making cryptic notations on a clipboard and muttering a litany involving obscure automobile parts and impossibly high repair bills.

There's no way to avoid the policeman except by safe driving, but Brian Strothers says it's simple to avoid car repair headaches, using a little common sense and some preventive medicine.

Mr. Strothers, a service manager for a local auto repair company, said most car owners are surprisingly knowledgeable about how their cars operate but persist in abusing them until any repair job is a major one, with consequent high bills.

"Too many times I have seen customers come in here with a giant-size problem and I ask them, 'How long has it been making that noise,' Mr. Strothers said.

"And they say "Oh, about three months but now it's really bad." If they'd come in three months ago when the noise first started, it might have cost them a couple of bucks. Now they're looking at $50 or $100 or a bit more.

"People should pay a lot more attention to noises."

Also worth attention, Mr. Strothers said, are the warning lights on the dashboard—and the motorist who ignores them is asking for trouble.

"They see the generator light's on or the oil warning light and they say the car's still needs the maintenance on driving because they figure nothing's wrong," Mr. Strothers said.

"They're the ones who are wrong."

He also has difficulty in figuring out the owner who purchases a car and then observes the manufacturer's specifications for maintenance only until the warranty expires.

"Then he just forgets about maintenance, or only has it done when the car is in such bad condition that it will hardly move. That's not terribly bright because the car still needs the maintenance on driving because they figure nothing's wrong," Mr. Strothers said.

"They're the ones who are wrong."

He also has difficulty in figuring out the owner who purchases a car and then observes the manufacturer's specifications for maintenance only until the warranty expires.

"Then he just forgets about maintenance, or only has it done when the car is in such bad condition that it will hardly move. That's not terribly bright because the car still needs the maintenance on driving because they figure whether it's in warranty or not."

Mr. Strothers' advice is for car owners to read and pay attention to the owner's handbook for their particular car.

And each week, he said, motorists should perform a 10-minute check on their car.

"Lift up the hood, check the water in the radiator, the brake fluid the oil and the water level in the battery cells.

"You can't rely on the service station attendant to do it for you. Too many of them don't. And it doesn't take long for a battery to run down. You can save a lot of dollars for only 10 or 15 minutes a week."

Mr. Strothers' least favorite customer, however, is the do-it-yourself diagnostician. This is the man who doesn't allow the mechanic to assess what's wrong with the car but prescribes the cure himself.

"A customer comes in and says, 'Replace the wheel bearing.' So we replace the wheel bearing and he drives his car away. Ten minutes later he's back.

"He's mad. He says the squeak is still there and we haven't fixed his car. What we've done is exactly what he told us to do. If he'd taken it was the squeak that was bothering him we'd have looked for the cause of that and not been fooling around with the wheel bearing."

The way to trouble-free car repairs, Mr. Strothers said, is to find the name of a repair shop people trust, by talking to friends and acquaintances, and then sticking with that shop.

"Also always remember that a car, after your house, is the second most important and expensive purchase you'll make in a lifetime. It should be worth a few minutes out of your time each week to take care of it."

Venezuelan Army Now Has Women

CARACAS (AP) — It's happening even in Latin America, where the men have always worn the uniforms and the women have pressed them. Within two years, the Venezuelan army will have seven senior officers.

In the beginning the pioneers will serve in communications—probably meaning they will be a modification of secretaries in uniform.

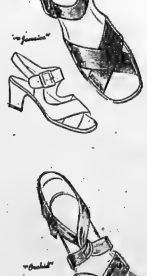
Capt. Domingo Salazar Marquez, commander of the Venezuelan women's group, is complimentary about their talents. "The women are proving to be a big success. They are serious, responsible and well-behaved, showing a great capacity for and dedication to work, perhaps more than the males. . . ."

Establishment of the women's service is part of a reorganization of the South American country's armed forces, which have the latest military equipment.

The goal is a voluntary service for women of 18 to 35 years of age that could grow to 100,000 if Congress approves.

The new female non-commissioned officers will be technical sergeants of the third rank with a basic salary of about $200 a month and the same privileges men of the same rank, plus special allowances if they have husbands and children.

What will saying "My wife is a sergeant" do to the Latin "machismo," or male pride?



"If a man truly loves, it is not important to him that his wife is a soldier or a sergeant," said Maria Perdomo, one of the young women who has set out to prove it.

Mare Runs To Record

Bay Stake Jean must have felt she was in the Olympics Saturday night as the four-year-old mare ran a personal record time of 2:10.3 to win the fifth race at the Quinte Exhibition and Raceway Harness card.

Al Vance continued to be the hottest driver on the local track, picking up two victories a second and a third in the nine race meet. He reined Johnny Command to a first race win and then took Skipy Rush to the winner's circle in the eighth. A second on Clipper Zee in the ninth and a third with Mr. Boyd in the fifth finished off Vance's productive night.

A crowd of 900 was on hand to wager $25,661 over the night's racing.

Cadillac Sets Pace

Cadillac Hanover started fast and ended faster in walking away with the Deedrie Invitational Pace at the Frontenac Downs Raceway Sunday afternoon.

The seven-year-old pacer ran the first half in 1:01.3 and then poured on the coals to burn the second half in 1:02.2 for the win in the $700 feature event.

The win for driver Ray Ross upped Hanover's earnings to the $3,600 mark for the year.

Kingston's Dick Heroin returned from Pittsburgh's Brandywine track Sunday to take By Rod to a 2:08.3 third race victory. Hogan was rated 16th in North America for win percentage two years ago.

It was also a night for personal records as no less than eight were established. Dominion K Flyer won the first in a time of 2:06.3; Tiberius the second in 2:19 1; By Rod the third in 2:08.3; Arawana Elsie the fourth in 2:11.4; Sue's First the fifth in 2:18.2; Prime Mindy the sixth in 2:07.3; Sorry Plight the seventh in 2:11.2, and Hero Gratton the eighth in 2:07.1.

Lil Buck captured the tenth and final race.

A part-mutuel handle of $40,201 was recorded at the 11th day of racing at the games Wednesday night at the Kingston track. Racing re-7:45 with a special Ladies Night with all ladies to be admitted free.

Roughies Don't Need Offence to Demolish Stampeders

REGINA (CP) — The maxim that the best defence is a good offence was reversed Sunday by Saskatchewan Roughriders.

With their defence outstripping the offence in yards gained, Riders demolished Calgary Stampeders 35-3 and moved into a second-place tie in the Western Football Conference with Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Stampeders dropped into fourth place with a 2-3 won-lost record. Riders and Winnipeg have three wins each, one less than the unbeaten Edmonton Eskimos.

The Riders hammered out a 13-10 victory in Calgary last week.

The loss by Calgary was costly in more ways than one. Frank Andruski, a stellar defensive back, could be out for a couple of games or more with a leg injury sustained in the second quarter.

The win by Saskatchewan was costly in more ways than one. Jerry Keating and reliever Jim Lindsey—and they returned them for a total of 291 yards, a new record and a total that surpassed the Rider offence production of 233 yards.

Keating passed all the Saskatchewan five yard line, directly into the hands of safety Bruce Bennett who hot-footed it 112 yards for a touchdown.

Gabler Takes Barton's Job

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts of the eastern division of the Canadian Football League have obtained quarterback Wally Gabler from Edmonton Eskimos and placed quarterback Greg Barton on waivers.

Barton took over as No. 1 Ar-Theismann suffered a broken ankle in the opening game of gonaut pivot man after Joe the regular season for Toronto.

Canada's Medal Hopes Take Dive with Boys

MUNICH (CP) — Sweden and Poland basked in the limelight, two weightlifters broke world records but failed to win a medal and a lone Canadian girl fought an uphill battle to retrieve her country's hopes of glory in springboard diving as competition began Sunday in the 20th Olympic Games.

The United States and Russia without a medal between them after the opening day's activity were certain to assert their dominance as the Games progressed. But opening-day honors belonged to Ragnar Skanaker, a 39-year-old Swedish garage owner, and Zygmund Smalcerz, a tiny Polish weightlifter, the first two Olympic gold medalists.

Skanaker broke an Olympic record by scoring 567 of a possible 600 to win the free pistol event, taking both the record and the title from Gregory Kosykh of Russia who set the previous mark of 562 in Mexico City four years ago. The Russian finished eighth this time.

Smalcerz won his gold medal and lost a world record in the same competition.

His overall total of 744 pounds was good enough to win the flyweight weightlifting title. But Gyi Aung of Burma, who finished only fifth over-all, lifted 231½ pounds in the snatch competition, wiping out the Poel's previous world mark of 227.

Charlie Depitkin of Indonesia, disatisfied with the three lifts that brought him a ninth-place finish, made an unofficial bid of 222 pounds in the clean-and-jerk competition. The lift was not counted towards his Olympic total but stood as a world record, wiping out the old mark of 291 held by A. Grafov of Russia.

Canada's weightlifter, Chun Hon Chan of Montreal, was 16th among the 17 competitors.

Sweden stood a good chance of picking up another gold medal tonight in springboard diving, an event in which the Canadian girls had been expected to do well.

BEV. BOYS

For Liz Carruthers of Edmonton, gold medallist at last year's Pan-American Games, the event ended prematurely Sunday night when she grazed the board on her last preliminary dive and failed to place among the 12 girls entitled to compete in the final round.

That left Beverley Boys of Pickering, Ont., runner-up to her team-mate last year, as the sole Canadian survivor. She was in seventh place after the preliminary competition. 18 points behind third place Micki King of the United States.

Miss Carruthers was in 11th place before her last dive, a reverse 1½ twist with a 2.5 degree of difficulty. Performed successfully, it would have boosted her in the standings.

But when her feet brushed the board, she entered the water at a bad angle and received the lowest marks awarded to any diver on the round. She finished 20th in the field of 30, one place behind 16-year-old Teri Zork of Vancouver.

Meanwhile Miss Boys, in 12th place after the first four of her seven preliminary dives, was scoring heavily on the last two.

Canadian diving coach Doc Webb gave her a good chance of catching one of the lesser medals but conceded that she had no chance for the gold.

Russia put on a formidable display in freestyle wrestling, scoring victories in all 10 weight divisions, but three Canadians also scored good results in their series.

Flyweight Gordon Bertie of Edmonton and middle heavyweight George Saunders of Thunder Bay, Ont., pinned their opponents while Pat Bolger of Dutton, Ont., the lightweight who passed up a chance to compete in judo in favor of wrestling, won by a decision.

In basketball, another event which lacks a Canadian entry, the United States maintained its unbeaten Olympic record by crushing Czechoslovakia 68-35.

Seagren's Pole Okay Now

MUNICH (AP) — The poster on the wall of Bob Seagren's Olympic living quarters shows a chimpanzee knee-deep in green grass, holding a long rough-hewn stick. The caption, handwritten, reads:

"The pole is legal-vaulter disqualified."

"That was given to me by Jim Hyun and George Young," laughed Seagren, whose new, green pole has been declared legal in the second stunning setback to the amateur athletic establishment at these Olympic Games.

The decision Sunday by the International Amateur Athletic Federation to reinstate the new pole came five days after the International Olympic Committee went back on its decision to permit Rhodesia into the Games.

The IAAF, early in August, declared the pole invalid for the Games because it hadn't been available to others at least one year. But George Moore, maker of the pole, said, "every world-class athlete who could possibly have come to the Games had access to it late last year."

The new pole is 1.3 ounces lighter than the old. The difference in size is just a fraction of an inch in diameter.

"All I get is a psychological advantage," said Seagren, the world record holder, "because I know it's safer,"

Durocher Gives Astros Chance

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Leo Durocher says Houston Astros can catch Cincinnati Reds . . . and Leo the Lip isn't talking through Harry Walker's hat.

The 66-year-old Durocher is wearing his own hat these days as manager of the Astros and his debut Sunday—one day after Houston fired Harry (The Hat) Walker—was a winning one by an 8-3 score over Montreal Expos.

"The guys were all relaxed and happy, said Durocher, fired himself last month by Chicago Cubs. "It's been a long time since players, like most of the ballclubs, came up and said congratulations and let's get 25 more."

Even 25 more might not help the Astros, who remained eight games behind Cincinnati in baseball's National League West as the Reds trimmed Philadelphia Phillies 7-2.

Elsewhere, Los Angeles Dodgers made it three in a row over Pittsburgh Pirates 7-4, Chicago Cubs battered San Francisco Giants 9-3, New York Mets walloped Atlanta Braves 13-6 and the St. Louis Cardinals dumped San Diego Padres 8-2.

Durocher, who managed New York Giants to a crew from behind pennant against Brooklyn Dodgers in 1951, said a 25-game comeback wouldn't be unprecedented.

"In 1951, we won 25 of our last 44 games. I don't think the Dodgers lost. I think we won. We were five games out with eight games to play and we won our last eight to tie it."

The Astros scored three runs in the second inning Sunday, three more in the third and Doug Radzr hit a two-run homer in the eighth in support of Larry Dierker's eight-hit pitching.

The Reds tagged Philadelphia's Wayne Twitchell for six extra-base hits in 5 1-3 innings, including two doubles and a triple by Pete Rose and a two-run homer by Denis Menke. Joe Morgan also homered for the Reds, who have won 12 of their last 15 games in pulling away from Houston.

Chris Cannizzaro lashed a line-breaking two run double with two out in the eighth inning as the Dodgers downed Pittsburgh. Despite their first consecutive setback, the Pirates still held a 10-game lead over the Cubs.

St. Louis chased San Diego starter Clay Kirby with a six-run first inning, highlighted by pitcher Rick Wise's three-run double off Fred Norman.

Alou Shuffled

ST. LOUIS (AP) — First baseman-outfielder Matty Alou was sent by St. Louis Cardinals to Oakland Athletics Sunday to complete a deal made June 7 for acquisition relief pitcher Diego Segui. The Cardinals said the exchange of the 33-year-old Alou for Oakland outfielder Bill Voss and infielder Angel Mangual was Alou, hitting .314 to lead the Cardinals, has batted .310 career batting mark starting this year.

Jackson Bugs Birds

Reggie Jackson has a pain in the ribs, but to Baltimore Orioles he's a pain in the neck.

"In a way, my injury is good because it's keeping me from swinging too hard," said Jackson after driving in both runs batting from rib cartilages as Oakland Athletics beat the Orioles 2-1 Sunday.

Jackson came back to work Friday night after spending two weeks on the disabled list, and promptly hit a home run in his first appearance since Aug. 7.

"I thought I might be a little rusty," said the slugger, who drove in Oakland's tying run with a single in the third inning and then the winning run with an eighth-inning double Sunday.

Oakland's victory kept both American League races tight. The Athletics moved within a half-game of Chicago in the West after the White Sox lost to Milwaukee Brewers 4-3, and the Orioles dropped to second in the East by 1½ games after Detroit Tigers swept a doubleheader from Minnesota Twins in two 11-inning affairs, 5-3 and 1-0.

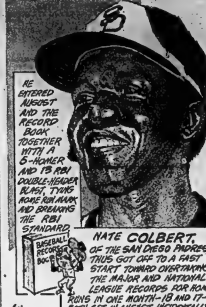
Elsewhere in the American League, Boston Red Sox trounced Texas Rangers 10-3, New York Yankees swept a doubleheader from Kansas City Royals 7-6 and 9-8 in 15 innings, and California Angels nipped Cleveland Indians 1-0 in 12 innings.

Jackie's heroics helped stop a Baltimore jinx. The Orioles had won nine straight games in Oakland before Sunday, including a 5-1 decision Saturday. In the second game, Kansas City downed New York 6-3. Detroit beat Minnesota 5-3. Chicago beat Milwaukee 3-1 in the first half of a doubleheader but the second game of the twinbilled Texas 7-6 and California beat Cleveland 7-1.

George Scott's run-scoring single Sunday capped a two-run rally in the eighth that won both for Milwaukee. Scott's game-winning hit followed an RBI single by John Felske and tied the game 3-3.

Detroit won both games on 11th-inning home runs—Willie Horton hit one with a man on in the opener and Gates Brown connected with the bases empty in the nightcap. Detroit's Joe Coleman pitched a brilliant second game, allowing just four hits over 11 innings.

Taiwan Tops



WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Lin Hsing-jui collected three hits and Chen Chih-shuen hurled a four-hit shutout, Saturday as Taiwan scored a 6-0 victory over Hammond, Ind., and won its second straight Little League baseball championship. Lin had a home run with one man on in the second, an RBI double in the third and a fourth inning single. Chen was in total control from the outset, allowing a double and three singles and striking out 12. He didn't walk a batter.

B.C. Gals Best

TORONTO (RP) — British Columbia, represented by Vancouver, won the women's softball championship Sunday at the Canadian National Exhibition, beating Willowdale, Ont., 2-1 in the error-filled, extra-inning final. All runs were unearned.

Vancouver had advanced to the final with a 3-1 victory earlier Sunday over Quebec, while Willowdale, representing Toronto, had a 6-1 semi-final victory over Fort Erie, the Ontario representative.

Leafs Close To Series Win

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Maple Leafs moved to within one game of clinching their Senior Inter-County baseball League semi-final series Sunday while Brantford Red Sox won the first game of their semi-finals.

In Toronto, Alf Payne and Jim Ridley drove in runs in the sixth inning as Leafs went on to defeat London Axcess 4-1 and take a 3-1 lead in the series. Red Sox took advantage of home territory to edge Kitchener Panthers 1-0 on an unearned run in the eighth inning.

Guess Who Wins Golf Title?

FINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus had just picked up his sixth title of the season, a personal high, and had pushed his year's earnings to a record $280,462.16 but he wasn't about to put the stamp of greatness on the tournament that's made it possible—the U.S. Professional Match Play Championship.

The sponsors hope to make the event one of pro, golf's major tournaments with the status of the current Big Four —the U.S. and British Opens, the Masters and PGA.

"It can't be a major tournament under this format," Nicklaus said Sunday after disposing of Frank Beard 3-and-1 in the final match and claiming the $40,000 first-place prize.

"We only have 16 players in the finals. The format was set up to accommodate television. It can't be a major tournament unless you have more players than that competing."

Hayes Used Head

Hayes, trainer of Strike Out, the winning horse in the $100,000 Prix D'Eie, elected to drive Alley Fighter, a co-entry and stablemate of the winner at Bocjay Stables in Oshawa, Ont.

"My plan was to get Alley Fighter out in front early and to set a fast pace, "The Jobber" Hayes said after the race.

It went exactly to plan.

Alley Fighter jumped in front at the start of the race, charged ahead of Bob Haven and Tarport Adios, and kept the lead until about 30 yards past the half-mile pole.

While in the lead, Strike Out's stable-mate set a torrid pace with times of 28.2 and 59.3 seconds in the quarter and half-miles respectively.

Shortly after the half-mile, Strike Out burst into the lead and took off, leading all the way to a 1:58 2-5 mile and a $50,000 prize.

The new complicated and confusing format was devised after all the game's great names—Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer, Gary Player—were eliminated prior to the televised weekend matches in last year's inaugural Match Play Championship.

Eight players were given exempt status—the defending champion and the seven leaders off last year's point list.

Eight more came out of the $100,000 Liggett and Myers Open, a regular stroke-play event which was played Thursday through Sunday on the same 6,988-yard, par-72 Country Club course.

The eight leaders after 36 holes in that tournament joined the eight exempt players in the match play.

In fact, national television coverage broke away shortly after Nicklaus had beaten Beard and before Lou Graham, Hale Irwin, Larry Ziegler and Australian David Graham even began a four-man, three-hole sudden-death L and M playoff, which, incidentally, began at the 15th hole to accommodate television. But it wasn't televised. A gallery of only about a dozen followed the four men in the playoff.

Lou Graham, a nine-year tour veteran and no relation to David, won it with a birdie three on the third extra hole, running in a 25-foot putt.

Nicklaus had scored earlier victories this season in the Masters, U.S. Open, Rice Crosby, Doral-Eastern and Westchester Classic, the latter in his last previous start. His whopping money-winning total—including $90,000 in his last two starts—put him well within sight of an unprecedented $300,000 season.

Ratelle Beats Reds

TORONTO (CP) — Jean Ratelle's three goals, two of them picture-play efforts, carried Harry Sinden's Whites to a 4-2 win over the Reds, coached by John Ferguson, in the second of Team Canada's intra-squad games.

It was the second win for Sinden's skaters in the three planned intra-squad games as Team Canada prepares to open a eight-game exhibition hockey series against the Russians at Montreal next Saturday.

Paul Henderson notched the other Whites' goal while Malovichich and Wayne Cashman were the Reds' marksmen.

Sinden, general manager-coach of the team that will face the Soviet's select players in games at Montreal, Toronto (Sept. 4), Winnipeg (Sept. 6) and Vancouver (Sept. 8), admitted the play of both teams was much improved from the opening game last Tuesday which the Whites won 8-5.

The third intra-squad game is Tuesday night. Sinden had the club out early Sunday morning for workout.

"I'm satisfied we might be making better then we did Tuesday, but it's hard to measure conditioning when, really, there's no opposition.

"It's no wonder your game is bad. Your sticks and skins don't match and blow is not your color anyway!"

Trottier Joins Nats

OTTAWA (CP) — Toronto Maple Leaf right-winger Guy Trottier has signed with Ottawa Nationals of the World Hockey Association, the Ottawa team announced Saturday.

Trottier, a native of nearby Jull. Que., was in Hull instructing at a hockey school when he approached the Nationals, a new franchise.

No terms of the deal with the 21-year-old former National Hockey League were released.

The five-foot-ten, 175 pound Trottier played the last two seasons with the Leafs. During the 1971-72 season, he played about 50 games, scored nine goals and had 12 assists. He was injured part of the season.

He began his hockey career in 1967 with New York Rangers and played subsequently with Buffalo of the American Hockey League.

Black Poppies May Provide Addiction Cure

TEHRAN (CP) — On the thickly-wooded slopes of the cone in black and dark, in the Caspian Sea, Iranian scientists have begun large-scale cultivation of two different species of wild poppy that they hope in an effort to fight addiction.

They are two species of the black poppy which scientists call Papaver orientale and Papaver bractatum and which have been found to contain a drug which has the effect of making an addict turn away from heroin.

Both species were discovered by accident in the area in 1967, when a scientist from the faculty of pharmacy at Tehran University, Dr. N. Sharghi, was travelling in the mountains to the Caspian Sea. On the way he stopped to buy a handful of black poppies from a boy for 10 rials (about 12 cents) and continued his journey.

After a while the occupants of the car began to feel dizzy. They decided it was the black poppies but could not explain the spell and threw them out.

Curious, Dr. Sharghi returned a few days later for more samples of the plant and took them back to his laboratory. With a colleague, Dr. Iraj Jahanbani, he found that the juices of the plant contained as much as 30 per cent of a chemical called thebaine from which another drug, naltexone, is derived. Naloxone is said to be the only known cure for heroin addiction, but so far has been available only in small quantities.

The fact that a very poppy plants are known to contain thebaine they say is only to the extent of three-tenths of one per cent of the juice. This makes its extraction difficult and expensive, and would also call for the cultivation of dangerously large quantities of ordinary poppy, which could only have the effect of encouraging addiction by making it a source of opium.

After the two scientists made their discovery, Dr. Jahanbani published their findings in the scientific journal Nature, in 1967. Soon after, inquiries from scientists and officials fighting drug addiction in other parts of the world came in thick and fast.

Officials here now estimate they can collect from 15 to 20 tons a year of the plant from the Alborz slopes and make the extract available to authorities elsewhere. But world demand is several times more than this. Dr. Lahezari estimates it at 100 times as much. Experiments were therefore started this summer to find out whether the black poppy can be produced in greater quantity, and whether doing so would not upset its chemical content.

If the experiments prove successful it might mean a breakthrough in the anti-addiction drive in several Western countries, including the United States, Britain, France and West Germany, and some observers here have speculated it may also end the need to grow ordinary poppy "for medicinal purposes" in Turkey. The United Nations would then ban the growing of other species of poppy, and the world requirements for medicinal opium would come from Iran—or any other country able to produce Papaver orientale and Papaver bractatum.

Iran also has an addiction problem, and would have gone ahead with the investigations without outside encouragement. The government during the last 10 years has executed close to 150 persons found guilty of smuggling peddling or possessing either opium or heroi in the country.

The executions are being carried out under strict anti-narcotics law passed in 1969, the year in which Iran decided to resume opium production in limited quantities, in a move to protect against the production of opium in neighboring countries, particularly Turkey and Afghanistan.

Dangerous

MOUNT VERNON, N.Y. (AP) — Toyota's Land Cruiser is unacceptably dangerous, Consumer's Union says.

The non-profit organization that publishes Consumer Reports magazine said the vehicle has "dangerously incompetent handling" and a fuel tank placed in the passenger compartment, where it could rupture. The Land Cruiser was therefore rated "not acceptable."

Latin Americans Can Prove Frustrating for Revolutionist

Youth 'Name of Game' In Jamaican Regime

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Youth is the group of a military-economic oligarchy.
Jamaican presidents serve at the sufferance of the military in blings of discontent, the social structures in both countries remain largely the same they were decades ago.

Perhaps the element of Latin American society most impervious to change is the Indian. Peruvian, Guatemalan or Bolivian, the Indian has had much use for the trappings of modern civilization. There are cases of destitute Indians who have made large sums of money from growing marijuana to perform but who have refused to buy even the basic necessities of life.

While a social, political-economic continuity pervades Latin America, there are several exceptions to the rule. Perhaps no part of the world has broken more decisively with its past during the last 13 years than Cuba. A shift to the left has produced a Marxist-Leninist state and a frightened oligarchy in Chile. In Uruguay, defections out of the two traditionally parties have made the leftist-leaning Broad Front coalition a conspicuous force in political life.

Although socialism is not an issue, there are examples of political upheaval in Colombia's resistance.

Mrs. David Buckler and family of Goose Bay, Labrador spent the past month with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarke Rodgers.

Mr. and Mrs. Doug Patterson and family have been spending their holiday and several places in the United States for the past few weeks.

Disintegrating Plastics Are Seen As Pollution Cure

NEW YORK (AP) — Pollution and unsightly litter from bottles, wrappings and other products now can be overcome by plastic materials which self-destruct or disintegrate upon exposure to sunlight, two scientists said today.

Dr. James Guillet of the University of Toronto showed pictures of a plastic cup gradually disappearing in 14 days of exposure to daylight. It disintegrated far faster than a paper cup would, Guillet told the annual fall meeting of the American Chemical Society.

Their reports were made available in advance of delivery.

The disintegration process can be controlled so that a plastic bottle or other product doesn't fall apart before you want it to, Guillet added.

Colorings sensitive to sunlight can be incorporated in the plastic to give an early warning system as to when a container would start to break down, Dr. Gerald Scott of the University of Aston in Birmingham, England, said in a companion report.

The scientists told of two recently-patented methods of disposing of plastics. Chemicals which are added when the plastics are being formulated do not affect manufacturing processes or present other problems, and they are inexpensive, they said.

Dr. Guillet's approach is to incorporate special chemicals known as ketone groups which he said act like scissors to chop up long chains of molecules when they become influenced or "excited" by ultraviolet light. The chopping into smaller units makes the organic material susceptible to bacterial action, and ultimately return to simple materials in the soil.

Ultraviolet light is the suntan portion of the sun's rays. Ultraviolet light cannot pass through ordinary window glass, so products packaged in the newer plastics would not be affected while stored on shelves or window displays in shops, both researchers said.

Lewis Says Inco On 'Welfare' List

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — David Lewis, national New Democratic Party leader, continued Sunday his attacks on corporations that he claims avoid paying income tax by labelling the giant International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. a major beneficiary of "our lop-sided tax system."

He spoke in a downtown stockbrokers' hall a few blocks from the giant Inco smelters and within sight of the company's new 1,250-foot-high smokestack which began operating a week ago as a measure to rid the Sudbury basin of its sulphur dioxide fumes.

As he spoke, Garry Clarke, the party's candidate in Sudbury for the next federal election, released a statement claiming that Inco's new stack—higher than the Empire State Building—dumps two to three tons of arsenic over the area every day. In addition, he said the 2,000 tons of sulphur dioxide emitted daily contains "vast quantities" of selenium, described as a highly toxic element.

Mr. Lewis arrived Sunday for a two-day visit as part of a pre-election campaign tour, which already has taken him to Nova Scotia and various Ontario centres.

Rain fell most of the day and marred an outdoor picnic at nearby Azilda to raise funds for John Rodrigues, the NDP candidate for Nickel Belt riding on the city's western outskirts.

In his speech, Mr. Lewis said Inco paid no income tax in 1971 on net earnings of $210 million and profits of $94.2 million. As well, it received an income tax credit of $2.8 million deductable from future income tax payable, he said.

Mr. Lewis said that in addition, between 1966 and 1971, the company deferred payment of income tax of $110.2 million which he said amounted to an interest-free loan from the Canadian people to a powerful corporation.

"The next time you invite Inco over for or if you want to buy a house, you write to John Turner (Federal minister of finance) for an interest-free loan from the public treasury and see how far you get."

Mr. Lewis has so far named about 15 businesses he describes as "corporate welfare bums," claiming they avoid paying income taxes through tax loopholes such as write-offs and depletion allowances.

In all, he said, nearly half the 200,000 corporations in Canada paid no federal income tax in 1969.

Pentecostal Officers Picked

HALIFAX (CP) — Delegates to the 28th biennial general conference of the Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada have re-elected the major executive officers of the assembly at their five-day conference here.

Rev. R. W. Tultinger was re-elected general superintendent Sunday by a vote of 241 to 232. A native of Claresholm, Alta., he was first elected to the post in August, 1968 at the age of 41.

Rev. James Montgomery of Toronto was elected general secretary, and Rev. G. R. Richards, also of Toronto, was chosen general treasurer.

At a missionary rally Sunday the conference received $156,779 in offerings telephoned from many of the assembly's 749 churches across Canada. The funds will be used to support the work of most 179 missionaries in 16 countries.

Drug Recall Common As That of Autos

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia experts say almost one-third of Canadian pharmaceutical companies are producing drugs of such inferior quality they should be recalled from drugstore shelves.

"It's getting so that precaution drug recalls ordered by the federal government's health protection branch are as common an occurrence as the recalling of defective automobiles," said Peter Bell, executive co-ordinator of the B.C. Society.

The society's concern is backed up by the B.C. Pharmaceutical Association which, together with the society, is concerned with alerting doctors and dispensing pharmacists about the dangers of some drugs.

"There are about 300 pharmaceutical firms putting out drugs throughout Canada," Mr. Bell said.

"Of these I'd estimate 200 are reputable outfits."

The task of protecting the public from taking medicine that may not alleviate specific symptoms or conditions has been further complicated by new provincial legislation which allows the pharmacist to choose any brand of a particular drug if the prescribing physician doesn't indicate otherwise.

"With all the recent publicity and emphasis on buying drugs by their generic names in economy, the customer insists on a cheaper brand name which in fact may not do him any good at all," said Roy Fevang registrar of the Pharmaceutical Association.

It doesn't mean that all lower-priced drugs are inferior, but it does mean that a doctor's or pharmacist's advice should be listened to, Mr. Fevang said.

Zoological Society Will Honor Bethune

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario Zoological Society announced Saturday that construction will begin this week on a $35,000 development to commemorate the Chinese hero Dr. Norman Bethune.

Cass Van Eyesinga, director of the Ontario Zoological Park at Wasaga Beach near here, made the announcement at a news conference. The development will be constructed at that park.

Dr. Bethune, a native of Gravenhurst, Ont., has been highly hoored by the People's Republic for his services to the Communist Army in the 1930s.

Mr. Van Eyesinga said the park also has sent a request to Chinese Premier Chou En-lai asking for a pair of rare giant pandas.

He said that if the request is filled, the unique Chinese animals will be put on display in the Bethune Panda Pavilion. Another part of the development, which construction will begin on this week, is the Bethune Hall.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

TUESDAY, AUG. 29 . . .

Aries (March 21-April 19): Without schemes are 1; time a dozen today. Your best efforts will not cover all the discrepancies in material facts.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): The closer the relation, the more surely you catch criticism. Be serene, self-assured, present your finest side politely.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Believing little or nothing of current stories, get your story straight so you have your own course under control.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Where differences arise, attend them at once. Hear both sides of arguments while staying neutral or not actively engaged.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Details must be considered separately today despite your need to get things wrapped up. Nothing is as simple as you'd like.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Leaving as much of routines aside as possible, make the rounds to see what you can do for your favorite charity, social interests.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emotions are not the most reliable guides to success. Friends are at cross purposes, mainly for their own interests.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Conflict is to be avoided—your words tend to harshness. Extra time is required for any matter needing agreement.

Sagittarius (Nov.22-Dec. 21): Putting one minor section into place at a time brings superior results. You'll be glad you disciplined your impatience.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): What seems clear to you may not look so to others. Projects encounter a test for practicality; be ready to revise.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): It's too easy to criticize, likewise easy to miss the point of comments coming your way. Competition comes from all sides.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Travel tends to be complicated. Emotional experience fulfills expectations, unless you've missed some signals earlier.

Climate No Help In Bronchiectasis

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband, 57, just spent two days in the hospital for tests and lung examination. The verdict was bronchiectasis. I understand this is a fungus disease.

I asked if a drier climate would be beneficial, and the doctor said he really didn't know, perhaps a moist climate would be better. I should think fungus would be less active in dry air.—B.M.H.

There's a bit of confusion. Bronchiectasis is not a fungus disease, but rather is a structural change in the bronchi, resulting in dilation and the formation of sacs.

These sacs or bulges become infected, resulting in cough and production of foul and sometimes bloody sputum. But of course, fungi can be present along with the other germs.

You are right that, in general, fungi thrive in moist rather than dry climates, but there are exceptions to this. Perhaps dramatic changes are not likely to have much effect one way or the other on bronchiectasis.

One or both lungs may be affected.

Treatment involves getting rid of these infected secretions. One part of this is by postural drainage, which should be done twice a day. This means the patient lies down, as across a bed, with head and shoulders lower than the rest of the body. These help remove the secretions by drainage.

In addition, antibiotics usually are necessary to suppress the infection. Usually it is necessary to take them periodically, and for long enough to be effective—not the fatiliar few days. Occasionally, surgery (and a lung x-ray) can map the exact extent and location of the trouble.

In some cases, removal of segments of the lung can bring about a cure. That's not the usual decision, however.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: How soon after a vasectomy is the use of birth control unnecessary? My husband was performed more than seven months ago and I have had four spermatozoa counts. The latest revealed a 90,000 sperm count. How exactly does this mean?—B.E.S.

It exactly means that the operation wasn't a success. The 90,000, although it is low, means you are still fertile, and birth control measures are still necessary until the count goes to zero.

There are several possibilities to account for this. Having a double instead of single vas, or sperm duct, is one of them. Whatever, the only recourse is to go back and have the surgeon find out.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is there an accurate test for abdominal cancer? Several in my family have had cancer, most of them abdominal.—Mrs. H.C.

Abdominal cancer covers a big field—stomach, liver, pancreas, ovary, colon and so on. And there is no test that will detect all of them.

If you have reference to cancer of the colon and rectum, then the answer may be, yes. A new test has been developed, but it is still under investigation.

It involves use of what is called a tumor specific antigen, that is, it reacts if a tumor is present. Experiments are being done at Montreal's McGill University and at University of Tennessee to my knowledge, and I am sure it is being tested out elsewhere, too.

Whether the procedure is relatively new, it is not generally available except at the few medical centers working with it, but if its accuracy is confirmed, you can be sure that we will hear more about it.

The bidding:

Pass	Pass	1 ♥	2 ♦
4 ♦	Pass	4 ♥	4 ♠
Pass	Pass	6 ♥	Dble

opening lead — ace of clubs.

You are knee — when there's a borderline choice between which of two bids to make — that exercising one option may lead to enormous success, while exercising the other may lead to absolute ruin.

But this very situation arose in dramatic fashion in the 1970 world championship match between Brazil and the United States on the accompanying hand.

At the first table, with Bob Welff and Jim Jacoby North-South for the U.S., the bidding went as shown. Jacoby bid a heart, when he could just as easily have opened with a spade, and this choice paid off handsomely when he wound up making six hearts doubled for a score of 1,210 points.

There was nothing to the play. Jacoby ruffed the club lead, drove out the ace of hearts and easily made the rest of the tricks.

At the second table, with Chagas and Assumpcao holding the North-South cards for Brazil, the bidding went:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♣	2 ♦
2 ♥	Pass	4 ♠	4 ♣
Dble	Pass	5 ♦	Dble
5 ♠	Dble	6 ♠	Dble

Here South opened with a spade, the effect of which was that his side lost a slam. Eventually South wound up in six spades, which could not be made as the cards were divided.

Declarer ruffed the club lead and played a round of trumps. With West showing out, South could not afford to continue trumps, so he played a heart, hoping for a 1-1 division. Unluckily, West had both missing hearts and the outcome was the Assumpcao left a heart and a heart ruff up to down one.

Moreover, six hearts — played by North—would likewise have failed against a spade lead for East.

Tomorrow: Super - play.

Tony's Settle For Split Here

LARRY MAVETY

The Tony's were without some of their big guns for Sunday night's fastball action but had most of the crew that had slammed Domville 9-3 in the first round of the OASA Senior A playdowns earlier in the day and that had swept Saturday night.

"We are very impressed by the Belleville team," exclaimed Tony's General Manager Gerry Brooks. "We don't hear much from Belleville so we were not really prepared for this much competition. There are some really good ball players here."

If the Tony's were impressed by the Bellville squad, the All-Stars had to be impressed by the pitching efforts of Paul Wannamaker. The Trenton native, who is supposedly only number three on the Tony's pitching list, buried both halves of the double - header, allowing five hits over that span and pulling third strikes past a total of 23. His pitching performance came on the trail of a Saturday night start and three innings of relief against Demville Sunday afternoon.

Wannamaker gave up only three hits in the 1-0 All-star win, but two of them came in the fourth inning providing the winning run. Quinte's Larry Mavety opened the inning with a single and raced home on Rollins' Wayne McTaggart's double. Mavety added a single for the only other hit.

Scott Reid fired four innings of no-hit ball for Jamaker who pitched. The Deville centre-fielder had walked and reached third on a Wannamaker wild pitch. The Deville-Ashley relievers gave up a single but with little damage done.

Jim Horwood was the man of the moment in the first game when he raced home with the lone run as Wannamaker was

Lessels' Ace Highest Trump in Tournament

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

Bob Lessels wasn't too upset that he didn't win the closest - to - the - hole prize for his tee shot on the Belleville Golf and Country Club's 225-yard, par-three ninth hole Saturday . . . even though it went right into the cup!

The remarkable ace was the final shot of a three-hole playoff between Lessels and Scott Knapp after the pair had finished the first President's Open Invitational tied at 72, three over par for the Marysville layout.

"I took my four wood up to the tee—then I got to thinking it was the wrong club because I was 15 feet past with it in the regular round," said Lessels, who went to the final playoff hole tied with Knapp. The young Japanese golfer hit a four-iron 25 short of the pin on the potentially treacherous ninth, which requires nearly a 200-yard carry over a pond.

That set the stage for Lessels' electrifying shot, which landed about 10 feet in front of the flag and took one bounce into the cup, the first ace ever on the ninth hole and the fifth in the club's two-year history.

"I've only played here about three or four times before," added Lessels who, in addition to winning the first installment of the President's Open, earned a golf bag and club membership for the remainder of 1973 and 1974.

Although Bob had never recorded a hole-in-one before, the experience was not a new one to the Lessels family. Brother Ken, a fellow Bay of Quinte member, had the rare experience of shooting two in one week in 1969.

Because it came in a playoff, Lessels' ace didn't earn him the special closest-to-the-hole prize, also a 1973 club membership, which went to Bob Mourd for planting his tee shot six feet from the flag.

In addition to runner-up Knapp, other major prize winners in the field of 61 were Bill Reid, whose 85 was A flight low net; Stu Deruelle, B flight low gross; Don Boyle, B flight low net; Dick McDonald, C flight low gross; club president Jim Bennett, C flight low net; Joe Chaboyer, D flight low gross, and Fred Maund, D flight low net.

Lions Top Peewee Cats

The Belleville Lions proved to be top lacrosse cats in Eastern Ontario this weekend, b

The Lions won the right to represent eastern Ontario in the provincial finals by virtue of a 10-9 win over Ajax followed by a 7-5 decision against Huntsville.

Jeff Runciman paced Belleville's Saturday win over Ajax with a six-goal performance. Other scorers for the winners included Doug Rainbeth (2), Brian Gow and Danny Duffy.

In the championship win over Huntsville it was Runciman with a hat trick a n d single tallies going to Rainbeth, Peter Poole and Scott Summers.

LEGGAT STAYS OUT

TORONTO (CP) — Graham Leggat, fired as coach of Toronto Metros of the North American Soccer League, said Sunday he has refused an offer to rejoin the club in an advisory capacity.

The former coach said the club offered to pay him three months' salary to cover the termination clause plus $75, a week as an adviser.

Yardmen Tykes On Right Track

The Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund tykes picked the right path to follow in the Ontario Baseball Association in the playdown trail.

The Belleville tykes, Eastern Ontario Baseball Association champs, opened OBA action with a 4-3 win over Burlington Saturday.

Dale McTaggart checked Burlington on three hits to earn the win, striking out nine batters and walking two. His teammates collected six hits off Burlington's Ken Wagner.

McTaggart and Mark Crawford were the top Belleville batsmen with a double and single apiece with the other hits going to Shawn Mulroney and Curtis Labelle. Steve Cavner tripled for the losers.

Sudden Life

Bob Lessels (right) came to life with one shot, a sudden-death play-off hole-in-one, to win Saturday's Belleville Golf a n d Country Club's first annual President's Men's Open Invitational. Jim Bennett, president of the Marysville membership, congratulates Lessels for winning his share of $500 worth of prizes, including free 1972-73 club memberships.

Quinte Targets Change

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

Members of the Bay of Quinte Golf and Country Club had two new targets to aim for Sunday, after Carol Wilson and Frank Pinder became first-time winners of club championships.

Pinder, a first - year member, won the Faulkner cup, emblematic of the club men's championship with a 72-hole total of 302 for a comfortable 10-stroke margin over runner-up Dave Jones and t h e remainder of the 18-man field.

Not even an eagle two by Jones on the 360-yard par-four seventh hole in Sunday's final round phased Pinder, w h o took a bogey five on the hole.

"They had their chances to catch me Saturday," said Pinder, referring to an 80 that took some of the tarnish off his opening 36-hole total of 145. only one-over par on the lengthy 6,900-yard layout.

"I lost five strokes to par in the first seven holes Saturday, but Dave couldn't make a putt. That was all my bad golf."

Pinder reverted to form Sunday, carding a 77, the day's lowest score and one of only four under 80 as the golfers battled gusty winds and tough pin placements.

Dave Jones, former twice club champion, won the consolation Walker cup, for his 312 total, followed by Bill Hively (316). Pete Pete, five-time club champion, at 317. Al Mott (320) and Phil Hayward (325).

New women's club champion Carol Wilson was more stoic about her winning three-round total of 328.

A Quinte club member for the last five years, she was wistful about winning the title in a field that did not include 14-time club champion Betty Ingram, who declined to enter this year.

"I took Betty to the 18th hole once, but that's the closest I've come here.

"I won the women's championship at Westmount in Kitchener one year when the previous champion hurnt h e r hand."

Mrs. Wilson won the Coates tray for her 19-stroke margin over runner-up Judy Hall's 347 total. Eva Corke and Fran Bannon were tied for third at 288, followed by Betty Kelsey and Betty Weymark at 293.

Farmers Square

The long road back became one step shorter for the Junior Farmers after Saturday night. They downed Gosocan 9-2 to tie their final North Shore Softball series at three games apiece after trailing 3-0 at one point in the series.

Clarke Alexander f i r e d three-hit ball for the Junior Farmers, striking out five batters and issuing no walks.

New Winners

The Bay of Quinte Country Club had two new champions following final rounds Sunday. First-year member Frank Pinder took the men's honors with a comfortable ten-stroke margin and a 72-hole total of 302. Carol Wilson's three-round total of 328 gave her the women's crown.

Meads Settle Oshawa Score

Oshawa Squirts faced the same players, but not the same team as they dropped an 11-1 decision to Mead Johnson in opening game of the zone 4 finals. Only last week Oshawa had ousted Meads from the Barrie Squirt Tournament.

Tim Soule turned in a two-hitter for the revitalized Belleville team, striking out 14 batters and walking only one. He managed to hold Oshawa's big gun, Brian Wiggins off the scoresheet after Wiggins had crashed three homers in the Barrie tournament.

Andy Roszell and Darrell Coltman had three hits each for Meads, with John Henry adding a double and triple followed by Soule and Ron Begley with two safeties apiece. John Manning and J. Chappell had the Oshawa hits.

Donovan Deals 4 Blanks

Lino's Keep Net Almost Empty

Lino's Pizzeria wasn't able to muster a great deal of scoring power in the Smith Falls Soccer Tournament Sunday, but then they didn't have to. Goalie Gary Donovan posted four shutouts as Lino's recorded a 5-1 record to win the "A" championship.

The Belleville team began play with a 2-1 over Kingston Greek Olympics getting goals from John O'Neill and Joe Romano. In their second outing, Romano scored the only goal of the game in a 1-0 win over Ottawa Glengarians.

Ernie Brown counted twice to lead Lino's past Ottawa Hollandia 2-0 for their third win in as many games. Their only loss came in the fourth match when they dropped a 2-1 verdict to Ottawa Falcons. Romano scored the losers goal.

They bounced back with a 2-0 win over Ottawa Royals on goals by Zdravko a n d O'Neill. Their final tournament win was 1-0 over Kingston Raiders to complete their 5-1 record. Romano was the Belleville goalgetter. In the grand championship p l a y they were defeated 1-0 by Ottawa Blue Hawks.

In addition to the "A" team title, Ernie Brown of Lino's was chosen as the player best combining sportsmanship and ability.

They were back in action Sunday with a 3-2 s p l i t against Italo Canadians in a Kingston and District League fixture.

A goal by Romano gave Lino's a 1-0 lead at half time before the Kingston c l u b bounced back to regain a 2-1 margin. Zdravko earned a tie for Belleville by heading in a cross from Brown.

Three Hitch-hikers Attacked with Axe

ORILLIA, Ont. (CP) — A suspect was apprehended here Sunday in connection with the attempted murder of three Grills a area young people last Saturday.

Donald Hugh McSweyn, 26, of Orillia, was arrested near the grounds of the Ontario Hospital here and transferred to the Bracebridge detachment of the provincial police where he was charged with three counts of attempted murder, a police spokesman said.

Earlier Sunday, police recovered a white van believed to have been used by the man to pick up three hitch-hikers Saturday. He allegedly attacked the three with an axe.

Minesweeper Enters Haiphong

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Chinese minesweeper has slipped into Haiphong harbor for the first time since the U.S. Navy sealed off North Vietnamese ports with mines last May.

Intelligence sources suggested the action may signal to an effort to reopen North Vietnam's most important port.

Officials said the United States intends to keep the ports closed and that fresh mines would be laid to replace any that are removed.

U.S. warplanes struck heavily in the Haiphong area during the weekend but there was no indication the minesweeper was hit.

Intelligence specialists identified the Chinese-built craft as a Wosung-class minesweeper a 136-foot ship believed capable of clearing acoustic and possibly magnetic mines.

Starts Sentence

NEW YORK (AP) — Clifford Irving left his wife and two young sons in Florida Sunday and flew here en route to the federal prison in Lewisburg, Pa., where he begins a 31/2-year sentence Monday for conspiracy and fraud in faking an autobiography of Howard Hughes.

On his arrival at LaGuardia Airport he said he was "rather depressed" at the thought of prison but added he hoped he and his wife, Edith, would reunite when his term ended.

Pilot Blamed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite his accident's warnings, the pilot of an airline intentionally descended below a permissible altitude and his aircraft crashed on an instrument approach to high-rimmed New Haven, Conn., airport last June, the National Transportation Safety Board said Sunday.

David Eastridge, 39, of Lorton, Va., the pilot of the Allegheny Airlines Convair 580 died in the crash and 26 passengers and a stewardess died in the fiery fireball that followed.

The co-pilot, James Walker of Memphis, Tenn., and two passengers were the only survivors.

The co-pilot considered taking over command as the plane descended, the board said, but decided it was better to have one person in charge than to have two fighting over the controls.

Klan for PCs

CALGARY (CP) — The Imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan in Alberta said Saturday his organization will "campaign actively" for Progressive Conservative candidates in the next federal election campaign. Tearlach Mac A' Phearsain of Calgary said in an interview the klan "will be parading and lecturing throughout the province to tell Albertans how we feel they should vote."

Eighteen-year-old Pamela Simcoe of the nearby Rama Indian reserve was reported in fair condition in a Toronto hospital with a fractured skull.

Pauline Conego, 20, also of Rama and Donald Baker, 18, of Orillia were arrested near the grounds of the Ontario Hospital here and transferred to the Bracebridge detachment of the provincial police where he was charged with three counts of attempted murder, a police spokesman said.

Earlier Sunday, police recovered a white van believed to have been used by the man to pick up three hitch-hikers Saturday. He allegedly attacked the three with an axe.

Six Killed

RIVIERE AU RENAUD, Que. (CP) — Six persons, three of them teenagers, were killed Saturday near this Gaspe Peninsula community when their car slipped off the highway and tumbled 75 feet into the St. Lawrence River. Riviere au Renaud is 340 miles northeast of Montreal.

There they were beaten and thrown into the Black River. All three managed to swim to shore.

Metro Toronto police were reported Sunday investigating the possibility of a connection between the axe attack and the rape of a Toronto bookstore operator later Saturday.

A police spokesman said a 42-year-old woman was working in her bookstore and was struck on the back of the head and while unconscious, was raped.

Nordic Goddesses Go Nude

COPENHAGEN (AP) — A veritable Nordic goddess stood at the prow of the yacht making its way into the small Danish harbor of Hornbaek.

Long blonde hair cascaded over sun-bronzed shoulders. Her tan was total. She wore a strip of cloth around her hips, the bottom of her bikini—and no top.

This Aphrodite rising from the sea leaped ashore to moor the yacht. She was quite indifferent to the stares of the dockside loafers.

Having moored the vachi—it was from Sweden—the girl jumped aboard again without a backward glance.

She was an eye-catching example of the droves of girls going topless this summer on public beaches in Europe.

The unabashed topless beauties seem most numerous in Denmark but there have never been so many in St. Tropez, the French resort where Brigitte Bardot started the whole thing.

Even on Gelfman beaches, where they prefer things to be tidily organized, an ever girl of bare bosom from fairreserved maiden voyeurs is being tolerated.

The topless fashion is sternly prohibited in the Latin countries of Italy, Spain and Portugal. In Britain, too, it is frowned on and can bring the cops into action.

Nor is it show time in Belgium and the Netherlands. Girls are decorous in the Alpine summer resorts of Switzerland and Austria.

But in Denmark you don't have to go very far—or be a Peeping Tom—to see scores of topless girls.

They frolic on the public beaches of Copenhagen's suburbs. At Hornbaek, on the tip of Sealand, a reporter counted 27 topless girls in 10 minutes on the beach.

The trend began hesitantly in Denmark last summer and is now the "in" thing among the young.

They are not naturists, models or exhibitionists. They are the girl next door, the girl who sells you a cigar, those typists from the office across the corridor, young teachers and their pupils, or mothers at the beach with their children.

Cecilia Frank, 18 and Swedish, told a reporter that there was something wrong if the nude look still angered people.

"A bikini is distinctly more sexy than the naked body," she said.

McKeough Case

Davis Voices Faith

LONDON (CP) — Premier William Davis of Ontario said today he has confidence in his treasurer, Darcy McKeough, but he cannot comment at this stage on the question of whether McKeough's private investments may have conflicted with his government position.

He said he may make a statement or issue "general guidelines" on his return to Toronto Sept. 3.

Davis was questioned about published reports that as municipal affairs minister McKeough had approved the subdivision of land in his hometown of Chatham by a company in which he had a financial interest.

The approval was reported to have been given in December, 1969, when South Chatham Estates Ltd. was able to proceed with the subdivision.

Davis said in an interview that he discussed the matter with McKeough in Munich last Saturday. At that time,

O'Connell To Report On Strike

OTTAWA (CP)—Labor Minister Martin O'Connell is expected in a report to a concerned cabinet today on the Vancouver dock strike.

After that the cabinet is expected to give some considered to the effect of the strike on Liberal chances in a fall election that is expected by many.

The minister, who returned during the weekend from Vancouver, is expected shortly to receive—if he has not already got a report of the possible effects of a prolonged strike.

Meanwhile, he is in consultation with the office of Otto Lang, justice minister who heads the Canadian wheat board, and was closeted most of Monday afternoon with his own officials.

The strike is of most immediate concern because of its effect on grain deliveries from the big West Coast port.

The concern is not only political.

Already Canada has had worried communications from Japan and China about deliveries of contracted wheat. The same worry might be expressed by the Soviet Union.

Politically, both Liberals and opposition members see the strike as a considerable detriment to Liberal chances on the Prairies, where they have only 20 of 33 seats.

Normally, 10 million bushels of grain move through the port of Vancouver a week. Mr. Lang's officials now are attempting to work out how long it would take to clear the backlog when the strike is ended.

Gun Battle Rages Around Hospital

Patients cowered inside as gunmen in at least 10 positions pumped more than 1,000 rounds at two military posts in 90 minutes.

The Irish Republican Army—which Monday night pledged to fight "relentlessly and ruthlessly until victory"—suffered up to 18 casualties in the shootout, the army said.

But the guerrillas forced soldiers to abandon one sandbagged position. Eight troopers were evacuated by armored car at the height of the battle because the attack was so intense. .

The gunfight erupted after a Monday weekend of violence that claimed at least 11 lives to raise Ulster's three-year death toll to be a known 542.

The latest fatality was a middle-aged man who was blown up with his dog as he strolled near the border with the Irish republic. The army said he stepped on a mine.

The fighting broke around the Royal Victoria Hospital—regarded as one of Europe's best for treatment of heart conditions—just before midnight Monday.

Army headquarters said two observation posts, one at the rear entrance to the hospital grounds and the other some 300 yards away, were blasted by a variety of weapons including high-powered Armalite rifles, M-1 carbines and sub-machine-guns.

Gunman Kills Camper in B.C.

ROCK CREEK, B.C. (CP) — Police continued their hunt today for a trigger-happy gunman who killed one woman Monday and sent three other people to hospital with multiple bullet wounds.

Police said the gunman opened fire with a rifle on four campers in a remote part of the eastern Okanagan Valley northeast of Osoyoos and then fled in a four-wheel-drive vehicle. There was no apparent motive, police said.

A technician at the hospital in Trail, B.C., said two of the victims were shot a total of 14 times. They were Mildred Wilson, 55, and Lester Clark, 36, both listed in fair condition. Allan Wilson, 62, was in good condition, suffering from an undetermined number of bullet wounds. All three are from Penticton.

Ontario Plans Alternatives

By KEN SMITH
Staff Reporter

Provincial authorities have given up plans to build a fresh water pipeline from Lake Ontario to the greater Belleville - Trenton area. Instead they have set a two-to-three year target date for construction of alternate regional services based on existing Belleville and Trenton water resources.

This was made evident in a letter to Belleville Industrial commissioner Fred Bemis, a copy of which was made public before Sidney township council last night.

Ministry of Environment officials confirm that previous study is now being given to a program for "the extension of water and sewer services into the township of Sidney from the existing Belleville and Trenton systems."

The program will be a major one, contends Sidney reeve Jack Bush, who says the township "now is waving goodbye to prospective industries" because of inadequate services.

However, he says one industry that may employ upwards of 1,000 workers "may still be on the string." Township council wants creation of an industrial park strip south from Highway 401 to the Canadian National railroad tracks.

"They (the ministry of environment) must be coming up with plans to cope with major expansion," says Bush.

The letter from ministry official J. R. Bore, director of the department's sanitary engineering branch, strikes a cautionary optimistic note by saying "it will likely require at least two years before such services are available for use."

Reeve Bush thinks that is fine and we do the other councillors of the fast-growing municipality.

The director of the sanitary engineering branch also says in his letter "we (the sanitary engineering branch) are discussing this matter (of services) with our Project Development Branch to determine if some method could be devised to expedite the service installation" — and expedite growth of Sidney.

He concludes by asking to be told the dates by which the proposed industries would desire water and sewage services.

Director Barr feels that the interim servicing methods may be used if they best medical officer of health, Dr. C. Lenk, agrees and a feasibility study is being done to this. But the director says "these alternatives (wells, septic tanks and holding tank) could be easily on a temporary basis."

Bush feels it is difficult to know exactly the number of industries available for locating in the largely suburban township until the services are there. He says this is because "many of the land resolutions are handled by real estate people who like to work quietly."

The controversial Lake Ontario pipeline clearly has been shelved by the ministry, although it fears that it might be foisted on local municipalities against their will.

Mr. Barr makes it clear in his communication that in view of rejection of the pipeline by Belleville and Trenton authorities, the ministry has rejected it too and proceeded with studies of visible alternatives.

Amin Asks Bid to Free Rhodesia

KAMPALA (Reuter) — Ugandan President Idi Amin has proposed that Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania join forces to liberate Rhodesia from the white minority government.

He put forward the proposal in a speech Monday to troops at Jinja army barracks. 50 miles east of Kampala. Gen. Amin accused Tanzania's President Julius Nyerere of making the liberation of Africa more difficult by "not pulling in the right direction."

He said that by bringing in thousands of Chinese technicians to build the railway linking Tanzania and Zambia, Nyerere was being "penetrated by Communists."

Using this excuse South Africa was able to obtain arms for its defence, he said.

Eighty-one Stray Dogs Share Spinster's Fortune

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Eighty-one stray dogs have inherited about $14 million from the estate of their late spinster mistress.

The will of Eleanor Ritchey, heir to the Quaker State Refining Corp., was finally settled Monday after years of litigation.

Miss Ritchey, who died Oct. 14, 1968, at the age of 58, left her estate to 150 stray dogs.

Her will was contested by a handful of relatives.

The dogs that Miss Ritchey had cared for — everything from mutts to pedigrees — now live in an antiseptic, modern clinic on a 180-acre ranch near Deerfield Beach, Fla. Approximately $17,000 is spent each year on the dogs' food and housing, while another $12,000 a year pays for their weekly medical checkups and treatment of illnesses.

Tattooed to prove their membership in the original 150, the animals are separated by sex so as to prevent propagation. Accidental offspring would be eligible to receive benefits from the estate.

After all the canine heirs succumb, the estate is to be passed on to the Auburn Research Foundation, at Auburn University in Alabama, for study of diseases of small animals.

Women Not Told of Stilbestrol Experiment

Cancer Found in 7 Girls Whose Mothers Were Given Hormone

CHICAGO (AP) — A synthetic female hormone recently associated with cancer—was given to 846 pregnant women in 1950-52 as part of a clinical experiment of which they were unaware.

The hormone is, diethylstilbestrol, also called DES or stilbestrol.

In wholly unconnected tests two decades later, three Boston researchers found "a highly significant association" between DES and vaginal cancer among seven young girls whose mothers took the drug during their pregnancies. One girl died.

On Aug. 2, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration banned all production of DES for use in animal feeds because it turned up in the tissue of animals slaughtered for food. Researchers had also reported that DES caused cancer in some experimental animals.

Canada also has banned use of DES in animal feeds.

At the time of the Chicago experiment, physicians had no reason to suspect DES of cancer-causing potential in the patients' children.

Dr. Charles McCartney, who participated in the experiment, said its purpose was to determine whether DES was helpful in preventing complications of pregnancy, as was widely believed then. The answer from the experiment was negative, he said.

The study was conducted at the University of Chicago's department of obstetrics and gynecology among patients at Chicago's Lying-in Hospital from Sept. 28, 1950, through Nov. 28, 1952.

There were 2,162 in all, but the group was subsequently reduced to 1,969. Of these, 840 were given DES at random and the others received placebos, or tablets containing no drugs.

Dr. McCartney said the study is of particular value today because it may hold the answer to whether there is a time-bomb effect to DES use.

The first indication there might be some association between DES-treated mothers and the occurrence of vaginal cancer in their daughters was contained in a report April 22, 1971, in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Doctors were puzzled by seven cases of vaginal cancer which came to the hospital's attention during the period 1966-69. The patients' ages ranged from 15 to 22.

In the detective work that followed, the investigators discovered that in each case, the mother had been treated with DES during pregnancy.

Firehall, Garage On Next Agenda

Decision will be made at the next meeting of Sidney Township council September 5 whether to build a new firehall and municipal garage for the township.

Reeve Jack Bush said today he expects the likely outcome of discussions on the subject will be that either the new firehall or garage will be built this year. "If we just do one, we will not have to de-cone of discussions on the two, we can handle it out of current funds."

At last night's meeting of township council, there was considerable debate on where the new facilities should be located. The township has already bought land adjacent to the Wallbridge municipal office site for construction of the new garage but residents of the area do not want it there.

"There will be objections no matter where we put it," says the reeve.

A majority of councillors appear in favor locating the new firehall beside the township offices but there is no consensus on location of garages.

Estimated cost of the firehall is $40,000, for the garage $45,000.

Justice at Stake Says Ticktin

Standard Traffic Ticket Ruled Invalid by Judge

By BRIAN AMARON
Staff Reporter

Judge John Clendenning ruled Monday that the standard ticket used by police forces in Ontario is invalid for all traffic offences but speeding.

The ruling means that persons charged with traffic offences other than speeding may have the charges dismissed in court. More than 300 offences are affected.

Judge Clendenning dismissed a charge of careless driving against a Belleville man in provincial court after he ruled that the information on which the charge was written was "duplicitous".

He said wording on the ticket, which stipulates the charge of speeding in addition to whatever charge is assigned by police, is contrary to convention of a 1958 Ontario Court of Appeal ruling saying that only one offence may appear on such forms.

Crown Attorney John Prinsep plans to appeal the decision.

Belleville lawyer Peter Ticktin raised the objection before Judge Clendenning two weeks ago. In his plea, Ticktin said that persons charged with offences other than speeding cannot be sure which charge applies to them.

He noted that the standard ticket has the phrase "did commit the offence of speeding and/or" between the words of information and the specific charge.

Ticktin, called to the Bar in March, said the ambiguity and discrepancy the first time he looked at the ticket.

The graduate of Western Ontario University Law School worried about the precedent such forms could set.

"If the accused is allowed to be misused with this type of summons and information, at this stage it represents only a minor departure from some rights. But the natural extension of this could be very serious in some other cases," he said.

He said many offences listed under the Criminal Code, such as bribery and theft, follow the same basic information requirements.

"It looks like just a technicality but it goes to the root of national justice," he said.

Up to now, it was understood in court that the word speeding should not be read in when other offences were involved. This agreement was the basis of Judge Wills' ruling, Ticktin said.

Should the Court of Appeal confirm Judge Clendenning's ruling, all provincial court judges will be bound to follow suit. In that case, the tickets may have to be altered.

Ticktin, who articled with Belleville lawyers Robert Tennant and Paul Russell, was involved in another controversy that issue arose this year when he went to bat for his wife in a parking ticket debate. On that occasion, police ruled parking information on Belleville's streets was inadequate, forcing the city to revise its signs.

A native of the Bronx, New York, Ticktin has been a Crown Attorney in Ontario and Quebec for two years.

He has had his own practice on Front Street for three months.

Bat-bitten Boy Urgently Sought

Health authorities in Belleville today were urgently seeking a youth licensed to own by a rabid bat after one found for the bat to be searched to a dead end.

Only response to repeated appeals came early today from a Belleville man who reported his son had taken home a bat last night than released it.

At first, said Dr. C. H. Lenk, health officer for Hastings and Prince Edward counties, it was thought the youngster may have used the weapon by youth or at least among a group involved in the batting incident at the park in Belleville Plaza.

But, taken to be with effects at the plaza by his father, the boy could not be identified by a man who had witnessed the incident, said Dr. Lenk.

The search has been resumed for the boy reported bitten and in need of immediate treatment if the bat was a rabid.

Also being sought was a man who apparently attempted to sell a bat at a pet store in the shopping centre later in the day, said Dr. Lenk. But it is not clear if any connection exists between both incidents.

Dr. Lenk said the bat released by the boy at his home was given him by an adult at the plaza. Had it not been freed laboratory tests would have revealed in 72 hours if the creature was rabid.

"There's no question of any penalty. It's just a question of saving the life of the boy who may have been bitten," said the health officer.

Search for the unknown boy was touched off after noon yesterday when a plaza merchant reported he had been by health offices that a youngster had been bitten twice by a bat.

What has authorities worried is that bats shun both the daylight and human contact. Unless "pushed to extremes" they won't bite, said Dr. Lenk.

He agreed the creature could have been roused in a vacant store in the plaza but said no chances could be taken since bats are an "extreme-

RCMP Computer Pinpoints Lawbreakers

OTTAWA (Special) — Policemen on the beat and in patrol cars across the country have a new ally this summer.

It is a 32-million computer, ticking quietly away in a squat gray concrete building in Ottawa, ready to provide police with instant answers to their questions about stolen vehicles, wanted or missing persons, and other police inquiries.

The computer is the heart of the Canadian Police Information Centre. It is owned by the federal government and operated by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, but officials say it will eventually serve every policeman in Canada — Mounties, provincial and municipal forces.

The centre operates through a network of terminals, which to date have been located in 68 police stations in southern and central Ontario. The system expands to British Columbia with added 38 terminals in September, and will connect to about 150 police stations by the end of 1973.

Belleville city police will hook up to the system October 1. The OPP detachment on North Front St. has had the computer linked up in its radio room since July.

Eventually, says the centre's director Gordon Scott, police will be hooked up to 900 terminals giving coverage to the whole of Canada.

The system is as complex as modern communication technology can be, but it operates very simply.

Your car is stolen. You report the licence number, make, model and colour to the local police. The officer taking your call turns to the small typewriter - like terminal and taps out the information.

He doesn't have to make up a file on the incident. The report now stored in the computer is instantly accessible to his department and every other police station in Canada which is tied into the system.

The other side of the system comes into play when a policeman on patrol spots your car travelling at a high speed, being used in a crime or in some suspicious nature. He radios his office with the licence number, or a description of the car, and the radio operator taps out a question on his terminal.

In less than three minutes, says Mr. Thomson, the officer on patrol knows the car is yours, that it is stolen, and whether or not its present occupants are suspected of any other crime.

And that can happen if your car is spotted across town or 1,000 miles away.

The system can speed up the recovery of stolen vehicles, or other property, and makes it possible for information about wanted criminals to move faster than they can — a problem which frustrates policemen in an age of rapid transit.

The system will also help save policemen's lives, according to the centre's assistant director, Chief Superintendant A. C. Potter.

A policeman stopping a suspicious car on a lonely country road will know in advance whether he is likely to be received with a smile or a gun when he approaches the car.

It might also save you from the embarrassment and fear of being apprehended by armed policemen if someone who looks like you, or who drives a car that looks like yours, committed an armed robbery 300 miles away.

Mr. Thomson, a 43-year-old computer specialist who was hired as a civilian member of the RCMP four years ago, says the centre's computer system is the most complex in Canada, and the most advanced crime information system in operation in the world.

Somewhat similar systems are being used by airlines or banks to keep track of reservations or accounts, says Mr. Thomson, but the centre's system is more complex and more flexible.

And, says Chief Potter, it has to be more reliable, faster, and operate 24 hours a day.

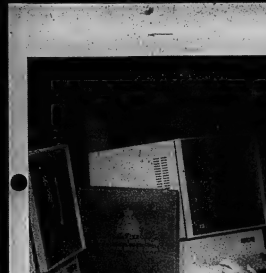
If there is a delay in confirming your airline reservation because the computer is over-loaded or broken down, it amounts to an inconvenience.

"But if you're following a car at high speed, and you want to know if it's stolen — you want to know now," said Chief Potter.

In an attempt to ensure that the computer supplies the kind of information policemen really need, the system was developed, with the aid of an advisory committee staffed by representatives of police departments in Vancouver, Calgary, Edmonton, Regina, Winnipeg, Toronto, Hamilton, Montreal, Quebec City, and Halifax.

In operation, one-third of the 250 people working in the centre are trained specialists chosen to bring police knowledge and language to the system.

"What we have tried to do is tell the computer how a policeman thinks," Mr. Thomson said.



It is too early to tell if the Canadian Police Information Centre will make a sizeable dent in the country's crime rate, but the men who run the centre at least know it works.

When the computer went "on the air" at noon, July 1, Mr. Thomson said he would have been surprised if it had scored one "hit", or successful answer to a query, during the busy holiday weekend.

Less than two hours later, however, in the Niagara region of Ontario used the centre's facilities to confirm that a car under investigation was stolen, and before the weekend ended the computer had scored more than 40 "hits".

"We're pretty sure it's working," Mr. Thomson said.

Facts at Fingertips

At the Canadian Police Information Centre in Ottawa, Corporal John Moodie mans the control console. Information flashed on the video screens of the control console allows the operator to communicate with the CPIC system. The system currently has terminals in 68 Ontario police agencies, giving policemen instant access to Canada-wide information on stolen vehicles and criminals. (Special Intelligencer Photo)

Northbrook's Clinic Boon to Area People

By HARRY MULHALL

NORTHBROOK — Financial frugality is a key word at present. At the same time delivery of health care here means the sky's the limit — three times a week.

That's when the doctor comes calling.

Regular as a normal police beat, on alternate weekdays a light plane dips over the pines surrounding this little highway 41 centre on the northeast fringes of Quinte bush country.

Its single passenger could be any of 15 doctors who have volunteered to man the Northbrook Medical Clinic — a venture which even Health Minister Richard Potter lauds as an exemplary study in professional and community co-operation.

The clinic is "a damn good example" of what Ontario requires to meet health care needs in many such communities, Dr. Potter said last night.

To many of the 3,000 estimated population it serves in the surrounding countryside, the centre is a comfortably working solution to an urgent need.

For a great-grandfather like Jim Meeks it means medical attention is only a six-mile drive away.

For 80-year-old Charles Wood and his wife Louise — who once used to drive more than 30 miles when needing a physician — it's even closer.

They live just across from the one-time two-room school, now a community centre where space has been made for the clinic, in operation since mid-January.

Not that such a service is a new departure for Dr. Richard Milne and his other Kingston fellow-physicians who helped create the venture.

His was the driving force in 1968 which organized the Parham Medical Clinic 35 miles north of Kingston, now funded by the Ontario Ministry of Health through its planning and research program.

By contrast, the Northbrook venture's a private enterprise venture, financed by, a $51,000 grant spread over three years from the Physician's Services Inc. Foundation — the organization founded after the 22-year-old medical insurance scheme run by Ontario's doctors went out of business after government medicare arrived.

Impetus for the Northbrook clinic came last year when Dr. Milne and some associates flew here to see if they could repeat the success of the Parham experiment in another needy area. Their feasibility study coincided with a area businessmen to get a doctor into the area. Inevitably, initiatives crossed.

Dr. Milne said his group was willing to provide a doctor for a half-day three times a week and staff a clinic for five full days with a resident nurse and secretary.

When he approached PSI Inc for funds, he pointed out a key factor: it would be impossible for a doctor to drive 60 to 90 minutes from Kingston then comfortably do a day's work. The answer was aircraft. Hence the idea of the flying doctors came about.

So, each Monday, Wednesday and Friday a doctor arrives by plane and opens office in the clinic set up in the schoolhouse purchased by the local businessmen and converted into a community centre. Between times, residents have the services of Mrs. Tish Butson, a nurse who came north from Burlington three years ago with her husband who operates the general store here.

Case loads appear to average out around 50 patients a week, but vary. One winter week there were 16. Recently, more than 80 used its facilities in one week.

If the number of patients or the quantity of health problems dropped there might be no reason for such a venture, says Dr. Milne.

"But the problems we're seeing here, I think, are very real and still worthy of medical attention."

For people like the Woods and others the clinic solves more than physical problems.

"It makes you feel secure," says Mr. Wood. "The nurse is always do something that will help you until the doctor gets there."

Before the clinic Mr. and Mrs. Wood had to have someone drive them to Marlbank to see a doctor.

Living six miles north of here, fetting to a doctor, says his grandson Albert, either meant driving about 24 miles south to Tweed or 46 miles north to Belleville.

The trim, wood-panelled clinic is a compact unit, including a doctor's office, two examination rooms and a little laboratory for on-the-spot tests. An extended facility is a courier service provided by the Medical Doctor Sciences services which daily picks up specimens — mostly for testing at Belleville General Hospital — and returns them in 24 hours. The clinic also carries a basic stock of drugs and medications for on-spot dispensing.

All is performed by one local bookkeeping.

The PSI grant allows $15,000 a year for operating costs — most of it for the full-time nurse and secretary. Rental of aircraft — fitted with skis in winter and mostly flown by Douglas Tunin of the Kingston Flying Club, — is estimated at $18,000 for the three years.

"It's an extremely small budget — and this is one of the things we're very proud of," says Dr. Milne.

Is the clinic a practical alternative to a resident doctor?

Dr. Milne believes there is a difference between the medical wants and the actual medical needs of a community. It could be economically unfeasible to staff many smaller communities which may not require a resident doctor.

"We feel with the type of medicine we're practising — and transportation being what it is, we can provide a significant part of the medical needs of this community".

However, the success of the Parham and Northbrook ventures may not apply elsewhere. Solutions should be "absolutely unique" geared to a community's problems and resources.

Dr. Milne believes getting upcoming young doctors out of the larger centres into contact with smaller communities through such clinics may be professionally beneficial. It could also help encourage more graduates to smaller centres, although there already is a trend to increased general practice.

As for his own group, he doubts if it will engage in any more ventures like Parham and Northbrook, since it already is stretched "to the limits of its capability".

When a group practitioner leaves Kingston, there is no need soliciting a replacement. There has always been enthusiasm about the clinics, says Dr. Milne.

"It's a rather unique response. I can't explain what it is that keeps this group together. Except, I think they're tremendously satisfied and tremendously proud of what they're doing."

Sidney Debates House Numbering

Discussions have been going on in Sidney township for months on the subject of implementing a house numbering system.

There was more talk at council about it last night but there was no decision.

Opinion on the issue is diverse. However, consensus is developing among the authorities that something must be done fast.

CORPORAL J. E. ANDREWS, of Belleville, technician with 423 Signal Troop based at Bagotville, Que., will be competing in the forthcoming NORAD sponsored William Tell weapons meet to be held at Tyndall, Florida. Corporal Andrews is a member of the technical team which will maintain the five participating aircraft of Air Defence Command. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Andrews of 86 Emily St., Belleville. Corporal Andrews is married to the former Joyce Morency of Cap de la Madeleine, Que. and is the father of one child.

Problems have thwarted putting a numbering system into operation and none were solved by yesterday's council meeting.

The major question now is whether to use a numbering program like that used in Belleville and Trenton or the newer grid system used by the township of Toronto and town of Mississauga.

By the grid approach, the township would be divided into blocks similar to a road map and house numbers would be preceded by a number coding the approximate location of the house in the township.

For example, all houses in the area of CFB Trenton might begin with the number 11, those near the Bay of Quinte Golf and Country Club 15, those near Tower's and Ford City 19. Batawa could be 31, Wallbridge 45, Glen Ross 81 and the Oak Lake area 99.

The prefixed numbers would assist in guiding people to the vicinity of the house. Concession roads would be one of the bases for the Sidney grid numbering, if ever brought into effect.

Mariner's Death

Chichester's crowning feat of course was his lone voyage — never before accomplished — around the world in his yacht Gipsy Moth IV in 1967 and it stemmed from the progression of earlier ocean journeys, including the transatlantic races, which brought his name to the forefront in recent years. Since then there have been other trips, notably one from the west coast of Africa to Central America.

Sir Francis was never too robust physically but he drove himself mercilessly, with what seemed at times like masochistic fervor. Only a couple of months or so ago he competed in the latest transatlantic race but, suffering even then from the cancer that felled him in the end, he had to give up. Recently he entered hospital in Plymouth, a historic home of sailors and ships and the scene, as we recall, of his homecoming from the global triumph five years ago.

If Chichester the sailor is uppermost in our minds let us not forget either his equally astonishing feats as an aviator in different parts of the world in the late twenties and early thirties and his adventures in New Zealand where he lived for a time.

During the last war he taught navigation and in recent years when he was not sailing he ran a map-making business. He tells of these and the other events of a unique career in his book, The Lonely Sea and the Sky.

It's Welsh

If you should be travelling in Patagonia and have not read the history of the area in advance it will undoubtedly come as a surprise to come upon a place called Trelew where the population speaks not only Spanish but Welsh.

That's the way it is and you can read of the Welsh settlement there and at nearby Puerto Madryn in the works of A. R. Tschiffely and other authors who have visited this remote region of Latin America.

Trelew has been in the news of late with word of a battle at a nearby naval base between guerrillas and Argentine military police. Fourteen guerrillas were killed and five wounded. They had earlier organized a mass prison escape and hijacking of a jet plane in which ten extremists escaped across the Andes to Chile. Subsequently they stormed the armory at Trelew navy air base and this led to the fatal confrontation with the military.

The Welsh, along with colonies of English and Scots whose ancestors also came as pioneers have been on the scene for a century. The original 150 Welsh settlers at Puerto Madryn were hit hard by floods and the surrounding desert but overcame the patriots and even accepted some immigrants from the United States. Trelew, as Robert Kane points out in his South America A to Z, is the newer and more prosperous of the two Welsh settlements and has a population of about 12,000.

In the Money

The women's pro golf circuit in the United States is paying off for Quebec's Jocelyne Bourassa during her first season. She lost in a playoff with Kathy Whitworth in Kansas recently and generally placed well in previous tournaments. In fact we understand she is in the running for the title of "rookie of the year."

Last December 31, a year of amateur golf success behind her and with $10,000 backing from a multi-millionaire Quebec financier to start her off, Miss Bourassa, 25, flew to Miami for professional debut. As Weekend magazine sports editor Andy O'Brien pointed out at the time, never before had she been away from home in Shawinigan during French Canada's most festive holiday period.

She had left her mother crying. "Something," she said, "seemed to be holding me back at the door, but I felt if I didn't take the big step then, I would always regret my failure to face the challenge."

The scene was eloquent of a host of agonizing family farewells down the ages, but Jocelyne Bourassa took that step, leaving her job at the Montreal YMCA and telling her boy friend there would be no wedding bells for two years.

It was the psychological moment, for she had gone as far as she could in the amateur sphere, being Canadian champion in 1965 at the age of 18, again in 1971 when she beat Marlene Stewart Streit and with a win in the New Zealand amateur also behind her. One of these days we will undoubtedly hear that she has pulled off her first tour victory.

Rapping with Youth and Senior Citizens

Laughter and Boredom as Stanfield Hits the Trail

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — It could happen only in Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield.

There he was, on one of these campaign trail excursions, in St. Catharines, the hub city of the Niagara fruit-and-tourist belt, chatting away on one of those open-line radio shows.

He had been chewing away for an hour on the problems of the day when a woman called in, all excited, to tell him she had been so impressed by his intelligent understanding of the involved issues she was convinced he should be in politics.

"O, thank you madame," murmured Stanfield, bemused, "very kind of you to say so."

"Yes, indeed," she enthused, "I think you would make an excellent leader for the Conservatives."

Stanfield assured her, in all wry sincerity, that she had given him "something to think about."

That "something" he told a rally later when relating the incident, was "how nice it is to be a politician — you get to be so well known."

There was a good, laughing moment, too, in a bear-pit session with students at the Wigham district high school, in Northeastern Ontario.

What do you talk about with a bunch of kids?

Well, unemployment, national unity, taxation, welfare and such. Stanfield has found from experience, is not going to grab them.

But 18-year-olds have votes this time, so you wisely just stand there waiting to take your cue from them.

At Wingham it was not long in coming.

"What do you think about long hair?" a shaggy youth asked the square Stanfield.

"Wish I had some," he told the audience.

And with that audience, he had it made right from the opener.

At Mount Forest, up Owen Sound way where they were celebrating the town's centennial, they shoved Stanfield at the head of a parade of some 500 kids and marched him a mile to the fair grounds.

Stanfield, like some Pied Piper, led the way, and a band brought up the rear playing bits of all the unlikely things, the Third Movement from Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

"And all the time," grinned Stanfield, "I thought Canada was the Canadian cultural capital."

Onto a radio hot line in deepest Quebec's Chicoutimi, came an exuberant Candidate shouting in French down the phone "Vive Le Stanfield."

"A La Victoire!" bellowed back Stanfield and the caller went off the line singing La Marseillaise.

Stanfield has the grace — or good sense — to know when he has fallen flat on his face.

It was in Fenelon Falls, in Ontario's Peterborough district, and there he was flogging unemployment, taxation, inflation, welfarism and assorted social evils, attributing these ills, of course, to the Liberals.

And the listeners just sat on their hands in embarrassed boredom.

"Can't you just FEEL the discontent," shrugged Stanfield, wryly, with a slow smile, recognizing a dud performance when he gave one.

And they laughed and gave him a hand.

Even if the kids do not mob him for kisses and younger women crowd around to warm themselves in the glow of charisma, there has to be something characteristically attractive about Stanfield.

Perhaps it is fulsomeness, a talent for putting people at their ease and making them feel at home.

Swinging Seventies Housing

Charlotte Observer

Every young bachelor lives in a modern apartment complex, where he is surrounded by tennis courts, swimming pools and ladies in waiting. And every young woman, bless her independent soul, is busy constructing a second-story flat, the better to visually shock visiting parents. So much for the stereotypes; now for a taste of reality.

The Wall Street Journal reports that a growing percentage of young unmarrieds are fleeing the casual apartment lifestyle in quest of home-ownership. As with their married friends, they see a private home as an investment and a tax saving, a way to fight inflation.

One traditional home-buying factor not included in the plans of single people is room for children. Partly as a consequence, developers are concentrating more on condominiums, which have patios but very little yard space. Some builders claim that more than 10 per cent of their condominiums are owned by unmarrieds; this, in turn, is creating a new market for mortgage lenders.

We can remember when the builder-developer was the target for the Chinese War Relief Fund, a total of $866 was collected. This amount exceeded by a comfortable margin, the results of any previous teg day held in this city.

Peron Is Still Knocking at the Door

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign News Analyst
Thomson News Service

If Juan Domingo Peron, the aging Argentine, ex-dictator does go home from Spain this fall for the first time since his overthrow in 1955, it will be a phenomenon of a kind.

Between 1946 and 1955, Peron and his late first wife, Evita, not only ruled Argentina singlehandedly, but created a unique social revolution. It's thrust has not diminished since their exit — if anything, it has increased.

Based on Argentina's disenfranchised working classes, urban poor and once, much of the military, peronism is one of the dynamic political forces in Latin America today.

But it has been leaderless since Peron was kicked out in September, 1955. Yet it has not been "leaderless" in the sense the ejected leader was not abandoned by his followers.

The impression is that the leader, his party, and millions of his supporters have survived almost two decades of suppression and exile — so that Peron's return could mean his re-appearance as president once again.

The vehicle for this will not be another coo overthrowing an ejected post Peron government, but the ballot box. Argentina is already ruled by military officers, has been since 1966. Gen. Lanusse, the current president has promised free elections will be return to Argentina in 1973.

Only twice since his overthrow in 1955 have the followers of Peron, or peronistas, been allowed to vote. In both instances they won overwhelmingly. And in both instances, the government of the day overruled the decision of the ballot boxes.

Persuaded by perceived Castro's revolution in Cuba by more than a decade and Allende's elected centre span, as it was being hoisted into position Sept. 11, 1916, fell into the river taking the lives of 13 workmen.

1941—Six tourists were killed when a French warfighter hit a cable on a scenic ski run on Mont Blanc.

1943—Danes scuttled almost all of the occupied country's small fleet.

Marxism by a quarter century. Yet the roots of his appeal, though dressed in the panoply of Italian fascism, were populist, rejection of a do nothing oligarchy, placing political power in the hands of trade unions and the petty bourgeois.

Peron as a military dictator developed a curious concept of Argentina as a "third force" in Latin America, standing between communism and capitalism. His country had neither the physical nor human resources for such a giant role.

And he also had a northern neighbor in Brazil, whose giant size and growth expectations would inevitably make her the coming world power, if there were to be one from the Americas.

His vast, expensive social and welfare programs dominated by his wife) bankrupted Argentina. The Peronz used the hard currency bankers which a neutralist Argentina had built up during the Second World War selling wheat to the Allies and the Axis alike, to pay for welfare, built useless factories where engineers and technology were non-existent.

Peronismo was also a pioneer of the "dependency thesis" which Castro and Allende with truly Marxist methods have developed in effect to end national dependency on international capitalistic sources of money, technology and manpower.

Small wonder the peronista movement developed strong ties with Cuba after Castro won his revolution in 1959.

This still very powerful mix of nationalism and social revolution merely awaits the return of the leader who created it after the Second World War.

But Juan Domingo Peron is on the verge of old age. How will he re-kindle the fire of long ago?

Canadians on the Move While Visitors Spent $1.3 Billion

By FARMER TISSINGTON
From The Intelligencer's

OTTAWA—Industry, Trade and Commerce minister Jean-Luc Pepin's 75-year-old mother has returned from Mexico and his brother is vacationing on Prince Edward Island.

That social note is not likely to cause a great deal of excitement throughout the country, but Mr. Pepin used it as a recent press conference to illustrate the remarkable development in national and international travel that has taken place in Canada and the world in the last few years.

Mr. Pepin's conference was designed to announce greater financial aid to the tourist industry and the establishment of a tourism advisory council, to advise the federal and provincial ministers involved with the growing tourist industry.

Tourism is one field where Canada has done a better than average job though the travel industry is now one of the most competitive in the world. As Mr. Pepin phrases it, man has never had so much leisure in history nor perhaps so much disposable income are available after taking care of the necessities of life. While the psychologists have been making pronouncements as to what people should be doing with their spare time and money, people have decided for themselves—they have hit the road.

The spirit of the open road originated among the restless younger generation who started off by hitch-hiking across Canada but can now be found in youth hostels and on the highways of dozens of the world's nations. The desire to roam spread readily to older Canadians and the ho-now, pay later, and similar, travel plans have made it comparatively easy for people of even modest income to see the world.

It is estimated, for example, that in 1971, some 720 million people in the world went on holiday trips and spent $79 billion doing it. People tend to think in terms of rapid industrial development in the last few years. While the international movement of goods doubled in that period, the movement of people tripled, making tourism the fastest growing industry on the globe.

The importance of tourism to Canada is seen in the fact that it is our second largest earner of foreign exchange, surpassed only by the export of motor vehicles and parts. One out of every $20 of Canada's foreign earnings comes from visitors who spent some $1.3 billion in Canada last year.

Canada has conducted the first comprehensive travel survey in history and preliminary figures indicate that Canadians themselves spent $2.5 billion travelling in their own country. Add these two figures together and you can get a $3.8 billion a year industry. It is also estimated that some 780,000 Canadians are derive direct or indirect employment from tourism.

Other than its involvement in the Canadian government travel bureau, the federal government has not made very much money available to the tourist industry through grants or loans. The department of regional economic expansion has a policy against grants for the tourist business except for a few special areas. Now, through the new travel industry development program, the government will be more financially responsive to the needs of the industry.

Canada has done well in the past in tourism although the international travel receipts only surpassed expenditures for the centennial year of 1967. But projections indicate that by 1980 our international travel receipts will again surpass the amount spent by Canadians in travel to other countries, to the tune of $3.6 billion compared to $3.1 billion.

In this age of greatly increased competition for the travel dollar, the federal decision to help upgrade the industry in both quality and quantity of facilities and attractions is both necessary and welcome.

Mariner's Death

Chichester's crowning feat of course was his lone voyage — never before accomplished — around the world in his yacht Gipsy Moth IV in 1967 and it stemmed from the progression of earlier ocean journeys, including the transatlantic races, which brought his name to the forefront in recent years. Since then there have been other trips, notably one from the west coast of Africa to Central America.

Sir Francis was never too robust physically but he drove himself mercilessly, with what seemed at times like masochistic fervor. Only a couple of months or so ago he competed in the latest transatlantic race but, suffering even then from the cancer that felled him in the end, he had to give up. Recently he entered hospital in Plymouth, a historic home of sailors and ships and the scene, as we recall, of his homecoming from the global triumph five years ago.

If Chichester the sailor is uppermost in our minds let us not forget either his equally astonishing feats as an aviator in different parts of the world in the late twenties and early thirties and his adventures in New Zealand where he lived for a time.

During the last war he taught navigation and in recent years what he was not sailing he ran a map-making business. He tells of these and the other events of a unique career in his book, The Lonely Sea and the Sky.

It's Welsh

If you should be travelling in Patagonia and have got decided the history of the area in advance it will undoubtedly come as a surprise to come upon a place called Trelew where the population speaks not only Spanish but Welsh.

That's the way it is and you can read of the Welsh settlement there and at nearby Puerto Madryn in the works of A. R. Tschiffely and other authors who have visited this remote region of Latin America.

Trelew has been in the news of late with word of a battle at a nearby naval base between guerrillas and Argentine military police. Fourteen guerrillas were killed and five wounded. They had earlier organized a mass prison escape and hijacking of a jet plane in which ten extremists escaped across the Andes to Chile. Subsequently they stormed the airport at Trelew navy air base and that led to the fatal confrontation with the military.

The Welsh, along with colonies of English and Scots whose ancestors also came as pioneers have been on the scene for a century. The original 150 Welsh settlers at Puerto Madryn were hit hard by floods and the surrender of their crops and cattle to patriots and even accepted some immigrants from the United States. Trelew, as Robert Kane points out in his South America A to Z, is the newer and more prosperous of the two Welsh settlements and has a population of about 12,000.

In the Money

The women's pro golf circuit in the United States is paying off for Quebec's Jocelyne Bourassa during her first season. She lost in a playoff with Kathy Whitworth in Kansas recently and was runner-up or tied in previous tournaments. In fact we understand she is in the running for the title of "rookie of the year."

Last December 21, a year of amateur golf success behind her and with $10,000 backing from a multi-millionaire Quebec financier to start her off, Miss Bourassa, 25, flew to Miami for her professional debut. As Weekend magazine golf editor Andy O'Brien pointed out at the time, never before had she been away from home in Shawinigan during French Canada's most festive family period.

She had left her mother crying. "Something," she said, "seemed to be holding me back at the door, but I felt if I didn't take the big step through it, I would always regret my failure to face the challenge."

The scene was eloquent of a host of agonizing family farewells down the ages, but Jocelyne Bourassa took that step, leaving behind a downtown YMCA and telling her boy friend there would be no wedding bells for two years.

It was the psychological moment, for she had gone as far as she could in the amateur sphere, being Canadian champion in 1965 at the age of 18, again in 1971 when she beat Marlene Stewart Streit and with a win in the New Zealand amateur also behind her. One of these days we will undoubtedly hear that she has pulled off her first tour victory.

Laughter and Boredom as Stanfield Hits the Trail

By RICHARD JACKSON
from The Intelligencer's
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — It could happen only in Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield.

There he was, on one of those campaign trail excursions, in St. Catharines, the hub city of the Niagara fruit-belt tourist belt, chatting away on one of those open-line radio shows.

He had been chewing away for an hour on the problems of the day when a woman called in, all excited, to tell him she had been so impressed by his intelligent understanding of the involved issues she was convinced he should be in politics.

"O, thank you madame," murmured Stanfield, bemused, "very kind of you to say so."

"Yes, indeed," she enthused, "I think you would make an excellent leader for the Conservatives."

Stanfield assured her, in all wry sincerity, that she had given him "something to think about."

That "something" he told a rally later when relating the incident, was "how nice it is to be a political leader — you get to be so well known."

There was a good, laughing moment, too, in a beer-pit session with students at the Wingham district high school, in Southwestern Ontario.

What do you talk about with a bunch of kids?

Well, unemployment, nationality, taxation, welfare and such. Stanfield has found from experience, is not guild to grab them.

But 18-year-olds have votes this time, so you wisely just stand there waiting to take your cue from them.

At Wingham it was not long in coming.

"What do you think about long hair?" a shaggy youth asked the square Stanfield.

"Wish I had some," he told the audience.

And with that audience, he had it made right from the opener.

At Mount Forest, up Owen Sound way, where they were celebrating the town's centennial, they showed Stanfield at the head of a parade of some 600 kids and marched him a mile to the fair grounds.

Stanfield, like some Pied Piper, led the way, and a band brought up the rear, playing by of all the unlikely things, the Third Movement from Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

"And all the time," grinned Stanfield, "I thought Toronto was the Canadian cultural capital."

Onto a radio hot - line in deepest Quebec's Chicoutimi, came an exuberant Canadienne shouting in exultation into the phone "Vive Le Stanfield."

"A La Victoriel!" bellowed back Stanfield and the caller went off the line singing La Marseillaise.

Stanfield has the grace — or good sense — to know when he has fallen flat on his face.

It was at Fenelon Falls, in Ontario's Peterborough district, and there he was flogging unemployment, inflation, welfarism and assorted social evils, airbrushing these ills, of course, to the Liberals.

And the listeners just sat on their hands like lumps of boredom.

"Can't you just FEEL the discontent," shrugged Stanfield, wryly, with a slow smile, recognizing a dud performance when he gave one.

And they laughed and gave him a hand.

Even if the kids do not mob him for kisses and younger women crowd around to warm themselves in the glow of charisma, there has to be something characteristically attractive about Stanfield.

Perhaps it is fallaciuse, a talent for putting people at their ease and making them feel at home.

Whatever it may be, it brought a dear-old-lady type, of all unexpected people, onto the radio-hot-line at Grimsby, not far from Niagara Falls, a golden-moment-by-moment report of her 50th wedding anniversary celebration.

All very chatty and entranced, as if Stanfield himself were old, old friends.

Turned out that is the way she saw it anyway, because she had received an anniversary card from him, which, to her way of thinking, almost made him a member of the family.

He did not tell the old dear, of course, that his office has a national list of folks celebrating their golden weddings. Not a big list, disclosed his office, "for not that many couples last the course to make it."

Canadians on the Move While Visitors Spent $1.3 Billion

OTTAWA — Industry, Trade and Commerce minister Jean-Luc Pepin's 75-year-old mother has returned from Mexico and his brother is vacationing in Prince Edward Island.

That social note is not likely to cause a great stir in government throughout the country, but Mr. Pepin does have a current press conference to illustrate the remarkable development in national and international travel that has taken place in Canada and the world in the last few years.

Man's Future in His Hands

TRENTON (Staff) — People the world over should cut back on affluence if life as we know it, is to survive, members of Trenton Rotary were told Monday night at the Dutch Mill Inn.

Walter H. Davis, chairman of the non-governmental representatives' body to the United Nations conference on human environment at Stockholm, Sweden, earlier this year, has been bringing this message to fellow Rotarians in an effort to leave a world for future generations.

He quoted various highly regarded world figures, including U Thant, former secretary general of the United Nations, who have shown a marked awareness of the dwindling resources in the world.

"This is the first time in the history of man that we have realized that we have a limit to growth," he said.

Quoting from the conference report, Mr. Davis read: "... our planet's resources are limited. Its life support systems are vulnerable. The combined effect of modern technology, consumption and population growth can place over whole planetary life at risk."

He told members of the service club organizations such as Rotary can play an important role in the future of world development, and the preservation of the environment.

"This is the challenge that confronts us today. If we have any regard for our children, we've got to clean up our environment and to do this means less affluence."

Mr. Davis spoke of cutbacks on the number of automobiles being used, and switching organizations who will take a stern look at major industrial polluters. During a recent visit to Leningrad in Russia, the native Newfoundlander said he was amazed to see "air as clean and clear as the outports of Newfoundland," a fact which he termed a great deal to the major use of bicycles as against cars.

"The greatest gift of all is freedom. Freedom of enterprise and association, but if it has to be a choice of losing one's freedom to save the environment, I would have to do a lot of soul searching."

Quoting again from the Stockholm report, Mr. Davis read: "We believe that the Stockholm conference marks the beginning of a new international understanding of our thought of the planet as a place with unlimited resources to exploit, unlimited energies to manipulate, unlimited lands to develop and settle, and unlimited air and water to cleanse the world of the wastes produced by man.

"Now we realize that not one of these propositions is true," he concluded.

Although he did not read further from the report, copies were distributed to each club member present. The recommendations of the non governmental agencies which formed the plenary session were made by such bodies as the World Medical Association, the World Council of Churches, Rotary International, and UNESCO.

They urged "more careful husbandry of materials, use of energy and disposal of wastes and toward a greater emphasis on human service satisfactions," such as services, recreation, art, knowledge, civic amenity and development for the common good.

Also included were sections dealing with worldwide population control within the boundaries of natural resources, more equal distribution of knowledge and material wealth, deeper co-operation between peoples, and expansion of public spirited organizations to this end.

Mr. Davis spoke on the conference earlier this summer as the "most highly promoted conference in the history of humanity. Never in the history of the United Nations have there been so many press people and non-governmental organizations present.

He spoke highly of the thousands of young people, many of whom travelled thousands of miles in order to air their views and opinions. The session's chairman said "they are concerned over the environment more than any other issue.

"They were a constant inspiration to the whole gathering. It is their world we are talking about . . . not ours."

On behalf of Rotary International, the parent organization which sent him and a second Rotarian from Europe to the Stockholm conference, he urged expansion and concern for the preservation of the environment in an orderly, sensible fashion

During the evening meeting, Mr. Davis produced one of 200 medals struck for the conference and presented it to Will Wilkinson of Trenton, past governor of Rotary District 707.

He said it was through Mr. Wilkinson's efforts that Rotary International sent him and the second Rotarian to the Stockholm conference.

Rhode Islander Reluctant Visitor

PICTON (Staff) — An American tourist seized by town police last week on Picton's Main Street is trying desperately to contact his family in Rhode Island.

The tail-wagging black and white hound brought to the Picton Animal Hospital as a stray is wearing a tag described, "Warwick Animal Hospital, 1950 Elmwood Drive, Rhode Island."

William Willis, an employee at the animal care centre said police think the wayward tourist may have jumped from an open car window while his owners were sightseeing in town.

Possibly he wandered away some distance from Picton and strayed toward the big city lights.

Mr. Willis said the hound was thin when he arrived at the animal hospital and could have been wandering for several days before his encounter with the local constabulary.

The animal care centre employee has made every effort to find the dog's owner, through telephoning Prince Edward's provincial parks and private tourist homes. So far he has been unable to locate Rhode Island sightseers minus one hound dog.

A search in the pages of a veterinary directory has confirmed, however, the existence of the Warwick Animal Hospital in Rhode Island.

The Picton Animal Hospital has notified town and provincial police here concerning the missing dog and hopefully his owners will be contacted if they are still in Prince Edward County.

In the meantime, there is one sad-eyed canine tourist that probably does not intend to include Picton in his next travel itinerary.

At the close of the luncheon the mayors will travel to the field where the plowing contest will be held.

Feminists Hold Marches, Rallies Across USA

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A "Women Power" sign was unfurled in the gallery of the American Stock Exchange Friday as feminist protesters set out to elect the "worst male chauvinist pig of the year." In Chicago there were protests that the exchange's system is slanted against girls and in favor of boys.

There were among highlights of rallies and marches across the United States Friday marking the 52nd anniversary of the day the women won the vote, Aug. 26, 1920. It also heralded a drive for ratification of an equal rights amendment to the U.S. constitution, which already has been approved by 29 of the required 38 states. Any amendment to the constitution must be approved by two-thirds of the 50 states.

The third annual Women's Strike for Equality also went off with an eye towards the November election. Lucy Wilson Benson, president of the League of Women Voters, said in Washington that the percentage of women voters may surpass men for the first time.

"We want politicians to sit down and listen to us on how things should be," declared Mrs. Wilma Scott Heide, president of the National Organization for Women.

Demonstrations began earlier in the week and were scheduled to reach their climax today. The women headed into their annual protest with a victory of sorts already won. The Farmer's Almanac agreed to a change in its favorable attitude towards women.

In the future, the Almanac has poked gentle fun at women, with lines such as: "One of the best ways for a woman to catch a man is to keep her trap shut."

Yielding to letters from protesting women, editor Ray Geiger said the Sept. 17 edition will point out, among other items, that tests have shown a woman's intelligence is equal to a man's.

In Mexico, Mo., Connie Williams, 22, a mother of a three-year-old girl, will celebrate Women's Rights Day today by driving in a demolition auto derby. Drivers run their cars into each other until all but the winner is wrecked.

The Missouri Human Rights Commission held that Mrs. Williams is covered by state laws against discrimination.

Men banned

Men on the floor of the American Stock Exchange booed and whistled when a group from the National Organization of Women unfurled their flag a demonstration similar to one a year ago.

"There are still no women on the floor of the exchange," said NOW spokesman Carol DeSaram. "We want to see more women brokers, not just data clerks."

A group of NOW members met in Chicago with Illinois Schools Superintendent Michael Bakalis. They presented him with figures intended to show that school reading features nearly three times as many stories about boys as about girls, and that 90 per cent more money is spent on boys' athletic programs than on girls'.

For its part, Massachusetts women's group were to sponsor a feminist fair today in Cambridge, with feminist folk singers and other entertainers. The fair organizers were electing "the worst male chauvinist pig of the year." The prize for the winner was not revealed.

In addition, NOW's New England chapter joined the national organization in calling for a national boycott of feminine hygiene products Friday "because of the possibility of physical cigarette burns and because the advertising is grossly offensive to women."

Golfers' Wives Love to Travel With Hubbys

EDMONTON (CP) — Just because you're married to a golfer, doesn't mean you have to become a "golf widow" — left behind when hubby hits the links.

Many competitors in the recent Alberta open golf championship were accompanied by women.

"Some days you're really disgusted; some days you don't want to be anywhere else," said Sharon Maude, wife of Ted Maude of Freeport, Bahamas, about the golf-circuit life.

"The travel is sort of temporary for any of the girls," she said. "They expect to settle down somewhere eventually."

But Daphne McPhee, wife of golfer Barry McPhee of Kamloops, B.C., doesn't expect to settle down for a while yet.

"I like travelling and plan on it for a long time," said Daphne, who quit her job in British Columbia to accompany her husband across the country.

Just learning to play the game herself, Daphne always follows her husband around the course during matches.

Hiking around the course has its hazards, though — Daphne tripped and sprained an ankle during a tournament in Saskatoon.

The irregular income of the usually low-paying Canadian golf circuit doesn't bother Daphne. "It's kind of exciting," she said.

"One day you're eating sandwiches, the next day it's steak."

Social And Personal

Previous to her marriage, Mrs. Louis Leveck (nee Helene Pokora) was honored at a miscellaneous shower given at the home of Mrs. Wayne Holmes, with Miss Susanne Leveck and Mrs. Wayne Holmes as co-hostesses. A miscellaneous shower was also held at the Nurses' Residence of the Peterborough Civic Hospital where the bride was showered by many beautiful gifts from her classmates.

IODE Project Aids Cree Indians

ATTAWAPISKAT, Ont. (CP) — The Indian band council was about to meet in the community hall in this Swampy Cree reserve midway along the west coast of James Bay.

Inside the long green structure, it looked like the interruption at a dance. Indian people lined the walls along the back. A circle of chairs was drawn up around a long table.

At one side of the table two white women sat patiently waiting for Chief Emile Nakogee to appear.

Evelyn McKay and Marion Lowe, both of Hamilton, were no strangers to the people. They were sitting in the hall built with a gift of $40,000 in materials from the Ontario IODE. Mrs. MacKay proposed the idea in 1969 as a project to mark the 50th anniversary of the IODE.

At this meeting the two women met Chris Ballenger, assistant dean at Northern College of Applied Arts and Technology in Timmins, were waiting for the chief and band council to discuss the possibility of a home economics program for the Indian women.

About 3 p.m. the chief appeared and the empty seats were filled — band council of 13, including one woman, sat in the chairs ringing the table.

The attendance was about 60, small compared to the 400 who had filled the chairs opening the IODE building in 1971, when the floors shook from dancing, but this night it was business and the number was considered good.

After an exchange of pleasantries, the chief asked through interpreter Ignace Wheesk, whether the IODE could give them operating funds for running the hall. He was told to check with the band community centre branch of the provincial department of agriculture.

Then Mrs. Lowe explained that the IODE might supply seven or eight sewing machines for the women to use in the hall. She added that Northern College would supply an instructor and materials at the outset.

Mrs. Lowe said the IODE was able to supply concise details on nutrition and cooking courses if the women were interested.

Mrs. MacKay suggested the women organize a committee and write the IODE about their ideas.

Band councillor Lottie Hookimaw asked whether the women would be surprised with another type of the sewing course, and was told Northern College would supply it.

Then Mrs. MacKay said: "I am interested and happy to learn that the chief has started a potato farm in the area. Would he be interested in setting up a greenhouse with the IODE's help, for a longer growing time for potatoes and vegetables?"

The chief then told the group about his problems in starting the farm, getting money from the government for working equipment.

He asked if the IODE would provide the money. The women said they would investigate agencies to find out if the help was available.

Then the meeting was over. No decision had been made and there was little apparent reaction to the proposals.

Mrs. MacKay said her experience had taught her to look for reaction in three stages.

"Maybe first day they are all present for the meeting. On the second day, they think about the ideas suggested. On the third day, they let you know what they want to do about it."

Both women said the IODE and its offer of help have been accepted. This was not the case initially.

"They were apprehensive, and didn't know what we were here, or what we wanted."

WEDDING

LEVECK — POKORA

TWEED — A double - ring ceremony was held in St. Carthagh's Church, Tweed recently, when Reverend Father C. E. Baker united in marriage Helene Bernada Pokora, daughter of Mrs. Helen Pokora and the late Julian Pokora of Tweed, and Louis Bernard Leveck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Leveck of Tweed. Mr. Peter Marchen of Toronto presided at the organ while Mrs. Gwen Kingston was soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her eldest brother, Julian Pokora Jr., from Toronto, designed and created her bridal gown. The full length gown of imported Honey Love Chiffon over French taffeta, featured a full flowing skirt with rich broidered flowers and leaves that encircled the hem and tapered to a point at the bottom of the gown. More embroidered flowers fell from the top of the long sheer, puffy sleeves and tapered to the end of the cuffs which also displayed embroidered flowers and leaves.

The bodice, partially open ed at the front, revealed a semi-high collar and two front rows of embroidered flower panels which ended at the embroidered high waist band. The full length train was of the same material edged with Venice lace and embroidered flowers. A pearl and crystal drop crown held her three-layer cathedral veil of illusion edged all around with Venice lace identical to that of the train. She carried an arm bouquet of pink roses with a background of white baby's breath, and green ferns.

Maid of honor, Miss Mary Pokora, sister of the bride, selected a floor - length, full gown of pink imported French chiffon over French taffeta, featuring a scoop neckline and long puffy sleeves. A dark pink peau de soie ribbon woven through French cotton lace encircled the empire waist of the baby smocked bodice to form a bow at the centre back. She wore a big pink lacy brimmed hat surrounded by flowers, while she carried a nosegay of pink and white carnations, white baby's breath, and green ferns.

The bridesmaids, Miss Susanne Leveck and Miss Kathy Leveck, both sisters of the bridegroom, selected pink gowns and headdresses identical to that of the maid of honor's, and also carried similar bouquets.

The flower girl was Miss Wanda Pokora, sister of the bride. She chose a gown of identical color and material to that of the bridesmaids. Her long gown was designed and created by the bride's mother. It featured a chiffon braid around the wedding band collar and encircled the sleeves midway as they fell to the elasticized cuffs. The hem line of the gown was enhanced by a wide flouncy ruffle. The wide brimmed lacy hat was also identical to that of the bridesmaids.

The ushers were Leonard Leveck, Tweed, brother of the bridegroom and George Pokora, of Toronto, brother of the bride. Master Joey Allore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Allore of Tweed, was ring bearer.

Following the wedding ceremony, a dinner and reception was held in the Land O'Lives Curling Club, Tweed, where the bride's mother received the guests, attired in a floor length gown of imported Honey Love chiffon over French taffeta, featuring a scoop neckline and long puffy sleeves. A dark pink peau de soie ribbon encircled the empire waist and enhanced the full skirt of deep lavender. White accessories and a deep pink corsage of bay roses completed her gown. The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a floor length gown of nylon chiffon over taffeta. The top part of the gown was a solid white with a square collar trimmed with nylon lace; the the sleeves were long and her cuffs were edged with nylon lace. The full skirt was a floral print of turquoise, pink, mauve and green flowers. A dark turquoise velvet ribbon encircled the waist and formed a bow at the centre back. She chose matching white accessories and a deep pink corsage.

Interesting Career As Stock Broker

By HAL BOYLE / NEW YORK (AP) — "If women ran the world, it would be the worst possible place for other women," said Mimi Green, perhaps the youngest and certainly one of the most attractive stock salesmen on Wall Street.

Starting as a $75-a-week trainee just four years ago, Miss Green at 25 is a registered broker with Brukenfeld, Mitchell and Co., a New York Stock Exchange firm. In a single day she may sell up to $750,000 worth of stocks and bonds in lots ranging from 100 to 10,000 shares of more.

Most of her sales are to large institutional investors—banks, insurance companies, and mutual funds. The typical buyer she faces is 40 or more years old, realistic, practical —and male.

Mimi is glad that he is usually of the masculine gender.

"There is no handicap in being a woman in Wall Street except for the fact that there are other women there," she said.

"Everything else is on the plus side.

"But I don't have much of a desire to deal with other women. They are instantly competitive. They are biased against each other. If the woman is older than you or unhappy in her private life, she resents you on sight. In any case, if she is a buyer, she'd rather buy from a man than from another woman.

"You can discuss business with a man and he'll accept you as competent, if he feels you are. But a woman only sees you as another woman and a possible rival."

Miss Green, who studied at Briarcliff and the University of Geneva, is 5 feet 3 inches tall, has dark eyes, shoulder-length wavy brunette hair, and a striking figure that would make a book-keeper swoon over her ledgers.

But it is her aggressive spirit, her ready wit and ready knowledge as well as encyclopedic knowledge of the stock she sells, that won her the respect she has and the success she is making on Wall Street. She landed her first job by talking her way in to see the board chairman of a brokerage firm and convincing him he should give her a try.

"Anybody can be a success here if he has ideas that make money for people," she said.

Mimi puts every dollar of her own income she can save into stocks. "Naturally, she picks them herself. She trusts widely in her business, dates "several" boy-friends," and says she doesn't want to marry until 30 because, "I don't believe in young marriages."

For a young career woman she has a number of rather unorthodox opinions. One of them is antipathy to the women's liberation movement.

"Its leaders alienate me, and probably most women," she remarked.

"Women's lib is a dead issue, and a bit of it is emotionally unhealthy.

"It is a very destructive element in our society. It has left too many women unhappy and feeling that life has passed them by. They are left distressed and discontented at holding positions they used to consider positions as housewives and mothers.

"The truth is that many women aren't structured for business-world careers. They haven't tough enough skins. They can't put up with being occasionally cursed at or called a fool to their face. They don't really want to be treated equal. They'd rather be molly-coddled."

Ann Landers

Motorcyclist Irked By Ann's Remarks

Ann Landers: I am not calling you "dear" because you are not dear to me. I think it was just written of you to burn-up motorcycles. I was going to get one on my 16th birthday until you struck your ugly nose into it. Now it's off. Any fool knows that a motorcycle is just as safe as a bike, which I've been riding since I was 10 years old without an accident. Isn't it about time you retired?—Mad In Yonkers

Dear Mad Yonk: Thanks for the love note. Here's another opinion:

Dear Ann Landers: Bless you for that well-timed column on the dangers of motorcycles. The following day the Monroe, Mich. Evening News printed a story which reported 18 motorcycle fatalities over the weekend—two were riding motorcycles or were passengers—and the other 16th was a seven-year-old girl who was struck by one.—N.W. of M.

Dear N.W.: Thanks for letting me know. Here's another:

Dear Ann: I don't want to be a killjoy, but there must be some way of taming the users of motorcycles. They are a menace not only to their riders but to everyone else on the highways. I shudder to see the numbers increase.—J.H.B. (Boston)

Dear J.H.B.: Right you are. I welcome suggestions.

Dear Ann: As a member of the medical profession I commend you for answering "no" to the mother who asked whether she should let her daughter to ride with her boyfriend on a motorcycle.

Almost every physician has worked in a hospital emergency room at some time during his career. There he sees the motorcycle riders—good ones, bad ones, cautious ones, careless ones, and quite frequently he sees the rider who was not at fault, but is, nevertheless, maimed for life, or dead. I believe most physicians would agree that this sport is comparable to playing Russian roulette.

If only one-tenth of the parents who read your column will take it to heart, you will have prevented thousands of injuries and prepared a hundreds of young lives.—Tampa MD

Dear Tampa: One of your colleagues, a fine dermatologist in San Francisco, did not write. He is still too heartsick to think about motorcycles. His only son, a brilliant young teen-ager, was killed on one two years ago. Thank you all for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: This is what happened the other evening and I want your opinion. A mother and her two small children were at the supper table. Guests were present. The younger child asked: "Mommy, can I have the strawberries on your shortcake? I love them so much." The mother replied: "No, I love them too, and I am going to eat them myself."

The child was crushed. I felt so sorry for him.

Do you think about such a mother?—Chicago

Dear Chic: I think we need more mothers like that. Too many children today have the idea they should have everything they see. As often as not they don't want what they ask for.

Parents who cater to the whims of their children because they believe it's the way to make kids happy—or worse yet, who enjoy sacrificing for the kids—learn later that they did the youngsters no favor. The selfish adults in our midst are those kids of yore who never learned how to give—only to receive.

Successful Living

One Must Feel Worthwhile Himself

By DORIS CLARK

Has it ever occurred to you that a child needs to have a healthy love for himself. He needs to feel that he is a worthwhile person. This feeling is given to him by the others who love him and find him precious. Such a child is a happy child.

Being loved, and then loving others, puts him in a position to return love and warmth. It means that his close people are dear to him and that as he matures he is able to make warm friendships, even to the eventual choosing and loving of a mate.

All of this is related to his sense of values as a person. If he scorns himself, he lacks poise and has nothing to give to another.

Help your child to love by loving him by giving him yourself your time and your attention in a way which makes him feel he is honestly precious to you.

Dear Doris: The World Federation of Canada would love you if you could urge readers to write M.P.'s.

Perhaps just to ask a question: What is Canada doing to reform the United Nations? Is Canada in favor of the establishment of a strong and effective global environmental agency?

International affairs are pretty low on the priority list of most Canadians, yet this is the area where our long-term future will be decided. It is a long hard struggle to get people to realize we live in a global community. — Rust Smyth, Past President, World Federalists of Canada.

Dear Rosa: Reminds me of the story in our old public school readers about, "Keep your nose to the grindstone".

Most of us don't even know what a grindstone is, these days, but the story means in short, that we are so busy with our own affairs we haven't every time to look up and get a broader view of things.

We need continuous education, that's what we need. And a certain proportion of it should be devoted to what the United Nations and other international groups are doing to bring about a better world. How about a letter to your MP, folks?

Dear Doris: My husband is a drinker and also very lazy. Complains about the way I keep house although the floors are washed at least twice a week and I keep up with the cleaning which isn't easy, what with diapers and such.

I will admit that I do leave the dishes to the last thing. My daughter has no one to play with and I often sit outside with her and the baby. She also throws up at me an unfortunate thing that happened when I was just 13. Then after calling me names he expects me to just fall into bed with him and enjoy it, which I don't.

I have talked to my husband about his drinking and he says to stand by him and maybe he will grow up. But these last months have been unbearable. I am 23 and he is 25 — Unbearable.

Dear Unbearable: Drinking and accusations are reflections of his feelings of worthlessness.

Since he has gone so far as to ask you to stand by, he recognizes his own failings. A letter from me won't reach his emotional state nor give him the will to quit drinking. You need moral and practical support of a trained counselor in personal consultation.

Painless Clinic

MONTREAL (CP) — At the children's summer dental clinic in the Montreal General Hospital 30 fourth-year dental students are taking the terror out of tooth care. Children are brought in by bus in large groups, making an adventure of their first trip to the dentist. Nothing that hurts is done on the first visit, the emphasis being on prevention and good habits.

Mirror of Your Mind
by JOHN CROMWELL

Are smart kids fun to teach?

YES; And it is just as satisfying to teach slow learners. That smile on the face of a struggling student as he realizes he can grasp what is being taught makes it hard for any teacher not to glow inwardly. Teachers recognize the challenge in dealing with smart children, too. They also strive for that smile of accomplishment in the smart child as he realizes he has learned something new, and is not merely rehashing lessons he already knows.

Can sincere humor soften an insult?

NO; humor and insult are incompatible. Oh, two friends can jokingly make insulting remarks to each other, but no malice is intended. On the other hand, if a person calls someone stupid, and then refers to pun it off as humour, that is different. The word wouldn't pop out unless the person was stung into saying it by some attitude or hidden resentment. Calling the insult humor is only an attempt to soothe the insulted individual's feelings.

Is a husband's mother worse than a wife's?

NO; nor vice versa. Indeed, if a husband and wife could forget about traditional mother-in-law trouble, they probably won't experience it. When there is conflict, however, it is about even-steven. A wife's mother may give her son-in-law a hard time because she thinks her daughter could have done better a husband's mother can make it difficult for her daughter-in-law if she believes that "that woman" took her darling son away.

Says Puerto Rico Link in Drug Chain

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — A veteran official says Puerto Rico is a link in an international drug chain reaching from Asia, Europe and South America to mainland cities in the United States.

Jose Nunez Barber, who for 25 years was director of the alcoholic beverages and narcotics division of Puerto Rico's treasury department asserts that the large island dealers have connections with the Mafia, especially in New York and Florida.

Capt. Felipe Cortes, head of Three Graduate

MONTREAL (CP) — Three nurses have graduated from a four-month McGill University program aimed at enriching the medical knowledge of northern nurses. The three now trained in all types of clinical procedures, as well as how to manage with a minimum of medical equipment, are heading back to settlements in Baffin Island where they were working prior to joining the countrywides visiting program.

Puerto Rico's drug and narcotics division, estimates the value of the island's illegal drug traffic to be roughly $200 million a year. The crime generated by the drug trade costs another $200 million, he says.

It has been estimated that at least 60 per cent of the narcotics in Puerto Rico are by drug addicts.

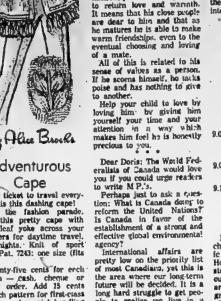
Dealers pay an average of $23,000 for a kilogram of heroin — 2.2 pounds — and resell it for $40,000, Nunez Barber says. Each of them may import about 200 pounds of heroin a year and make a profit of $1.3 million.

"The police catch some dealers, but the real big fish remain free," said Juan Jose Garcia, founder and director of an organization aimed at rehabilitating drug addicts. He added that more money, manpower and training are needed to trap the big dealers.

About 75 per cent of all drug arrests, says Cortes, are made as a result of direct sales from the street seller. The big dealers, authorities say, often are known but cannot be arrested for lack of evidence.

Pearls Are Popular Fall Accessory

By MARGARET NESS



TORONTO — This fall, pearls return dramatically to complement lady like fashions. Pearls will be worn with dresses, suits and even sweaters, both for day and night.

There are two types of pearls. The wild or Oriental pearl is formed entirely by nature. The cultured pearl is also formed in a living oyster, but with an assist from man.

Pearls are formed when an irritant, a piece of shell or sand, accidently lodges in the flesh of the oyster. In the case of the cultured pearl, man inserts a small piece of shell. The result is the same. The oyster covers the irritant with a smooth, crystalline substance. It then takes three to five years for the pearl to form.

Natural pearls have long been treasured. Today over exploitation of oyster beds and pollution have almost wiped out the natural pearl. Fortunately, cultured pearls can be created year after year, so the quality rate is high. Over half the implanted oysters die. Back in the water in their cages, they face the same enemies as natural pearls.

Only three to five percent of the survivors produce gem quality pearls and it takes some 10,000 of these to produce enough pearls of similar quality, shape, size and lustre for one single choker length strand. Excellent reasons why cultured pearls are fairly expensive.

Usborne Welcomes Golf Invitations

Most golfers are satisfied to win one tournament every couple of years but John Usborne made the best of his limited number of chances by winning both the Trenton Invitational Golden Hawk team tournament at the Bay of Quinte Country Club and the Cobourg Invitational over the weekend.

John fired a low gross score of 87 to win the Golden Hawk play and an 82 at Cobourg.

Randy Hutchinson's 88 brought him the low net honors at the Quinte Club and an identical score except as gross kept him second in the Cobourg tournament. Paul Hipkin made it a clean sweep at Cobourg, placing third in the gross with an 89.

Trainmen Rebound For Keeps

Stewart Warner kept bouncing back Monday until CNR knocked the bounce out of them with an 11-run rally in the fourth inning of their Industrial Softball semi-final series.

The Alemite crew had bounced back from a 4-0 and 5-4 deficits before CN unloaded the heavy artillery en route to an 18-8 win. The victory gives the trainmen a 2-0 grip in the best-of-five series.

Brian Plumbe gave up eight hits in going the route for the winners. He walked two batters and set down five on strikes. Jim Ellen and Glenn Ray were blasted for 20 hits in a losing cause.

Barry Tamlin's five-for-five effort led CNR batsmen while Brian Plumbe cracked two doubles and two singles and Zane Plumbe a homer and single. Lanny Heasdem drove in four Stewart Warner tallies with a pair of homers while Dennis Ray collected a homer and single.

The Unemployment Insurance Commission may start to assist their own services pretty soon to find something else to do instead of playing. Mead Johnson in the Industrial Softball League semi-finals.

Meads made it two convincing wins in a row last night by hammering the UIC 7-1.

Sonny Holoway fired the win going up nine hits and fanning five. Gary Genereaux paced the winners' 11-hit attack with a home run and Blaine Young added three singles, and Ray Finkle a double.

Pete Hamilton went six innings for the losers allowing 11 hits and all seven runs. Gary McMurray featured in the seventh inning. Joe Clark had a double and single and Ron Embury two singles for UIC.

Dairy Queens Evade Police

The Belleville Police wanted the Dairy Queen but when they got it Monday night they found it was too much to handle.

The Dairy stopped the Police 6-3 last night to capture the Belleville Minor Midgets previous championship in three games.

Danny Duffy and Hugh Graham tallied for the Police.

Canada's First Points Come in Water

MUNICH (CP) — Canadian swimmers put Olympic points on the board with a pair of fifth-place finishes Monday as the pressure of world-class competition spurred several of them to the best career performances.

And Beverley Boys of Pickering, Ont., fighting an uphill battle to salvage a medal in women's platform diving, settled for another fifth place to end the first of a two-day competition, moving up two notches from her position at the end of Sunday's preliminary round.

Leslie Cliff, a versatile 17-year-old from Vancouver, twice broke her own Canadian record of two minutes, 25.77 seconds in the women's 200 metre individual medley but was unable to keep up with Australian Shane Gould, who smashed the world record in winning the final.

And every member of the Canadian men's 4X6-metre relay team exceeded his personal best to finish less than a second away from a third-place bronze medal as another world record fell to the winning United States foursome.

No Canadians reached the finals of the men's 200 butterfly, men's 100 backstroke or women's 100 freestyle but some scored personal victories against the clock while trying to get there.

James Platz of Bruno, Sask., and John Primrose of Edmonton moved into a tie for sixth place with seven other swimmers going into the final round of the three-day treepheoing competition. Platz had been in an eight-way tie for 11th place and Primrose was 19th after Sunday's opening round.

Alf Mayer of Kitchener, Ont., placed 47th and Cil Bea of St. Catharines, Ont., was 50th in a field of 108 in the small-bore rifle competition.

Miss Cliff, who has five more events on her Olympic schedule, improved on her Canadian mark with a 2:25.58 clocking in her heat of the medley.

In the final, she brought her time down to 2:24.83, well beaten by Miss Gould and second-place Kornelia Ender of West Germany, but less than a second behind bronze-medallist Lynn Vitali and fourth-place Jenny Bartz of the United States. Karen Jones and Marilyn Nelson of Vancouver failed to survive the heats.

The Canadian foursome of Bruce Robertson of Vancouver, Brian Phillips of Winnipeg, Tim Bach of Calgary and Bob Kasting of Lethbridge, Alta., was third behind the A.S. and Italian at the halfway point of the relay as Phillips swam his leg in 52.56, shattering his own Canadian mark of 53.31.

Spitz, Gould Star

Swimming Leaders Shoo-ins

MUNICH (CP) — With only one of the eight days of swimming competition to judge from, practically everyone right was ready today to crown the king and queen of the Olympic pool for 1972.

Mark Spitz and Shane Gould established their credentials in a hurry Monday. Each competed in two events and kicked spray in the face of any swimmer who could stay close to them.

For openers, Spitz broke his own world record in leading a sweep of all the medals for the United States in the men's 200-metre butterfly. The 17-year-old Australian school girl responded in kind in the women's 200 individual medley, which she considers one of her weaker events.

Spitz temporarily had the last word, anchoring the U.S. team to another world-record victory in the 400 freestyle relay while Shane, swimming to qualify, won two rounds of heats in the women's 100 freestyle, saving her best licks for tonight's final.

Canadian swimmers and divers figured in three finals.

Leslie Cliff of Vancouver finished fifth in the individual medley, swimming the fastest race of her life. Every member of Canada's relay team did the same, missing a third-place bronze medal by less than a second in another fifth-place finish.

And Beverley Boys of Pickering, Ont., who had to fight to make the final round, moved up two notches from her overnight seventh placing in the 10-metre platform event in which Canada's early hopes for a medal were blasted as Ui Klimbikers of Edmonton, the 1971 Pan-American Games champion, was eliminated in Sunday's preliminaries.

Thanks to its swimmers and divers, the U.S. team moved into a narrow lead in the medal standings with three gold, two second-place silver and three third-place bronze. East Germany, capturing two races in white-water canoeing, a new Olympic event, was close behind. No other country had more than one gold medal.

In the unofficial point standings, based on a 10-5-4-3-2-1 count for the first six final placings, the Americans led with 81 to 49 for the East Germans. Canada's six points were good for 13th place.

Russia struck gold for the first time in its Games with a victory in women's team gymnastics as its wrestlers, oarsmen and individual gymnasts posed powerful threats in competitions still under way.

Imre Foeldi, a Hungarian competing in his fourth Olympics, was rewarded with his first gold medal in bantamweight weightlifting and Lilo Jun of North Korea scored 380 of a possible 600, a world record, in winning the small-bore prone rifle event.

Miss Cliff, a 17-year-old schoolgirl who won three Pan-Am gold medals last year, was pleased with her performance in the individual medley, in which she twice broke her own Canadian record. She had swum against Miss Gould before but has never beaten her.

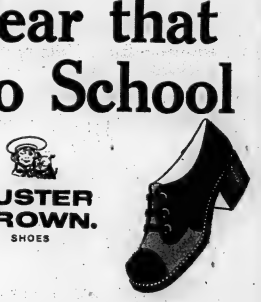
With five more events on her Olympic schedule, she expects to see a lot more of the versatile Australian, who currently holds four world records, and she is looking forward to it.

Brian Phillips, an 18-year-old Winnipeg high school student, broke his own Canadian record for the 100-metre freestyle in a determined second leg of the relay final that put Canada temporarily in third place behind the U.S. and the second-place Russians.

Every one of his team-mates, Bruce Robertson of Vancouver, Tim Bach of Calgary and Bob Kasting of Lethbridge, Alta., exceeded his previous best and Kastings also broke the Canadian record but they lost out in a blanket finish with East Germany and Brazil for the bronze.

Foeldi, a 31-year-old mining technician who won medals in three previous Olympics, was a popular winner in a tense duel with Mohammed Nasairi of Iran, the 1968 champion in bantamweight weightlifting.

An 11th - place finish in women's team gymnastics was an accomplishment for Canada, competing in a sport traditionally dominated by Europeans.



The Americans scored an even more spectacular breakthrough, placing fourth behind Russia, East Germany and Hungary as Cathy Rigby qualified to face the Europeans in the finals of the individual events. The U.S. team was sixth in 1968 and ninth in three previous Olympics.

Five of Canada's eight wrestlers were still in the freestyle competition after two rounds, headed by lightweight Pat Belger of Duston, Ont., who had scored two consecutive victories.

Sinden Worries About 'Poise'

TORONTO (CP) — Right now Harry Sinden is worried more about "poise" than conditioning of Team Canada for its forthcoming exhibition hockey series with the Soviet Union.

Sinden, general - manager-coach of the National Hockey League players who will meet the Russians in an eight-game series starting Saturday at Montreal, said Monday:

"I hope we don't get so high

HARRY SINDEN

that we're emotionally stupid. We could forget to put the puck in the net."

Sinden, who played the Russians in 1958 as captain of Whitby Dunlops, said he recalled the final game at Oslo, Norway, when the Canadians needed two third-period goals to stop Russia 4-2 and win Canada's last world title.

"These Team Canada pros are more poised and mature than we were. But under the pressure of what winning the series means to Canada there might be a tendency to lose some poise. When that happens, you lose some of your ability."

Sinden, who picked up Boston Bruins from the deeps of the NHL and led them to a league title in four years in 1970, readily admits winning "the Stanley Cup doesn't compare to this emotionally."

The third and final intra-squad game, featuring Sinden's Whites and assistant coach John Ferguson's Reds, is set for tonight at Maple Leaf Gardens. The Whites took both earlier games by scores of 8-5 and 4-2.

Television rights for all three warm-up games were sold to a Toronto cable television company for broadcast on a delayed basis.

One facet of the Team Canada camp has been the lack of spirited freezing between players from different teams who normally contrive to massacre each other during the regular NHL season.

"The players know they have a big job to do and a short time to accomplish it," says Sinden. "They've allowed nothing to interfere with that."

Team Canada learned Monday night that Bobby Orr has been given clearance to scrimmage as soon as his ailing left knee is ready.

Orr, after meeting with Bruins' medical advisers, said he hooped to begin scrimmaging with the team next week but doubted he would play in any of the Canadian games.

The Russian portion of the series, scheduled for Sept. 22, 24, 26 and 28, will be played in Moscow.

Hockey Briefs

Walton There to Stay

BOSTON (AP) — Forward Mike Walton is reported to have signed a new long-term contract with Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League.

Walton was working on a two-year contract running through the 1972-73 season.

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Eddie Westfall, a star forward for Boston Bruins for many years, has signed a three-year contract with New York Islanders, a National Hockey League expansion club.

Westfall had one season to go on his old contract with the Bruins. Acquired by the Islanders in the expansion draft last June, he negotiated a new agreement. Terms were not disclosed.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Defenceman Joe Norris has signed a one-year contract with Pittsburgh Penguins, reducing to four the number of players from last year's squad left unsigned, the National Hockey League club announced Monday.

Norris, 20, a third-round pick in the 1971 amateur draft, played 35 games with the Penguins and 42 with their Hershey farm club of the American League last year.

A's Hot on Chicago Heels

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chicago's Mike Andrews bedevilled Boston Red Sox Monday night while Oakland's Angel Mangual lived up to his name and kept the Athletics on the heels of the White Sox in baseball's American League West.

Andrews drove in five runs with a home run and double to pace the White Sox to a 9-4 victory over Boston Red Sox. They remained one-half game in front of Oakland who rallied for five runs in the seventh inning, three on pinch-hitter Mangual's tie-breaking homer, and edged Cleveland Indians 5-4.

In the only other American League contest, Baltimore's Jim Palmer blanked Minnesota Twins 2-0 on five hits, pulling the Orioles to within one game of idle Detroit Tigers in the East Division.

There were only three games in the National League. Cincinnati Reds downed New York Mets 5-2, Pittsburgh Pirates shaded San Diego Padres 5-4 and St. Louis Cardinals defeated San Francisco Giants 4-2.

Andrews hit his seventh home run of the season in the fourth inning following Dick Allen's double and a hit batsman after Boston starter Sonny Siebert had mowed down the first 11 Chicago batters. Andrews doubled two more runs across in the sixth and pinch-runner Luis Alvarado then scored on a single by Rich Morales.

Cleveland's Roy Foster hit a two-run homer off Oakland's Vida Blue and Steve Dunning held the Athletics to one hit for six innings before the roof fell in.

Matty Alou led off the big seventh, with a single. Reggie Jackson walked and the runners advanced on Mike Epstein's groundout. After an intentional walk to Sal Bando filled the bases, Ted Kubiak's racerifice fly delivered one run and Gene Tenace's game-tying single chased Dunning.

Mangual then slammed an 0-2 pitch from Mike Kilkenny, of Bradford, Ont., far over the left field fence, giving Oakland just enough run to withstand a two-run homer by Craig Nettles in the ninth.

Baltimore's Palmer got the only run he needed on Don Baylor's homer in the fifth and breezed to his 18th triumph.

Cincinnati's Gary Nolan, making his first start in 26 days after suffering from muscle irritation in his neck and shoulder, limited the Mets to one hit in the six innings he worked and picked up his first victory since July 13.

Allen Triple Threat

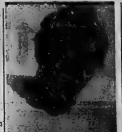
BOSTON (AP) — Veteran slugger Dick Allen is bidding to become the first player in Chicago White Sox history to win the triple crown, but it's strictly a secondary objective for him.

"Triple crown, hell—the only thing I'm interested in is the club winning 95 games, which should be enough to win our division," Allen said Monday night before the White Sox beat the Red Sox 6-4.

The last player to win the Triple Crown was the Red Sox' Carl Yastrzemski in 1967, one year after Frank Robinson did it with Baltimore. Mickey Mantle performed the feat with New York Yankees in 1956. Their teams won the American League pennant in those years.

"If I win the Triple Crown and we don't win, the Triple Crown will mean nothing," he added.

Allen played for Philadelphia, St. Louis and Los Angeles in the National League before being acquired by the White Sox after the 1971 season. He is leading the American League in batting .317, homers 32 and runs batted in 92.



He registers a shoo-in to win the homer and RBI titles, but is locked in a dogfight for the batting championship.

"There are a lot of things more important than a average," he said while forgoing batting practice in his customary fashion. "If I go 0-for-4 in a game, but I score two men by and they score and we win 2-0, I feel that's as important as getting hits.

"Too many ballplayers think only of themselves and their averages. A batting average is fine only if it produces runs. That's what the game is getting more runs than the other guy.

"That wins ball games—and I want to be known as a winning ballplayer."

GREG BARTON

Barton Too Costly

TORONTO (CP) — So far there have been no claims for Greg Barton, the high-priced quarterback Toronto Argonauts placed on waivers during the weekend.

Barton, a drop-back quarterback, doesn't fit in with coach Leo Cahill's game plans and became expendable when he couldn't generate a touchdown in 13 consecutive quarters to play for hte Eastern Football Conference team.

The 26-year-old former Detroit Lion alternated with Joe Theismann last year until a broken finger on his throwing hand sidelined him for the last half of the season.

Cahill brought in ex-Montreal Alouette Jim Chasey who scrambled through most of Toronto's 21-19 loss to Winnipeg Blue Bombers last week and then, during weekend, negotiated for the rights to Wally Gabler.

Barton, meanwhile, was in the second year of a four-year guaranteed contract in which he was estimated to be receiving $65,000 a year.

Eben Not At Fault

TORONTO (CP) — Flanker Mike Eben is one Toronto Argonaut who could hardly be blamed for the club's winless condition in the first four games of the 1972 Canadian football League season.

Despite playing the last game against the Winnipeg Blue Bombers with a case of pneumonia to slow him down, Eben remained the Argos' top pass-catcher and now leads the Eastern Football conference with 11 receptions for 212 yards.

Eben's record, however, is about the only bright point that shows up for the Argos in this week's CFL statistics.

A year ago, the Argos had a record of four wins and one loss while halfback Leon McQuay led the EFC rushing department with 340 yards and the scoring with six touchdowns for 36 points. This year, the whole Argo team has scored only three touchdowns.

Dave Buchanan of Hamilton Tiger-Cats continue to lead the EFC rushers and now has 473 yards in 111 carries while George Reed of Saskatchewan Roughriders leads the Western Conference with 447 yards in 94 tries.

Mack Herron of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, the WFC's leading scorer, is also close behind Reed in the rushing department with 401 yards in 68 carries.

Bobcats Join Metro B League

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Staff

Instead of simply becoming a big fish in a small pond, the Belleville Bobcats have become part of the stocking program for the biggest Junior B hockey "pond" in the province.

The Belleville team was granted admission Monday night to the Toronto Metro Junior B league, which is been one of the perennially powerful groupings in Ontario. It had appeared as though the Bobcats would be operating in an Eastern Ontario league with "C" centres such as Gananoque, Napanee and Picton after the defection of Kingston, Peterborough and Oshawa to other leagues.

The Metro league was forced to seek new entries this season when seven of its 10 members from last year moved up to Junior A, tier 2 competition.

Joining Belleville in the Toronto based group will be Peterborough Lions and Oshawa Generals from the now-defunct Eastern Ontario Junior B league. Other newcomers to the Metro group will include Bramalea and Pickering. They will join Markham, St. Michael's, Toronto Nationals, Wexford and Whitby to form a 10-team league.

"It's too bad that we're losing so many players to university and that sort of thing," said general manager Jim "Spipe" Matthews. Only three players from last year's team that finished third in the Eastern Ontario league and carried Oshawa to the full seven games in the semi-finals figure to be returning this season.

"We're looking for some help from Trenton and maybe the county (Prince Edward) and some of the northern towns. We'll still have a pretty fair sort of club," he promised.

Coach Murray "Moe" Hunter will be returning for his second season, along with manager Russ Soule and team sponsor Bob Temple. Former Senior A hockey player Doug Murray will handle training duties this season.

Returning to the playing ranks will be forward Jim Jonceman Tim John along with wingers Bill Jackett and Dave Horwood.

"It's going to be better for the Belleville players," offered Hunter of the switch to the tougher Metro grouping, "but it's no easy three team wise. We're going to have to try for a bigger team physically and maybe carry a few extra players for the longer schedule."

Bill Montgomery raises a cloud of dust for the Junior Farmers as he slides safely past the tag attempt of Consecon third baseman Art Kellar Monday. The Junior Farmers won a 3-1, extra inning decision last night in the seventh and deciding game of the Prince Edward North Shore Softball finals. Consecon had held a 3-0 lead at one point in the series.

Tennis Swings Across Bay

By ELMER BONTER

AMELIASBURG — Tennis activity in the township is on the upswing and besides the municipality building its own facility at least one resident on the Redneersville road installed an outdoor court this year.

The township's recreation committee, with a serious interest in promoting the renewed popularity in tennis, had designed a program to encourage youth to learn to play the game.

To get the project underway the commission provided $1000 for the construction of a hard surface court in centennial park behind the township's administration accommodation on Robbin Lake. And if everything goes as planned the commission intends to extend the undertaking in 1973. In other words next year's program depends on the results obtained under the present set-up.

The effort this year is being devoted to youngsters from grade 7 age and up. It commenced August 21 and continues through to the start of the school term.

Lessons comprise one hour of instruction each afternoon in groups of four players. The students pay $1 for the season's course. Instructor Jack Frame is a local resident who has been active with youth of the township in minor hockey for the last several seasons.

The Township advertises the undertaking as "an excellent opportunity to learn the basics of the game and provide a good introduction for a full season in 1973." Full details are available at the municipal office during the daytime throughout the week.

Farmers Complete Comeback

AMELIASBURG (Staff) — If any team was ever in position to realize the uncertainty of a 3-0 lead it had to be Consecon.

They had built a 3-0 lead in their Prince Edward North Shore Softball final series only to see the Junior Farmers bounce back with three consecutive wins to force a seventh and deciding game Monday.

Consecon managed to regroup last night, fashioning a 3-0 lead after six-and-a-half innings. However, the lack-jacks "comeback team" did just that, scoring three times in their final at bats to knot the score at 3-3.

A solo homer by Steve Tripp in the first extra frame pushed Consecon ahead once again but the Junior Farmers squared matters with a single tally in the bottom of the eighth.

Clarke Alexander held Consecon scoreless in the ninth, while his teammates plated an unearned run in their half of the inning to complete their championship comeback with a 5-4 win.

Junior Farmers' coach Lee Brooks admitted to more than a little apprehension after losing the first three games of the series, but added that "we never gave up. They still had to win that fourth game."

Alexander went the full nine innings for the winners, allowing 11 hits and one walk, while striking out six. Wayne Clarke hurled six innings of shutout ball before giving way to Art Kellar during the seventh-inning rally by the Farmers. They yielded a total of 10 hits and five walks while whiffing eight batters.

Gary Torrance, John Alison and Pete Pettingall collected two hits each for the Junior Farmers, who squandered many of their early baserunners through sloppy base running.

For the losers it was Steve Tripp with three hits followed by Dale McCroskey and Stanley Clarke with two each.

The Junior Farmers had finished third during regular season play, while Consecon had squeezed into fourth in their first year of competition.

Brakemen Still Rolling

TORONTO — The Belleville Conductors and Brakemen were burning up the tracks at the CNE — Toronto Star Baseball Tournament but as the delays become fewer in their drive to the championship title they also become harder to pass through.

The local boys made it three in a row Monday afternoon with a 3-0 win over Dundas and now enter the late stages of the 32-team tournament against Hamilton Mahoney. Belleville had opened the series over Peterborough and the Hamilton Police.

Peter Hall fired a four hitter Monday for the winners, who are also embroiled in the quarter finals of Ontario Baseball Association playdowns, where they lead Sudbury one game to none after an 8-2 win Saturday.

Hall fanned 11 and walked only four in the win over Dundas.

Flyers Don't Like Replays

The pennant winning Supreme Fence Flyers weren't about to make an instant replay of last night's Belleville Minor Lacrosse mosquito semi-final contest with Golden Mile, although it did come close.

The same two teams fought to a tie in their first meeting forcing a replay Monday night but this time Paul D'anna's second goal of the game late in the second half gave the Flyers a 2-1 victory and a berth in the league finals.

Taso Christopher had scored for the Golden Mile in the first half of play.

The Yardmen stoms were derailed by the Station Square Cernacks 2-1 in other Cup action.

Yardmen Gals One Up

BYEP had a brief moment of doubt but regained their composure and proceeded to trample the Cosy Grill 16-9 in the opening game of the Belleville and District Ladies softball League finals.

The regular season pennant-winning Cosy grabbed a 4-3 lead after the first inning of play but it was game over after that as the Yardmen gals scored in five of the next six innings to walk away with the initial win in the best-of-seven series.

Penny Hughes held the lead distance number last night, smashing two homers, with Sue Morton adding a triple and three singles and Sheila Smith a double and three singles. Morton hurled the win, allowing 13 hits, shifting four and walking two.

Losing pitcher Sandra Claus pounded a single and two homers and Sharon Francis a homer and two singles to help Cosy. Claus was touched for 21 hits in her pitching effort.

Next game in the series will be Wednesday night at the Alcontte at 7 p.m.

Rollins', Devolin Win Openers

Rollins Construction played "inside softball" and Devolin Motors played "outside softball", but both brands resulted in Commercial Softball League semi-final victories.

Rollins used pitching and defence to stop Quinte Hotel 3-1, while Devolin's heavy hitting accounted for a 6-3 win over Howard and Robert Printing.

Ken DeMille went the first three innings for Rollins as the league pennant winners scored their "A" series with a win. Ted Waite took over in the fifth, allowing Quinte's only run. The pair yielded four hits and one walk while striking out eight batters.

Scott Reid gave up six hits and one walk for the losers while getting eight men on strikes.

Quinte twice lost runners at the plate. Eldon Gray was called out for leading off third in the second frame and Steve Ling's throw from right field nipped Paul Merraw in the fourth.

Ling had two singles and Wayne McTaggart a double for the winners while Reid doubled for the Hotelmen.

Jack Jury's 257-foot homer over the centre field fence provided the winning run in Devolin's victory over Howard and Robert. The fourth-inning blast snapped a 2-2 deadlock.

Jamie Hunter's eight - hitter earned the win over Bob Swan and Bob Ethier who gave up the same hit total. Hunter fanned one batter and walked three while the Printers' duo issued two walks and struck out four.

Rick Rosebush smacked a double and two singles for Devolin's, with Eric Maher adding two singles and Jury a homer. For the losers, it was Moe Hunter and Ken Generaux with doubles.

Various Funguses Can Attack Lungs

By G. C. Thostenson, MD

Dear Dr. Thostenson: I recently had lung surgery because of a disease of fungus called blastomycosis. Can you tell me something about it? I understand it is fairly rare, especially in women.—A.R.

There are funguses that attack lungs, and this is one of them. The fungus is in the soil, and it can reach the lungs when contaminated dust is inhaled.

You are quite right that it is most prevalent in the southern United States, and the disease —when it affects the lungs—is much more common in men than in women.

Because I emphasize the lungs is that the fungus can also cause a skin condition, first causing a pimple which then will enlarge and ulcerate.

When it affects the lungs, the disease starts as a cold with a cough which progresses to fever, sweats, chest pain and heavy sputum. Changes occur in the lungs which, in x-rays, resemble TB.

You don't specify just what surgery was performed, but it might have been drainage of an abscess caused by the fungus. The disease also responds to medications administered intravein, which may be done either before or after surgery.

Dear Dr. Thostenson: Please tell me if cortisone is bad to take if you have an ulcer? I have got different answers on it. —Mrs. J.L.

One of the characteristics of cortisone is that it is likely to bother ulcers and cause bleeding, so it has to be handled with considerable care. That doesn't altogether rule out its use. The question is how much is being given, and whether the amount does or doesn't bother the ulcer. If a small amount helps the arthritis and doesn't appreciably bother the ulcer, then use would be permissible. But you do have to be watchful and cautious.

Dear Dr. Thostenson: Two doctors told me, not to take aspirin for a cold like Benemid for gouty arthritis.

After a kidney stone operation, the urologist changed the medication to allopurinol. He said the book didn't say anything about aspirin with this drug. Is it okay to take both?—Mrs. J.F.

So now a third doctor—me—has told you not to take aspirin or other salicylates with either Benemid or sulfinpyrazone, two drugs that are used to prevent attacks of gout. The salicylates interfere with the action of those drugs.

Allopurinol works in a different manner, retarding be production of uric acid insead of increasing the excretion of it.

To the best of my information, aspirin does not interfere with this.

However, if the allopurinol is effective in your case, you may not need the aspirin anyway.

Dear Dr. Thostenson: Could a small extra nipple on my teenage daughter's midsection be another little problem to the doctor's office? It looks somewhat like a wart but it bothers her, knowing what it is.—B.C.

Such extra nipples, sometimes several of them, can occur at times.

They do no harm, but can be removed, if desired. I won't commit myself as to whether the doctor would do it in his office. That's his decision.

Simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠
Pass	2 N.T.	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠

Opening lead — five of hearts.

This deal occurred in a duplicate tournament. It illustrates a type of defensive play seldom seen but worthy of study.

At most tables South got to four spades. Where West led a heart, the play generally proceeded with East taking the ace and returning a heart to the jack. West continued with the nine and East overruffing with the jack.

No matter what East returned, declarer then made the rest of the tricks by taking a trump finesse against the king and in that way bringing home the contract.

However, at all these tables East missed an opportunity for a super-play. He would almost surely have stopped the contract had he overruffed dummy's nine with the king, instead of the jack!

It is hard to believe that South would have credited East with the jack under such circumstances. Declarer would surely assume that West had the jack, and would unquestionably play the rest of the hand on that assumption.

Thus, let's suppose that East, after ruffing with the king, had returned a club. It would then be perfectly normal for declarer to win with the ace and cash the ace of spades.

It would also be normal for South to continue with the queen, hoping that West's (presumed) jack would fall. In the actual case West would show out, to South's astonishment, and the contract would go down one.

Overruffing with the king isn't really a difficult play — the hard part is to think of it. South should reason that, if he overruffs with the jack, he is highly unlikely to make the king, but that if he overruffs with the king, he may well make the jack.

Bluff Is Over

GENEVA (CP) — Canadian Ambassador George Ignatieff, stepping down from 22 years of diplomatic life, says the disclear game of bluff has given way to prudence but progress toward nuclear disarmament still remains "almost imperceptible."

In his valedictory address to the 25-country United Nations disarmament conference, where he was Canada's representative since 1958, Ignatieff today called for a series of informal consultations among the leading powers in further efforts to halt the arms race.

Noting that for the first time five of the six major military countries are permanent UN Security Council members, Ignatieff said he can see "no better way for movement forward than effort in the first place to bring about consultation among these five."

"Only if the nuclear powers—and other militarily significant countries—are involved in the process of arms control and disarmament can we achieve our objectives."

One result of such a move might be to encourage the United States and the Soviet Union, to set an example in further efforts to halt the race.

Aide Will Seek Seat

OTTAWA (CP) — Marc Lalonde, head man in Prime Minister Trudeau's office, said Monday he will resign as soon as a federal election is called and will run for the Liberal party in a Montreal constituency.

He said in an interview that he has not yet decided which Montreal riding he will try. There are certain constituencies, he said, that will open when sitting Liberal members announce their intentions not to seek re-election.

MP Lalonde lives in the riding of Outremont, now represented by Liberal Aurelian Noel, who won by more than 10,000 votes in 1968.

In a telephone interview late Monday Mr Noel, 69, refused to say whether he will be a candidate in the next election.

"Oh, will you please leave me alone," he said. "You'll know in time."

Mr. LaLonde, who is 42, would not even hint at the riding in which he will try for nomination, saying no announcement will be made until the election is called.

Now More Confident

TOROTO (CP) — The chief spokesman for Canadian manufacturers said today there is more confidence in the business community now than there was a year ago.

Daniel Sprague, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, told a luncheon at the Canadian National Exhibition, that there has been "heartening evidence in recent months that federal government policies are moving in the right direction.

FITTIPALDI WINS AGAIN

BRAND'S HATCH, England (AP) — Emerson Fittipaldi, 25-year-old Brazilian driver, became a 30-car field to win Europe's Race of Champions Sunday over the Lotus which has taken him to the brink of the 1972 world drivers' championship. Although the race was a non-championship event, Fittipaldi triumph underlined his supremacy on the Grand Prix scene, where he has virtually clinched the driving title with three races still to run. Fellow Brazilian driver Brian Redman, in a Formula 5000 car, was the only other driver to complete the full distance.

ASSIGNS CEREMONIES

TORONTO (CP) — Coach Harry Sinden has named Jean Ratelle and Frank Mahovlich to perform ceremonial duties at the opening games in Montreal Heber, Ph and Toronto Sept. 19. Sinden said he will be touring Russians. Ratelle will handle the exchange of gifts with the Russian captain at centre ice before the Montreal Saturday, and Mahovlich will perform the same duties here Monday. The other two co-captains, Stan Mikita and Phil Esposito, will handle the ceremonies at Winnipeg and Vancouver.

Doyle's Boxing Saga: Pinnacle to Pubs

LONDON (CP) — He once bought champagne for the whole of Dublin in one giant pub-crawl.

Now he apologizes for asking you to buy him a beer and sandwich to help him through another day.

Jack Doyle was a happy, handsome Irish Guardsman of 19 when he broke into boxing in 1932, winning his first nine fights by flattening his opponents in the opening round.

Within a year, Doyle was the darling of Irish colleens and an international sports hero besides.

In that year, he was a match of against London's heavyweight hope Tuli Jack Petitfer, and finished him off in two rounds while elegant ladies at ringside cried with joy.

From his life at the top, moving around the more fashionable circles in Dublin and London's West End, Doyle's descent to the gloom of a Notting Hill pub was a long, heartbreaking journey.

But the boxer, film star, wrestler and playboy soon stumbled downward from the heights of his early career, spending a fortune on the good things of life.

His days now are passed mainly in the gloom of The Hoop or The Albert, pubs in Notting Hill, North of his time he spends alone: broke.

"Now I wish I had stuck to my boxing instead of living it up," he said in an interview.

"I was too young then to know what was good for me.

My manager should have taken me off to the country by myself — just to train and train — away from temptation and the bright lights.

"But at the time I didn't realize. I was 21, a greenhorn, I had come from a humble family in Dublin and suddenly I'd made it."

Gulping a large whisky ahead of a beer chaser, Doyle, whose six-foot-four-inch frame has fallen to fat, said "I hated fighting. I hated hitting people and I hated being hit."

Full of charm and blarney, he still has an eye for a good-looking gal, but he complains himself, says Doyle, with just working at them over the bar.

His second wife, the beautiful Mexican film star, Movika, left him in 1945 to marry Mexican Brando. His first wife, actress Judith Allen, left him after only two years.

Today, the Gorgeous Gael, who earned nearly 100,000 before he was 30, sings in pubs and clubs for about $12 a night when he can get it.

He remembers the days when he owned 150 suits, 100 pairs of shoes and a flat in the best area of London. Now he lives in a one-room apartment in Bayswater. The front lawn is overgrown with weeds and a weatherbeaten "no vacancy" sign hangs on the door.

Doyle's downfall actually began in 1939 when he fought Jack Petersen for the British heavyweight championship, was disqualified for low punches and suspended for six months.

He returned to the ring later but by then he had taken to a more settled career, increased the numbers of women in his life and gone into vaudeville, winning more hearts and less and more fifths.

By July, 1939, he was ecstatic to the mat in the first round of his last fight by British taxi-driver Eddie Phillips.

Now he boasts that he can't stop living from gambling when he has to but his wife is scoffed at by regulars in The Hoop.

Even now, if he had a chance to live his life again, there is no certainty Doyle would do it any differently. As he says, "I'm Irish and the Irish are all crazy. . . ."

Cycle Tykes On Right Track

You come out ahead on a Kawasaki but the Jerry Motorcycle Safe takes care of you, too. Still thousand ahead after Monday night's 16-7 South Hastings Little League win over Corbyville.

The win gave the champions this title for the Fonborn team in the first year for such competition.

Martin McIntosh and Stephen Wellman combined for the win, fanning 10. Wellman added a home run and double to his pitching work and Scott Mosier stroked three hits for the winners.

Football, Medicine Challenge Bunce

VANCOUVER (CP) — Football and medicine both provide excitement and challenge for back up quarterback Don Bunce of B.C. Lions.

The 22-year-old import from Palm Alto, Calif., via Stanford University, says the medical profession offers the same rewards as football.

The six-foot-one, 196-pound quarterback is applying to medical schools throughout Canada and the United States.

Bunce could be's not particularly optimistic about the chances of being accepted at the University of British Columbia medical school because it accepts Canadians first with a preference for those residing in the province.

"Football is exciting and the rewards are close at hand but you can't play forever," he says. "Medicine is professional football player really can't play for more than five years.

"A person has to be realistic and look for a long-term season and that to me is medicine.

Positive things are important and he is an optimist, he said.

The club ran win the Grey Cup. We are in a pressure situation losing three games but collectively I feel the team can make a full comeback."

The key to a comeback by the club rests entirely on its injury situation, he said.

"Now, we are under pressure to win and I know we are going into future games with a better outlook," the California native said.

The first of the 1972 Rose Bowl game, he quarterbacked the Stanford University squad to a victory against Michigan University.

He attracted the attention of Montreal Alouettes and was ultimately drafted by that club. He opted for Vancouver, which he described as a city that "has great potential because the people seem to realize where they are going as a football team. I'd like trying to keep it the way it is.

His arrival here sparked plenty of interest, but it began to wear off as his performance at the Lions' Pentecton training camp.

But he slowly made the adjustment to the Canadian game and in the final two weeks of pre season play he improved considerably.

He was cut on August but was put back on the active roster as the No. 2 quarterback.

Bunce said he feels he doesn't hold the opportunity to show what he can really do with only sporadic game experience.

Club officials, however, are happy with his performance, while noting that he lacks the game experience of Don Moorehead, the Lions' No. 1 quarterback.

Bunce's statistics show he hasn't had much success against the Canadian version of the game.

He has completed 10 of 30 passes for only 107 yards, had two interceptions and no touchdown passes.

Bunce has carried the ball on three occasions for minus two yards.

And an impressive record.

Still the husky, soft-spoken player keeps up the faith.

He said his biggest adjustment has been thinking in terms of going for short downs fast because there are only three here compared with the four back home.

The extra man in motion makes things a little more confusing, he said.

Bunce said he and his wife will be reviewing their situation at the end of this year on whether to leave Canada and return home.

But now, you're No. 2 you have to try a little harder and watch what Don Bunce is doing.

Sport Briefs

Johnson, who was the 1968 Race of Champions series in the morning, was disqualified but returned with the afternoon race handily.

It assured him of the Canadian title and the final race scheduled for today.

Text of Senator Goldenberg's speech was released in advance.

Criticism of Inco Answered

Lewis Gets Into Hot Debate

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — David Lewis, national New Democratic Party leader, got a hot reception from some editors and the weatherman Monday when he wound up a two-day pre-election tour of the Sudbury area.

Mr. Lewis was to fly to Winnipeg today on the first leg of a three-day Manitoba tour before his return to Ottawa Friday.

He said in an interview he expects Prime Minister Trudeau to call an election for Oct. 30.

The 70-year-old leader got into a spirited exchange with some callers on a noon-hour open-line radio program about the Waffles and his claim that International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. is one of Canada's "corporate welfare bums."

One open-line caller accused Mr. Lewis of "leading people up the garden path" for saying that individuals account for nearly 50 per cent of federal tax revenues and corporations only 12 per cent.

"Is it not true that corporations pay 50-per-cent tax?" the caller asked.

"Corporation would pay 50 per cent," Mr. Lewis replied. "If they paid." But many large corporations, through loopholes and depletion allowances, pay no taxes and some pay only eight per cent, Mr. Lewis said.

Mr. Lewis so far has named about 15 corporations who use tax laws to avoid paying "their fair share of taxes." He said he has another 9 or so corporations in a "date-bag yet to be named."

The caller, a male, said Inco's profit last year of about $95 million worked out as a return on capital of about seven per cent.

Mr. Lewis replied that "the difference is that Inco's investment capital comes from minerals put into the earth for all the people of Canada."

The caller retorted that Inco's investment at seven per cent was no different from an individual who puts money in the bank at the same interest rate.

Mr. Lewis replied that "the difference is that Inco's investment capital comes from minerals put into the earth for

Esposito's Double Spends Busy Day

OTTAWA (CP) — When 43-year-old chartered accountant Samuel Cohen of Toronto visited Parliament Hill Monday with his family, he was expecting just a peaceful stroll.

Instead, he found himself besieged by dozens of other tourists seeking his autograph. When he escaped from them, he ran into a request from former prime minister John Di- fenbaker for an interview.

Mr. Cohen is almost accustomed to such unexpected popularity—he is almost an exact double for hockey star Phil Esposito, who plays with Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League.

"This happens all over, in Toronto especially when Boston is in town and people know he is in the city."

What's with the new symbol?

It's more than a symbol. It's a truly creative 'A'. With meaning, depth, symbolism continuity, viability, comprehension . . .

I don't understand what all that means.

It means that the Certified General Accountants Association of Canada has a new trademark. One continuous line representing the flow of information in the three spheres of the business community . . . production, marketing and administration.

Not bad . . . not bad. Hey, that symbol could also stand for the CGA's continuing education policy. You don't stop learning even when you have a degree. Boxcar Mishap Blamed On CN Worker's Error

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — Bruce Affleck, Ontario County Crown attorney, Monday blamed the death of Petronilla Schumann, 48, and her 14-year-old son, Christopher, on an unknown Canadian National Railways employee.

Evidence at an inquest into the July 21 death of the two Oshawa residents revealed that a brake shack adjuster on the boxcar that struck the Schumanns had been loosened and never retightened, although an employee at a CN repair shop in Fort Erie, Ont., marked on the car's defective-equipment card that it had been.

When the boxcar reached Oshawa and was being shunted into the yard of a General Motors plant, it rolled free and swung on to tracks running down the middle of a street adjacent to the plant.

Witnesses estimated at the inquest that the runaway car was travelling in excess of 25 miles an hour when it hit Mrs Schumann and her son. A coroner's jury ruled that the two died of multiple injuries suffered in the accident.

The Penn Central boxcar arrived in Canada at Fort Erie July 18 and was sent to a repair shop when a yardman found three front wheels were defective.

CN employees testified that in order for the wheels to be replaced the brake slack adjuster had to be loosened, rendering the system useless until it was tightened again.

The witnesses testified that under job classifications with the railway, the workmen who loosen the adjuster were not responsible for tightening it again.

"We don't know who did it," said Mr. Affleck, "but it was obviously a CN employee."

INCO Pollution Said Remedied

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal Environment Minister Jack Davis said Monday arsenic precipitating equipment has been installed which will "knock down 99 per cent of the small particles of ash which for years have been going up the smoke stacks" at the International Nickel Company's big smelter at Sudbury, Ont.

David Lewis, New Democratic Party leader, had said in Sudbury Sunday that Inco's new roast-stack dumps two to three tons of arsenic over the area each day. In addition, he said the 2,000 tons of sulphur emitted daily contains "vast quantities" of selenium, described as a highly toxic element.

"Mr. Lewis' concern is welcome, but he's not talking about a new problem, he's talking about an old one which now has been solved," Mr. Davis said in a statement.

Fire Halts Trains

NEW YORK (AP) — Thousands of commuters were stranded in the city Monday when fire broke out in the electrical system of an incoming train, stalling it in a tunnel and halting all evening rush hour trains out of Grand Central Terminal.

The railway could not give an exact figure of the number of commuters who didn't get home by the usual route.

But a spokesman said 75 trains were halted and a majority of its 69,000 daily riders may have been affected when all power was shut off as firemen could fight the blaze.

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — The Prince Edward Island government has agreed to a request from the National Farmers Union to hold a plebiscite on a potato-marketing plan formulated by the NFU, Premier Alex Campbell announced Monday night.

Pocket Sundial

JERUSALEM (Reuter) — Archaeologists here have found a 2,000-year-old pocket sundial made of stone described by one expert as the ancient equivalent of a pocket watch.

The sundial was among items found in silos this year around the southern and western walls of Old Jerusalem's biblical second temple. Prof. Binyamin Mazar, a Hebrew University archaeologist, said.

Nuns Can Vote

TORONTO (CP) — Non-property owning and non-tenant Roman Catholics such as "priests and nuns" now can vote to separate school board elections, Revenue Minister Allan Grossman said Monday.

Mr. Grossman said that Roman Catholic electors who are neither property owners nor tenants have the choice of being enumerated as public or separate school board electors this year for the first time.

Nude Cracks

BRAMALEA, Ont. (CP) — A southern Ontario weather has proved to be too much for Kwakiutl.

The community's recently acquired cedar statue of a nude male, subject of controversy, has developed a crack in its back.

Carved in British Columbia by Simon Charlie, the statue was unable to withstand different weather conditions.

Pay Overtime

OTTAWA (CP) — For the first time members of the RCMP are going to be paid a form of overtime.

Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer announced Monday that constables, non-commissioned officers and some officers will receive pay increases that include payment as compensation for overtime.

Bridge Strike

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Truck drivers, customs officers and construction crews turned back Monday rather than cross picket lines set up by striking traffic and maintenance workers on the Canadian side of the Ambassador Bridge.

The truck drivers' boycott continued to create traffic problems in downtown Windsor as the strike by 15 members of Local 880 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters entered its second day.

The drivers chose the Detroit-Windsor tunnel as an alternate route to Detroit, but some trucks too large for the tunnel had to be diverted to Sarnia and Fort Erie.

Britain Mourns Death of Favorite Royal Prince

LONDON (AP) — Britain mourned today the loss of a favorite royal prince—the dashing William of Gloucester, a 30 year-old bachelor who loved flying his own airplanes because "It is wonderful to feel so free and just be treated like any other chap."

The prince died Monday in the blazing wreckage of a light plane he was piloting in an air race at Wolverhampton in England's midlands. Government officials were investigating.

The prince—ninth in line for the British throne—and his co-pilot, businessman Veryll Mitchell, were killed seconds after takeoff as 50,000 persons looked on.

They saw the single-engined yellow and white Piper Cherokee bank sharply left, skim the top of a house, clip a high tree then plunge 80 feet to the ground to be enveloped in flames.

Witnesses said retraction of the plane's undercarriage after takeoff appeared o have been done incorrectly, causing an upset in a tight turn to fall dangerously low.

The Prince and Mitchell were "terribly burned" an official said. Their bodies were recovered from the wreck after a team of firemen fought the blaze for 20 minutes.

Buckingham Palace announced that "family mourning will be observed . . . until the day of the funeral."

Family mourning—a more personal gesture than court mourning—is observed by household staff, the Queen's representatives at home and abroad, military and government departments as well as members of the Royal Family.

Queen Elizabeth and Princess Anne have cancelled plans to attend the Olympic Games. Prince Philip will return from Munich, where he is an official as president of the International Equestrian Federation, to attend the funeral.

Prince William worked in Japan and Nigeria for the British foreign office and gave up the career two years ago to take charge of family affairs and perform royal duties unable to be met by his father, the Duke of Gloucester. The duke, 72, has been confined to a wheelchair with circulatory trouble for several years.

Rumor had it that the prince planned to marry a 23-year-old French divorcee, Nicole Sieff, daughter of a Monte Carlo restaurateur.

Sulphur Dioxide Upsets Genetic Machinery

NEW YORK (AP) — Two biochemists from New York University reported laboratory evidence Monday suggesting that sulphur dioxide, a major component of air pollution, can disrupt normal genetic mechanisms.

Dr. Robert Shapiro and Barbara Braverman told the annual meeting of the American Chemical Society that when a form of sulphur dioxide is applied to a component of a nucleic acid, the basic unit of heredity, then the component uracil is "unable to perform its usual function."

The researchers said the finding raises the possibility of an increase in the number of birth defects in urban areas.

"This gives us occasion for real concern," Shapiro told a news conference, "but not for stampeding or panic."

Development Bodies Can Now Make Loans

TORONTO (CP) — New measures to stream line operations of the Ontario Development Corp. and the Northern Ontario Development Corp. were announced Monday by John White, minister of industry and tourism.

In effect, the board of directors of both corporations now will have the authority to make repayable loans to Ontario companies of up to $100,000.

Previously, the loans required cabinet approval which in some cases involved lengthy delays.

Now, the directors will be able to make the loans without needing cabinet approval.

Mr. White also announced that he is decentralizing loaning authority within the two corporations which means that financial officers located across the province can now, on their own authority, make loans to small businesses, thereby eliminating approvals by Queen's Park with the attendant delays.

Last March, Mr. White promised the new measures during the legislature's debate of his estimates.

"By these measures the flow of funds to our small businessmen in Ontario will be considerably speeded up," he said.

Hon. Phil Gaglardi Files Libel Suit

VICTORIA (CP) — It was left to Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi to provide the final spark Monday as British Columbia voters prepared to vote in Wednesday's provincial election.

Mr. Gaglardi filed suit for libel against two reporters, a publisher and a publishing company to enliven one of the most muted campaigns in the lively political history of Canada's westernmost province.

Mr. Gaglardi filed the suit after an interview dealing with his aspirations to succeed Premier W. A. C. Bennett as leader of the Social Credit party.

The interview focussed the attention of the voters on the 71-year-old premier, his retirement plans and his potential successors.

The writ filed in British Columbia Supreme Court, Mr. Gaglardi claims damages for libel against Chris Dennett, a reporter for the Toronto Star; Paddy Sherman, publisher of The Province; Peter McNeely, a Province reporter, and Pacific Press Ltd.

The writ states that Mr. Dennett "knowingly, and falsely caused to be published in several newspapers having wide circulation in B.C. the alleged libel."

Mr. Gaglardi also asked for an injunction restraining further publication of the alleged libel, which he said appeared in The Star Aug. 22 and was repeated in The Province Aug. 23.

An endorsement on the writ said Pacific Press, as owner and operator of The Province, Mr. Sherman and Mr. McNeely maliciously, knowingly, and falsely caused the alleged libel to be published in The Province with Mr. Dennett's consent, authority and knowledge.

For most of the campaign, the rhetoric has been low-key, with the premier maintaining a low profile, hopscotching about the province leaving reporters wondering where he would turn up next.

Premier Bennett refused to disclose his itinerary, preferring to travel alone from riding to riding in his quest for another term in the office he has held for 20 years.

New Democratic Party Leader Dave Barrett also has conducted a quiet campaign, refusing to rise to the premier's barbs, and not answering Mr. Bennett's charge that he was a "socialist in sheep's clothing".

The NDP leader was counting on the Progressive Conservatives, a resurgent force in B.C. politics, to capture some Social Credit votes and allow his party an easier road to power.

Progressive Conservative Leader Derril Warren, leading his suddenly-lively party, has concentrated on economic issues for much of the campaign in his bid to make the Tories a provincial power after more than 10 years out of the limelight.

Liberal Leader David Anderson has spent much of his time trying to fight off the Conservatives and attempting to persuade the voters that his party has a chance to form a government.

At dissolution of the 55-mem ber B.C. legislature, Social Credit had 36 seats, the NDP 17, the Liberals five and the Conservatives two.

Premier Bennett, who confined his campaigning Monday to an appearance on a radio open-line program, warned Mr. Gaglardi to win his libel action.

"If he (Gaglardi) doesn't win his case, well then there'll be a replacement in the cabinet," the premier said.

N.B. Power Export To U.S. Approved

OTTAWA (CP) — The national energy board appears to have bucked a swelling tide of concern over the use of Canadian resources and misuse of the environment with its decision Monday to permit power and energy exports to the U.S. by the New Brunswick Electric Power Commission.

The board's approval of three licenses to the N.B. commission, one involving generating facilities built, in part, to serve U.S. demands, reflects arguments across the country about whether Canada should develop its energy for the hungry U.S. market or restrict such development to domestic needs.

The three licences, for the export of power and energy to companies in Maine, include one for a maximum of 400,000 kilowatts to Maine Electric Power Co. Inc. and another to the same company for as much as 875 million kilowatt hours of peak energy a year between 1976 and 1985, and an additional 2,189 million kilowatt hours in 1986.

The third will allow the power commission to transfer 25,000 kilowatts of power from Maine Electric to Maine Public Service Co. and Eastern Maine Electric Co-operative Inc.

The power would be generated from a new thermal-electric station unit to be built by the power commission at Lorneville, near St. John, N.B.

The board decision means, in effect, that it feels the benefits of shipping power and energy to the U.S. are greater than any disadvantages to Canada.

In its decision, it said that "social costs would be small in comparison with the direct benefits of the projects".

The board said there was little evidence pollution would be a problem with the Lorneville power units.

Indeed, it quoted an environment department letter regarding the discharge of water used as a coolant in the units into the Bay of Fundy this way:

"We have no reason . . . to believe that the discharge of heated water into the open Bay of Fundy will create any problems for the fisheries resource."

The department warned only that the point of discharge be well away from any fishing gear.

End to 'Moonlighting' Would Halve Jobless

OTTAWA (CP) — A special employment survey shows that the unemployment rate—now more than six per cent of the labor force—would be cut to 3.3 per cent if moonlighters gave up their second jobs for the jobless.

The survey, conducted by Statistics Canada in June, found that 250,000 of the 8.58 million workers who were employed held two or more jobs.

Multiple jobholding—Statistics Canada's term for moonlighting—showed an increase between March, 1971, and June this year. In the earlier survey, 4.8 per cent of employed people reported they had more than one job. The latest survey found three per cent of the employed people had more than one job.

In June, the total labor force was nearly 9.15 million, and there were 568,000 unemployed. If the 250,000 workers who held more than one job gave one of them over to an unemployed person, unemployment would have been cut to 308,000.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids . . . and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported very striking improvement. Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form, called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Man Is Held As Six Slain

NAKUSP, B.C. (CP) — A man whom RCMP said killed six persons in a shooting spree Monday is to appear in provincial court at Nelson today to be charged.

The man has not been identified. He was described only as in his 40s. Identities of all six persons slain have not yet been released. Police said a full statement on the killings would be released in Nelson today.

Police also were looking for a couple whose car was found abandoned in the area.

The first to die were a 18-year-old youth and a man aged 52 who were working on irrigation equipment in an orchard at Oliver in the south Okanagan. They disappeared about 9 a.m. Monday and their bodies were found Tuesday.

Just before noon on Monday, RCMP said, a man drove into a campground on Dunsdale creek, northeast of Oliver on a rugged dirt road paralleling the Kettle River. He herded two middle-aged couples from Penticton, B.C., into a truck and fired into it at close range.

One woman was killed and the other three were in hospital at Trail, B.C., with gunshot wounds.

Later in the afternoon, the gunman apparently turned up at Edgewood on the west shore of lower Arrow Lake. The bodies of an elderly couple were found there. RCMP said he had commandeered their car at Rock Creek, south of the Dominion Creek campsite.

At Burton, 30 miles north of Edgewood on lower Arrow Lake, the body of a young man was found. He had just come in from a day's fishing on the lake. RCMP said he was shot to death late Monday.

MPs Meet Thursday On B.C. Dock Strike

OTTAWA (CP) — The chances for a fall election were increased Tuesday by Prime Minister Trudeau's decision to recall Parliament Thursday for an emergency session to deal with the British Columbia dock strike.

Mr. Trudeau's move to legislate an end to the strike should rid his government of a potentially dangerous campaign issue and clear the decks for a federal vote Oct. 30.

New Democrats and Conservatives were quick to offer support for a parliamentary remedy to the dock strike, despite adverse reaction to the move by the men actually involved in the dispute. Union and management spokesmen condemned the government for interfering.

The prime minister has long been expected to announce an Oct. 30 election, but the legal strike of longshoremen in Vancouver and other West Coast ports has halted shipment of Prairie grain to Asian buyers, a serious concern to Western voters.

About 30 million bushels of Western grain—mostly wheat—has piled up since the strike began August 7, with 19 Chinese, 10 Japanese and three other ships waiting to load.

MPs will return to an emergency sitting Thursday, may by hastily-dispatched defence department aircraft.

An October vote can still be realized if they give speedy approval to the back-to-work bill and the Senate, which returns Friday, also gives quick passage. Royal assent could then make the legislation law late Friday, allowing Mr. Trudeau to dissolve Parliament in time for a vote at the end of October.

Dissolution at the conclusion of a successful move to start grain moving again would provide a dramatic touch to the election call.

Chief Electoral Officer Jean-Marc Hamel said Tuesday that Friday night is the latest time he could gear his machinery for Oct. 30.

An election date later in an Oct. 30 is unlikely since bad weather after it could keep

Spring Vote Possible Says Grills

By HARRY MULHALL

Lee Grills, MP Hastings, thinks there is a chance a general election could be delayed until next spring.

Mr. Grills was on his way to Ottawa last night when he heard parliament had been recalled to deal with the West Coast dock strike. He said today Prime Minister Trudeau could decide to wait until the impact of getting grain shipments underway again is felt in western Canada, before calling an election.

A victory now in calling an election could push the vote too close to winter — an unpopular season for campaigning, said Mr. Grills.

He thinks there's a better than "50-50 possibility" the election will still be this year, although the Prime Minister then should call it within next week, possibly this weekend.

Mr. Grills believed legislation ending the dock strike, to be introduced Thursday, will be debated by parliament until Friday before it is approved.

Koreans Hope To Unify Land

SEOUL (AP) — North and South Korean Red Cross officials expressed hope for early reunification of the divided peninsula during the opening ceremonies session in Pyong Yang today of negotiations to end the separation of millions of families.

The meeting in Taedong Hall was broadcast to South Korea by a radio team that accompanied the delegates from Seoul.

The first session consisted of exchanges of greetings, confirmation of the agenda and pledges to negotiate in a spirit of reconciliation.

But the schedule calls for no working session until the North Koreans come to Seoul in two weeks, on Sept. 13.

In their speeches, both sides stressed their common background and aspirations rather than the ideological gap between the North and the South.

Kim Tse-hee, the chief North Korean delegate, said it was significant that the two Red Cross societies had cut through a barrier that has separated their countries for 27 years. He said the talks should not only rises to plans to divided families but help speed peaceful unification of the country.

Lee Bum-suk replied for the South that "ideologies and systems are subject to change with the times, but our national homogeneity is eternal.

"I believe that we should all conduct the talks with a devout sense of mission and national consciousness . . . laying a fruitful foundation for eventual unification of the fatherland."

The rival governments announced last month that they had agreed to work for peaceful unification as well as for

Auld Denies INCO Emits Arsenic

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Environment Minister James Auld today refuted charges that International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. is emitting two to three tons of arsenic a day into the air around Sudbury.

"Our air management branch could find nothing to justify this," he said in a statement.

He said arsenic levels in the air in Sudbury are "almost totally insignificant."

He was commenting upon a recent statement by David Lewis, federal leader of the New Democratic Party, who expressed concern about the arsenic levels while on a pre-election campaign tour of the Sudbury area.

Mr. Auld said the average arsenic level in Sudbury is 024 micrograms per cubic metre. He compared whis with the level of 012 micrograms in the Bay Bloorcourt area of Etobicoke, where there are no known sources of arsenic. He said the Etobicoke level is the normal level for urban environments.

Flees from Burwash

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Joseph McKenzie, 19, of Timmins escaped from a work party at Burwash Correctional Centre Monday.

Two other prisoners, Richadr Guenther, 21, of Galt and Barry Mahler, 18, of Huntsville made a similar escape last week but were recaptured hitchhiking on a nearby highway.

Both Sides Unhappy Over Move

VANCOUVER (CP) — Neither longshoremen nor management negotiators are happy about Prime Minister Trudeau's decision to call Parliament back into session to legislate an end to the six-day-old West Coast dock strike.

Don Garcia, area president of the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, said Tuesday the move was a vote-getting tactic.

"We hate to see collective bargaining destroyed by people's political ambitions," he said.

Ed Strang, president of the British Columbia Shipping Employers' Association, said he was appalled at the decision, adding that management "certainly didn't want to have any government intervention."

He said news of the special parliamentary session, which is to be held Thursday, came minutes before the association presented a new proposal to the union's negotiating team. Details of the proposal were not given by Mr. Strang.

Vancouver's docks have been shut down since Aug. 7 in a dispute that began over hiring procedures. Last week all 3,200 British Columbia longshoremen went on strike, closing down half a dozen other ports. The union's position in the dispute were for an additional 30 cents an hour on averaging from $5.05 to $5.30, improved fringe benefits and changes in the Vancouver hiring hall.

Talks were to continue today and Mr. Garcia said the union would have a counter-proposal to make to the employers' new offer. But he said both sides were "still quite far apart."

Asked if the longshoremen would go back to work if Parliament passed a special act ordering them to, Mr. Garcia said: "We are certainly not anarchists."

Meanwhile, officials estimated it could take until early winter to catch up on grain shipments. One grain official was quoted as saying the situation was "just terrible" with three weeks of sales lost because of the closure of Vancouver's docks.

Nixon Going to For Talks with Hawaii Tanaka

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (Reuter) — President Nixon flies to Hawaii today for two days of talks with Premier Takuei Tanaka of Japan after announcing further United States troop cuts in Vietnam.

The talks, viewed as vital to the future of the United States-Japan alliance, will revolve round Japan's decision to outpace Washington in improving relations with China, and the lumcome trade deficit the United States has with Japan.

They are also expected to deal with security problems in Southeast Asia and Japan's possible role in Vietnam reconstruction when the conflict has been settled.

The president is leaving the Western White House after deciding Tuesday that he is cutting the authorized level of U.S. troops in South Vietnam by 27,000 men by Dec. 1 and warning Hanoi that the bombing and sea blockade of the north will go on until all U.S. prisoners are freed.

His announcement, made at a news conference here, was accompanied by a prediction that he and Tanaka will ease one thorny issue with measures to reduce the $1.4-billion trade deficit the United States has with Japan.

Nixon warned Hanoi that he does not intend to halt the bombing of the North for political reasons during the presidential campaign and said there will be no extensive withdrawals on his part of Vietnam.

The president's latest troop reduction will cut the number of U.S. servicemen in Vietnam by 12,000 men to Dec. 1.

He said there will be U.S. troops in Vietnam as long as a single American remains a prisoner in the north.

Poor Persuaded to Plead Guilty

Lawyer Flays Plea Bargaining

MONTREAL (CP) — The practice of plea bargaining in Canadian courts contains inherent dangers and should be more controlled by law, a University of Windsor professor said Tuesday.

E. E. Ratushny, himself a lawyer, told a session of the 58th annual convention of the Canadian Bar Association the practice should at least come under closer scrutiny.

Plea bargainings are negotiated pleas whereby the accused, after discussions with his lawyer and a representative of the prosecution, decides to register a plea of a reduced charge.

With the creation of legal aid bureaux, Mr. Ratushny said, plea bargainings have dropped, proof that this practice is often a result of a lawyer persuading a poor client to plea guilty.

Other lawyers agreed however, with lawyer Henry Walsh who said that the administration of justice would suffer considerably if the practice of plea bargaining was greatly limited or banned.

A team of students is travelling about the city today taking a head count on derelict motor vehicles. Funded by the provincial government, the students are assessing the problem of scrap cars cluttering the countryside and asking cooperation of owners to have them removed. Survey of Wrecks on Hand

A team of Kingston students will scour the Belleville countryside during the next three days searching out derelict motor vehicles.

The provincial government, in an attempt to both rid the countryside of hulks and to promote recycling, made funds available this summer for students interested in surveying the extent of the derelict vehicle eyesore.

The five students, who recently completed a survey of the Kingston area, claim that Belleville is — by and large — a much cleaner city than their home.

"We have found that there are fewer wrecks cluttering the area and there is not so great a need for a total scour job," said one member.

The students will not visit every home in the residential areas in the city, and only stop when they come across a wreck that has derelict potential.

Anderson Position Confirmed

Appointment of Hastings County Judge J. C. Anderson as chairman of arbitration in the Ontario public service, has been officially confirmed.

The two-year appointment, taken effect Sept. 1, Charles MacNaughton, chairman of the Ontario Cabinet's board of management announced.

Judge Anderson, appointed to the Hastings County bench in 1966, will preside over all arbitration boards required under the new Crown Employees Collective Bargaining Act. The legislation formalizes the arbitration process over which the judge has presided since 1964.

Judge Anderson has gained the respect of both sides with his leadership in arbitration proceedings over a long period," said Mr. MacNaughton. "The government is delighted he has agreed to accept this appointment."

Trenton's Official Plan Finally Gets Approval

TRENTON (Staff) — Trenton's long - awaited official plan has received final approval from the ministry of treasury, economics and intergovernmental affairs, Mayor Duncan McDonald revealed late this morning.

However, there are still several avenues to be considered before Trenton's future planning program can be implemented.

Project Planners, consultants who have been working on preparation of the plan for more than two years, will now begin work on drafting the city's final zoning bylaw which will accompany the plan.

"Mayor McDonald said approval of the plan has been delayed for at least a year because of seven areas that did not satisfy the planning branch in Toronto.

He said he met with the officials in Toronto, resolving six of there. During the past year, several land and planners have been working on modifications of the seventh problem area.

Essentially this seventh and final difficulty relates to the decision of provincial authorities to build the plan one of 10 years duration. Project Planners have drafted a 20-year plan for the town based on a projected population of 26,000.

Departmental officials save serious challenge to such a large planning and called for a total revision within ten years of approval.

To implement this, planners launched studies in restriction of land use provisions in the plan, largely by reducing the amount of land devoted to residential land and putting in more categories for specific development lands."

The mayor says there are four such areas designated for future development in the new official plan. Two of these areas are the area at the foot of Dufferin Ave. and a tract of undeveloped land west of Front Street in North Trenton. These lands are not, currently, serviced.

However, appeals have been launched on several aspects of the plan, including the land use designation for the property south of Dufferin.

The mayor says the OMB may revise the plan in accordance with the objections.

Once the plan was received by the ministry of municipal affairs, the town had to advertise the changes for several days. Any objections, and there were several, were forwarded to the Ontario Municipal Board for their consideration.

The mayor said the rulings of the OMB on these questions will be inserted into the official plan when the OMB has dealt with them.

Asked what significance the 10-year official plan will have for Trenton, Mayor McDonald said it was drawn up with due consideration given to residential, industrial, commercial and institutional development.

"We will be fortunate if developers stay within the boundaries of the new plan, but we still have to deal with amendments to the official plan, plus zoning changes," he said.

Areas which are now in the hands of the OMB for consideration include a section of bayshore land at the south end of Dufferin Avenue. Objections were raised to its zoning as future development.

Hanna Park, which has been zoned hazard land (an area of land which must be improved before development, and the area where the new built upon) is being contested. Mayor McDonald explained this is a swampy area which has a real drainage problem.

Two housing districts which must be ruled upon are the Klenawicz apartment highrise on Dundas Street West and the new Home Ownership Made Easy development on Reid Street.

The mayor said there has been no change in industrial designations in Trenton."

Industrial land is mainly restricted to an area on Dufferin Avenue, most of which is owned by Canadian National Railways, an area to the north, along Sidney Street, and a section near the Redwood Hotel, most of which is owned by Canadian National.

Asked to comment on the future highrise development in Trenton, Mayor McDonald said he was not versed well enough on the subject to comment at this time. He did say certain areas would have to be rezoned for highrise from second density, under the new plan.

Because of delays caused by reshuffling of the plan between Toronto and Trenton, certain expansion projects are delayed.

Two named by the mayor are the Canadian Tire expansion on Dundas Street and Stan Klemencic's highrise development.

Details of the approved plan were not released.

much of the electorate away from the polls. Mr. Trudeau rarely favorable to the ruling party.

Mr. Trudeau announced his intention to recall Parliament for a short session next Tuesday, although it is likely that his decision was made a day earlier when Labor Minister Martin O'Connell returned from Vancouver with a pessimistic assessment of the chances for getting a negotiated end to the port dispute.

Parliament recessed for the summer July 28, and was to resumed Sept. 28, if an election did not been set in the meantime.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield issued a statement while enroute from a Maritimes tour, saying he would give "immediate support to appropriate" government bill ordering the dockers back to work. He said an end to the strike was one of two things urgently needed.

"The other is an election to get rid of a government that waits until an emergency has peaked before beginning to act."

Mr. Stanfield's favorable reaction is not surprising since the Conservative Party's strength comes from the Prairies, where grain farmers stand to lose most from the dock tie up.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis said, in Winnipeg, that he would support the bill, but his decision may harm his reputation with labor leaders in B.C. where the party elected eight members in 1968.

Mr. Trudeau, in a formal statement designed to justify the government's action, said labor department efforts had failed to produce a settlement in the strike, although the two parties—the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and the B.C. Maritime Employers Association—had agreed to resume negotiations.

Under these circumstances, the federal government has an obligation on behalf of all Canadians to bring about the resumption of shipping while the parties continue to negotiate a settlement."

He added that wheat markets lost through default of delivery agreements might never be regained and the government intends to prevent that from happening.

Guild Studio All Set

A ballet dancer runs less than average risk of being struck down in the streets.

That's because his perception is keener, his movements co-ordinated and his reflexes fast.

But pedestrian safety is not the reason Belleville will next week have its own full - time ballet school.

A regional ballet company in 10 years is the vision motivating the Belleville branch of the National Ballet Guild, sponsor of the school.

The guild's visit on will come a step closer to reality when registration begins next Wednesday for Quinte Dance Centre, located on the Alexander Office on Front St. The target is an initial 125 pupils — enough to pay 88 per cent of the $25,000 annual operating budget.

Director of Quinte Dance Centre is Brian Scott, a National Ballet Company veteran who has taught guild-sponsored ballet classes in Belleville for the last two years. Associated with him as guest teacher is another National Ballet dancer, Leonard Stepanick. Mr. Stepanick is instructing at Kingston's 200-pupil ballet school and teaching part-time here.

Quinte Dance Centre is the Ballet Guild's response to a community need. Although the population of this area is larger than ever before, its complement of dance teachers has dwindled to almost nothing. The weekend classes conducted by Mr. Scott partially filled the gap. But the time has come for a full-scale endeavor, says Mrs. Charles Wilson of the Quinte Arts Council.

Quinte Dance Centre will not confine itself to producing future prima ballerinas. It will offer classes in mime and movement for adults, tap dancing, jazz and conditioning for adults, and national and character dancing.

Classical ballet instruction is offered for beginners through to the level of professional status and pre-ballet classes will be given for 5-to-7-year-olds.

One of Mr. Scott's main ambitions is to establish a class for male dancers only. About 11 or 12 is the best age to begin, he says, in relation to the ideal age of 8 for girls.

Although the school's personnel has its sights fixed on that eventual ballet company its main purpose is to train local youngsters into "the fusion of mind and body in perfect co-ordination" that is classical dancing.

Ballet, says the Quinte Dance Centre instructors, promotes improved general health and fitness and increases physical and mental awareness in even the most casual participant who has no aspiration for the stage.

The school will employ the full-time director and four part - time staffers — the school's chairman, two pianists and Mr. Stepanick, the guest teacher.

It will be self-sustaining within three years, but to cover the annual $2,000 operating deficit and $2,000 capital deficit, the Guild is now seeking donations from charitable organizations and foundations. Sponsors hope to secure scholarship funds for talented youngsters.

Classes will be held from Tuesday to Friday from 4:30 to 9 p.m. and on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Students may take from one to five lessons a week.

There are three terms each year: September 12 to December 2; Dec. 5 to March 10 and March 13 to June 16. A parents' day will be held at the end of each term.

Although Quinte Dance Centre is not affiliated with the National Ballet School, that institution's principal, Betty Oliphant, has acted as consultant in setting up the program.

The Centre's three large studios at 216A Front St. would have been the envy of the National Ballet during its early years, says Mr. Scott.

The public is invited to inspect the new school Sept. 6 at 7:30 p.m., when Quinte Dance Centre holds it official opening. For the season, the Ballet Guild has secured the film Ballet and . . . a production devoted to the activities of the National Ballet School.

The film, made by Toronto artist Boris Lehrer, has received warm reviews, and both Swedish and Australian television are negotiating for screening rights, in competition with the CBC.

The Belleville showing at the Dance Centre opening will be among the first presentations of the National Ballet School's own copy of the film.

Dance Teachers Well Qualified

Most men back into ballet dancing by a long, round-about route.

For example, Brian Scott, director of the new Quinte Dance Centre.

He was studying in Newcastle, England, to become a marine turbine engineer and taking part in ballroom dancing competitions when his partner invited him to a ballet performance. He began studying ballet for control and strength useful in his ballroom work.

Soon engrossed in ballet, Mr. Scott studied at the International Ballet School in London, joined the Festival of Britain ballet and continued a distinguished 20-year career with several companies. Mr. Scott has danced with the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, the Folies Bergere, Covent Garden Opera and the National Ballet in Toronto.

As a Licentiate of the Imperial Society of Teachers of Dancing, Mr. Scott is qualified to teach the Cecchetti method. He has also graduated from the Royal Academy and has just finished two years of study in teaching methods on a Canada Council grant.

"If you have talent, you can always get training," says Mr. Scott.

"Many people helped me and I want to return that by assisting others."

It takes 10 years to make a professional dancer, says Mr. Scott, and about five years before training starts to show results.

"The first five years of a ballet school are crucial," he says.

Quinte Dance Centre's guest teacher Leonard Stepanick calls himself a genuine Canadian product." He began his dancing career in Edmonton in folk, tap and character dancing. Like Mr. Scott, he hated ballet, but eventually began its study as an aid to his tap dancing. His youthful ambition was to become a teacher of tap dancing a goal he has finally reached with the Quinte Dance Centre.

But in the years since he left Edmonton he spent three summers studying with the National Ballet and was finally taken into the company as an apprentice dancer. Thirteen years with the national company followed, climaxed by the company's triumphant European tour.

Mr. Scott and Mr. Stepanick have moved to Belleville and Mr. Stepanick will commute from here to his cabaret in Kingston.

"We are fortunate in having such well-qualified teachers," says Mrs. Charles Wilson of the Ballet Guild. "Mr. Scott was invited to teach in the United States at twice the salary he is receiving here and in Alberta at one-third more, but he likes the Belleville area and elected to come here."

Boy Fails To Report

Belleville public health officials have had no success tracing a boy reported bitten by a bat Monday at an east end shopping centre.

Dr. C. R. Lenk, health officer, for Hastings-Prince Edward counties, today said public appeals warning the bat might have been rabid had not been successful in locating the boy.

He said this department had done all it could to publicize the incident. The only hope now is that the bat was not rabid, which would rule out any serious consequences.

"In the meantime, if parents of any youngster discover he is the one reported bitten at the Bell-ville Plaza, they should immediately contact their family doctor or the health department.

Crops Healthy, But Ripen Late

Abnormally wet weather has affected hay crops in the Quinte district this year, but cash crops such as tomatoes, corn and apples are still expected to show average yields.

The principle result of the cool wet weather insofar as cash crops are concerned is that harvesting is being delayed.

Processing corn is about a week late while canning factories generally have still not commenced packing tomatoes and it is expected to be well into September before plums get into peak operation.

Acreages of canning factory corn and of tomatoes are said to be about the same as last year.

Prince Edward county, the main tomato producing area of the Quinte district last year grew 1,220 acres with a cash value to the farm of $500,000.

The acreage of canning factory corn in Prince Edward county last year was 1,634, with a value of $180,000 to the farmer.

The production of canning peas in the county this year was said by agricultural representative Larry Matheson to be up slightly over last year when the crop returned $406,000 to the farmer.

Robert Cobbledick, provincial fieldman for apple growers in Prince Edward and Hastings county said the over-all apple crop had not been affected by last spring's cool wet weather and the crops would be down only about two per cent from last year.

In the Quinte area the Mcintosh crop was expected to be down about 10 percent from last year's bumper crop while on the other hand the Spy crop will be up about 25 percent, due to last year being the "off" year for this variety.

Hastings and Prince Edward counties last year produced 375,000 bushels of apples.

Apple production for all counties east of Toronto this year is estimated at 2,017,000 bushels.

Planning Meeting Leads to Another

The heads of Quinte Planning Board municipalities last night got a crash course in what the provincial government has planned for this area but they are not talking about it.

Meeting with two representatives of the ministry of treasury, economics and intergovernmental affairs, the mayors and reeves got reasonable answers from the Toronto people . . . the discussion went pleasantly for the next year or so," said deputy reeve Jack Bush, the QPB chairman.

The closed door gathering was called in a bid to settle the problems of the regional joint planning board.

There was discussion of the controversial double levy question, Township and villages participating in Quinte Planning Board also pay for county-administered planning and want relief from this expense. Murray and Brighton townships and the village of Brighton contend they pay among the highest per capita levies for planning in Ontario because of the double payments.

No decisions on levies were given by ministry officials at the 3½-hour private session in the Sidney township office. However, reeve Bush says the matter will be studied by Queen's Park and a solution will be found.

"If they don't, I think the Northumberland municipalities will get out of Quinte Planning," commented Bush. (The Northumberland municipalities in QPB are Murray and the two Brightons.)

"We discussed the future for Quinte Planning," said Bush. Indications are that ministry officials behind the local mayors and reeves come to an understanding of how Quinte will fit into over-all development schemes for the province.

It appears one of the themes was the effect on Quinte of implementing the Toronto-centre Region Report (that will divert Toronto's growth northward and eastward).

One official attending last night indicated, "Northumberland will be affected first by their (the province's) plans."

Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough has stated a governmental reorganization in at least the western portion of Northumberland . . . Durham can be expected this year.

Commenting on last night's meeting, Trenton mayor Duncan McDonald said "it was worthwhile . . . we were able to toss the problems around and we all learned a little."

One conclusion was reached during the meeting in Sidney that a similar meeting, similar in nature, should be held soon.

Reeve Bush said this morning another meeting has now been scheduled for September 14. For this gathering more provincial officials will be coming down to discuss other aspects of regional development.

Indications are it may take several months before local municipalities receive full answers to their questions but says Bush "this business is not going to be settled until we get there."

In the meantime, the provincial - municipal planning workshops will continue. Local heads of government are asking Tom Talbot, Carnage & Mc-Keough's office to send down officials for consultation.

Litter Campaign Is Stepped Up

The Ontario government has brought its anti-litter campaign against littering and pollution right down to earth.

During the summer the government has been distributing a newspaper, TV and radio advertising program urging residents to use a standing anti-pollution control device—the ordinary litter receptacle.

Now the campaign has slogan banners appearing on the sides of trucks and streets in the city.

Wording on the slogan banners reads "Use this amazing new pollution control device— Keep Ontario Beautiful".

City's Heritage

In Britain many stately homes not to mention stretches of coastline are preserved from the ravages of time, neglect and developers by an organization called The National Trust.

Canadians should be thinking along the same lines. We see evidence of concern for the very earliest of our architectural heritage — at Upper Canada Village for instance — but what about the fine old homes in Belleville and other communities which are threatened by contemporary planning.

A recent letter on this page dwelt on this theme. Dorian Smith suggested that Belleville should establish what he called a "protective society" in the interests of houses in the city's older streets and he mentioned Bridge Street in particular.

"Belleville's governing body," the letter continued, "tells us that, in spite of planning recommendations, it is impossible to speed up the zoning regulations which would protect Bridge Street. Perhaps it is time that we, the people that live here, did something..."

Certainly the "cereal box apartment blocks" of which Mr. Smith speaks are incompatible with the older homes which are eloquent of the city's earlier times. That is not to say apartments are not required. Given the upsurge of population, such accommodation is essential.

In the end

Planners must bear this in mind. So too must the developers — as well as the local councils which have, or should have, the last word.

Driving Hazards

The police and traffic committee study of North Front Street presumably is still under way. Or if completed then we may expect some recommendations on how to bring a greater degree of safety to this now heavily-travelled and rather hazardous route.

Vehicles stopped and awaiting the opportunity to turn into driveways, commercial establishments or side routes remain the greatest single hazard for following traffic. Some spots are more dangerous than others but no matter where one or more vehicles are stopped, other that at lights, there is the possibility of rear-end collisions.

We are thankful in the meantime that North Front Street is not Britain's M1 where there have been awesome pile-ups in fog, or that highway in California where many were killed and injured in the 14-car multi-lane wreckage of their cars after running into a sudden dust storm.

One moment the robot-like procession of cars, their drivers lulled by familiarity with the scene and with the situation, countless journeys behind them. The next moment an act of God — oblivion.

Fortunately for drivers here, Bell Boulevard linking it to Sidney Street is not far from completion. This will take a lot of pressure off North Front Street and contribute to safer conditions there in future. Meanwhile however the latter requires careful negotiating by drivers.

Rapid Growth

A drive around Belleville and its environs reveals the astonishing progress in home building that is taking place. For example, a few miles out Highway 37, where recently one solitary home stood on the east side of the road, there are now about half-a-dozen in various stages of completion.

Ameliasburg way it is the same. Turn right just before Mountain View and drive past the pleasant home with its big outbuilding octagonal dimensions and there are new dwellings taking shape. A small army of people were gathered around the foundations of one the other day and later a truck came rumbling along with a load of lumber destined no doubt for one such fledgling establishment.

And it just to remind us of the obsolescence that overtakes the autos that fill the garages of new homes, a tractor was turning into the township dump pulling the remains of a spent vehicle.

Out of the Past

Time and distance and the travels men take confer an aura of legend upon those who were prominent in their day and now are in other parts. We see for instance in the Rotary Club's bulletin that Ed Worth, who was president of the Belleville Rotary in 1930-31, is now living in Watford, Hertfordshire. Mr. Worth has sent greetings to the club from his English home, noting that he is in good health and sending good wishes to any of his old friends who may still be around. Should anyone wish to write to Mr. Worth his address is 98 Cassiobury Drive, Watford, Herts.

NDP Catchphrase

Lewis Blasts Profit But He Overlooks Its Benefits

By FARMER TESSINGTON
From The Intelligencer's
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—NDP leader David Lewis claims he is not attacking Canadian corporations in his current war on what he has termed "corporate welfare bums." If he isn't, what company needs friends like Mr. Lewis?

He has been afforded some pretty sizeable headlines during the dog days of August when legitimate news is hard to find. His charges against the corporations for paying little or no federal tax while drawing sizeable grants from the public purse, will be one of the keynotes of his party's election strategy.

Regardless of the merits of his attack, one wonders about Mr. Lewis' sense of timing. By the time the people enter the polling booths he may find he has, if not a dead horse, at least a pretty tired one on his hands.

His initial attack was certainly aimed in large measure at a half a dozen prominent companies doing business in Canada. When the companies fired back, the socialist leader changed his stance somewhat and insisted he really is attacking the existing legislation which enables the companies to do what he claims they do.

He admits the companies are not cheating the government or the public but are merely taking advantage of "every defect that has been built into our unfair tax system." If the companies are getting unfair advantages, surely Mr. Lewis should be waging his war on the floor of the Commons in an effort to change the existing legislation. Of course, it is a pre-election campaign time and the NDP leader can recognize a popular campaign issue as well as the next politician.

The Lewis' attack is typical of the attitude of his party when it discusses big business. The NDP believes that big business should operate for the benefit of the state and they regard "profit" as a dirty six-letter word. They tend to ignore the contribution that operations, large and small, have made to the advancement of the standard of living in his country. They slide easily over the fact that much of that nasty profit is paid out to thousands of Canadians who own shares in the companies, and that

Educational Television Service to Expand Videotape Service

TORONTO (CP) — It's the late 1970s.

A man has a problem with the carburetor of his car, and, p e r s o n a l service having reached the level of a luxury few can afford, he wants to get information on how to fix it himself.

He goes to the nearest library, finds what he wants in the index file and then views on one of the library's VTR machines on OECA tape on mathematics which demonstrates the kind desired information.

Those detailed projects of the scope of audio-visual communications were outlined by Ranald Ide, chairman of the government-financed authority which is taking the first step this fall to make videotape programs available to every Canadian.

Starting in September, the OECA is offering to Ontario schools and other educational institutions in the province which have their own VTR equipment an order-by-order lease service of 1,000 educational programs at a one-time cost to the institution of 10 cents a minute and $1 handling costs.

The institution borrowing a half-inch color copy of the program master, which is stored in the OECA's Toronto tape and film library, also pays for the tape—an average cost of about $11 for a 30-minute tape—but where the legal program is no longer needed the tape can be returned to the authority and the $11 refunded. The tape can then be wiped off and used again.

"All of a sudden visual programming has become accessible because the cost of a taped program now is probably less than the cost of a book," said Mr. Ide.

Making television programming accessible is a prime function of the authority, created by an act of the Ontario legislature in 1970 and charged with the development of all technology as it relates to education.

The authority operates its own television channel in Toronto, and has a provincial network made up of CBC CTV and private television stations throughout Ontario which broadcast OECA programs on weekday mornings for classroom watching. This network is being expanded this year by the authority making available free to cable companies throughout the province 18 hours daily of educational programming.

All of this mass distribution still limits the accessibility of the programs to individuals to specific time-periods.

So now, the authority is introducing VIPS (videotape program service).

Briefly, VIPS ran pe wide people with the programs they want to see when they want to see them. At the start, it will be a majority of the educational institutions of Ontario to which VIPS will be available, but the program is designed to spread to other institutions, such as libraries, and eventually into individual homes.

The key to individual-home reception of VIPS is, of course, the availability of economical videotape recorders. At present, they are luxury items costing in the vicinity of $1,000 for the cheapest unit.

But, Mr. Ide predicted, "in five or six years most of the television sets will come with a VTR unit set right in them."

Preparing for this day, the OECA is carrying on a three-fold related program of negotiations, expansion and research.

"Our most difficult problem initially is clearing the rights to the programs, because you have to deal with so many people," said Mr. Ide.

"Obviously we hadn't anticipated we were going to do that and a lot of the rights we had to programs were running out so we had to go back and talk to people.

"In future contracts, knowing that this now is a viable operation, we'll make provisions for clearing the rights and it won't present so many headaches."

The authority has allocated $200,000 for clearing the rights and all other costs incurred in launching the VIPS program. Catalogues of the programs available, printed at a cost to the authority of about 60 cents a copy, are being sent out free to all Ontario educational institutions although at present only about 70 per cent of the province's 4,000 secondary schools and about 15 per cent of 4,207 elementary schools have the necessary equipment to use the service.

Approximately 85 per cent of the elementary schools and 95 per cent of the secondary schools, however, have at least one television set, and in many communities the school boards have VTR machines which are loaned out to the schools within their jurisdictions.

Mr. Ide estimated that rights to about 1,000 OECA programs would be cleared for the start of the VIPS project, with the remainder of the authority's current stock-pile of 8,000 programs cleared within another year.

Meanwhile, the authority is expanding its library at the rate of "about 600 programs a year," acquiring them from educational television libraries all over the world, said Mr. Ide.

At the same time, a team of OECA people is working on training programs, which, w h i h, Mr. Ide said, "is the long run is the most difficult problem of the VIPS project.

"They're working on 200 programs. These should be ready by next January or February, and then they'll send it out and test it and find out how useful it is.

"I would expect that by 1975 we'll have the index system perfected. There is no other country in the world that is tackling this problem of indexing."

The index system used, he explained, will be similar to that for books, with counter numbers used in place of page numbers. There will be both a master index of topics and an individual program index.

"This service will be available to everybody in Canada eventually," said Mr. Ide, "and while initially we will be able to handle manually orders for 30, 60, or 70 units of programs a day, when the volume of demands for the service becomes sufficiently great we'll have to turn to computers."

Looking into the future in this manner is all part of the present for Ranald Ide.

Two Ex Mao Aides Now 'Traitors'

PEKING, (AP) — The Chinese are talking openly about two men they call traitors. One is alive; the other dead.

Liu Shao-chi, president or chairman of the People's Republic of China, was the first to fall. He was labeled a "revisionist traitor" who opposed Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung's line of thought.

Liu was purged in late 1968 but is alive. In response to this correspondent's query, a Chinese official said: "He is undergoing examination." He did not elaborate, but this usually means the person is being "re-educated or indoctrinated at some cadre school.

The other, Marshal Lin Piao is reported to have died in Mo n golia last year while trying to fly to the Soviet Union. The Chinese people got the word not long after the incident happened, but the world was told of this only in July.

The Chinese here say: "Lin's aims became known to Chairman Mao some time ago, a long time ago, almost two years ago. Yet he gave Lin every chance to recant and reconsider Chairman Mao would not have minded if Lin had kept to criticism only. But he began to plot the assassination of Chairman Mao and became a double-dealer. He pretended to return to the thinking of Chairman Mao, but actually continued to plan a coup d'etat."

Speculation here is that official acknowledgement—after silence of more than 10 months—was prompted by embarrassment over the prolonged mystery and the possibility of the appointment of a replacement soon.

First word on the former defence minister's death—to the outside world at least—came from official Chinese sources in late July. The confirmation had been preceded by unofficial reports late last year that Mao's designated heir had died in a plane crash in Mongolia last September.

When this correspon d ent came to China with U.S. President Nixon's party last February the Chinese declined to answer or acknowledge questions regarding Lin.

This time, on a visit at the invitation of Hsinhua, the official Chinese news agency, the Chinese did respond.

However, no official statement has been published or released by Peking as to how the Chinese people knew of Lin's death. The people are not taking of letting them know through the party or revolutionary committees at factories, communes and other organizations."

Officials now speak freely about the Lin Piao case—when asked.

The official explanation is that Lin plotted to overthrow Mao a long time ago. He was blamed for the excesses of the proletarian cultural revolution and the deliberate humiliation of foreign diplomats here.

"Lin did this to embarrass Chairman Mao," is the way it is explained.

Ironically, both Liu and Lin are considered arch-traitors although Liu represented the far right and Lin the far left.

"They were both traitors, with different approaches," the Chinese say. "Liu wanted to halt the revolution and standstill. He wanted to consolidate the gains we had made, and to relax and establish an elite class. He wanted to follow the revisionist capitalistic line (the Soviet line) and oppose the Marxist-Leninist line, Chairman Mao thought.

"Lin had claimed the revolution had gone far enough, need not continue and should stop at the democratic socialistic level, instead of progressing toward a Communist state. He was defeated for his far-right policy.

"The traitor, Lin, like Liu, was ambitious and sought a super-left line, which, in a way, led to the same goal as Liu's—following the Soviet Union revisionists."

The version here is that Lin's plot finally was uncovered and he died while trying to escape to Russia with a few fo l lowers when his plane crashed. Just how is left unanswered.

"There are various rumors," they say. "All we know is that it was trying to flee to Russia and it crashed. But we did not shoot it down."

There are Russian troops in Mongolia.

The word is that the Russians got to the plane wreckage first.

"They guarded the plane," the sources say." But we had our troops there later."

The informants assert that the twin purges of Liu Shao-Chi, a rightist and Lin Piao, a leftist, confirm China's present policy of moderation.

Priest, Nuns Suffer As Champions of Poor

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Various priests and nuns are running into trouble with governments and Roman Catholic authorities in Latin America, in general, the church demand a better deal for South America's poor.

They have suffered these setbacks in the last three months:

—The arrest by Colombian security forces of three priests who now are believed to be under investigation for alleged complicity with leftist guerrillas.

—Bolivia's expulsion of three nuns accused of protecting guerrillas.

—The sentencing of three Dominican friars to 30 days in a year prison terms on conviction for political subversion.

—The removal of five Jesuit priests from their sociology research posts by the Catholic run University of Andres Bello in Caracas, Venezuela.

A number of students also were expelled by the Venezuelan university. The priests and students charged that businessmen started the action against them because "they are not interested in knowing the reality of the country."

One of the most famous radical priests in Latin America was a Colombia, Rev. Camilo Torres. He joined a leftist guerrilla band and was killed by authorities in 1966, becoming a hero for many in the hemisphere.

Another Colombia priest, Rev. Jaime Santander, was arrested this year—then cleared and released—in a police investigation of urban and rural guerrillas.

On the occasion of Father Santander's release, the Jesuit order in Colombia issued a statement protesting the plight of the poor. It said:

"We now are offered an opportunity to reflect on the vast and urgent p r o b l e m whose symptoms are social injustice which comes not only from particular persons or groups but also has its roots in the institutions and juridical and socio-economic structures of the country."

The highest authorities of the Jesuit order in Colombia signed that declaration, but support for radical priests by their superiors is not the general rule.

In 1970, the 15 bishops of Argentina denounced that country's Third World priests movement for issuing a call to social revolution in Latin America. The bishops accused the radics' movement of "a certain deviation of doctrinary orthodoxy" and called such deviation "a dangerous error which must not continue."

Lo Hsing Han Mountain King

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A mysterious Chinese who operates in the mountains of northern Burma, in a wild area called the Golden Triangle, has qualified as the opium king of Asia, Narcotics agents describe this man, Lo Hsing Han, as the first link in the drug chain that ends with sales on United States street corners.

In recent weeks, from his small Burmese town just over the border from Thailand, he has seen Thai and U.S. narcotics agents striking at the heart of the Asian drug traffic.

In June and July agents seized 3,863 kilograms of raw opium, 312 of morphine base, 353 of prepared smoking opium and seven of No. 4 pure heroin. A kilogram is 2.2 pounds.

In two days in June, the Thais seized opium and opiates which would make half a ton of heroin. It was their biggest raid ever.

Judging the value of these hauls is difficult, agents say, because the prices rise sharply the farther down the pipeline the stuff moves. However, if that amount of heroin were to get to the United States, it could be worth $250 million at street value.

The raids did not hurt Lo Hsing Han. He had already sold the drugs to dealers who were caught before they made their runs to Saigon, Bangkok and Hong Kong for further sales.

But the message must have been clear: The heat is on and that may be bad for business.

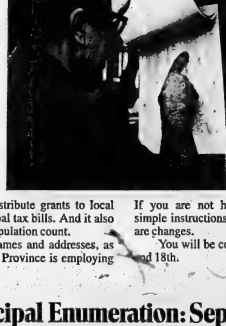
There are no photographs of Lo, no physical description. Thai authorities do not even know his age, although they have heard he is a superb organizer and a charismatic leader.

He is thought to have been born in Yunnan, China's southern province, but even that is uncertain.

Intelligence that trickles over the border, from people who cross frequently to trade or smuggle goods into Tachilek, is sketchy.

But it is known that he operates in that northeast corner of Burma which borders China, Thailand and Laos. The whole area, including parts of Thailand and Laos, is a no man's land called the Golden Triangle because of the estimated 1,034 tons of opium produced there annually. Some 800 tons of opium come from Burma alone, much of it from territory which the opium king rules as a feudal war lord.

Intelligence reports say Lo is the leader of a private army of at least 1,000 men, euphemistically called a self-defence force.



His army is composed of Dacoits, hill tribesmen, Shans, Yunnanese, Haws and deserters from the 93rd Kuomintang Division which was thrown out of China in the Communist takeover in 1949.

His troops have modern weapons, including American M16 rifles, grenade launchers and mortars originally supplied to the Laos army but sold into a black market in Thailand.

Lo's army is regarded as the best equipped and most cohesive fighting force in the mountains. The Burmese army, confined to the main towns, will not tackle it.

Ontario is now putting together the biggest municipal enumeration in its history.

Without you it won't be right.

This is an election year for municipal councils, school boards and other local bodies in most of Ontario. An early step in these elections is the documenting of voters' lists. To assemble voters' lists we need to make an enumeration. This is done by the Province for each municipality.

But our municipal enumeration involves more than just voters' lists. It helps determine the division of education property taxes between the public and separate school systems. It lets the Province more fairly distribute grants to local governments to help reduce municipal tax bills. And it also helps provide us with accurate population count.

Collecting nearly 8 million names and addresses, as you can imagine, is a big job. The Province is employing 8,000 people to visit every residence in Ontario. When the government representative knocks on your door, the procedure is simple. The enumeration notice is pre-printed by computer with the names of everyone currently on record in your household. If you agree that the information is correct and complete, you simply sign the notice. If there are changes, such as an addition to the family, corrections are made on the spot, verified and signed by you or any other adult in your household.

If you are not home the notice is left, together with simple instructions. You mail it, postage free, only if there are changes.

You will be counted sometime between September 5th and 18th.

The Municipal Enumeration: September 5-18. Without you it won't be right.

Youths Find Loot

COTTAGE GROVE, Ore. (AP) — Three youths found $2,360 in cold, wet cash in the Wallamette River.

The money consisted of $10 and $20 bills. The boys told police they kept only "good" bills and threw the muddy ones back in the river.

Detective Fran Tate said the boys discovered the money Monday in mud and silt in the bottom of the river. He said he assumes it is loot from some burglary or robbery.

For now, the boys—Terry Lemon, 14, and Rick LaBlue, 16, of Cottage Grove and Roy Ball, 12, Coos Bay—have the money in a safe deposit box.

Tate said it won't be confiscated until authorities find out where it came from.

PEKING (Reuter) — Italy is to reintroduce spaghetti into China where it was believed to have been discovered 700 years ago by Venetian traveller Marco Polo and brought to Europe to become the national dish of Italy.

The machine, about six feet high and long, will mass produce spaghetti for Chinese visiting the fair in Peking's exhibition centre.

Policeman Gives Himself Ticket for Illegal Parking

BOUNTIFUL, Utah (AP) — When city patrolman William J. Lawrence pulled his police car to the curb outside an ice cream store to grab a quick milk shake, a woman noticed the car was illegally parked.

"We get tickets for such violations," she told Lawrence.

"You're right," the officer admitted, "and we do too."

Whereupon he wrote himself a ticket and later paid a $5 fine in city court.

"Most expensive milk shake I ever had," he said.

But as he stood on the spot he slipped again. His wife and three daughters burst out laughing—until Bill convinced them he was not joking and had broken his right leg.

Commented Bill: "At least my leg will only have to stay in plaster for six weeks this time. Last time it was 12 weeks."

Petrolia is about 15 miles southwest of Sarnia.

Eugene Anderson, 18, and Timothy Ward, 18, both of Buffalo, were sentenced in state supreme court by Justice Gilbert H. King.

King convicted them Aug. 2 in a non-jury trial on charges of murder, attempted first-degree robbery and unlawful possession of a weapon.

Late-Summer Meat Buys

Because barbecue meats are still top priority, roasts are lower-priced right now than corresponding broiling cuts, and probably less expensive than they will be during cold months to come. Consider freezing some when you see good buys.

Fresh local lamb is in season and prices should decrease between now and the end of September.

Chicken and turkey will continue to be excellent buys. Remember the particular economy of utility grade chickens, turkey and Cornish hens. They may lack a wing or drumstick, but must conform to government grade A or B standards—and they're very low priced.

Ending Moonlighting No Cure for Unemployment

OTTAWA (CP) — President Donald MacDonald of the Canadian Labor Congress said Tuesday it is a "gross misinterpretation" to say current jobless rates could be pared sharply if moonlighters relinquished their second jobs to the unemployed.

"Statistics Canada, a highly reputable government statistical agency, does not of course make any such absurd and naive claim," he said in a statement.

The CLC president said it was prompted by "misleading newspaper reports based on a release from Statistics Canada," claiming the current unemployment rate of more than six per cent would be sliced to 3.3 per cent if holders of more than one job gave up their extra work.

The Canadian Press Monday said that a special Statistics Canada survey "shows that the unemployment rate—now running more than six per cent of be labor force—would be cut to 3.3 per cent if moonlighters gave up their second jobs for the jobless."

The CP report pointed out that "this, of course, involves a statistical assumption, and it is probably not true that all those who were moonlighting in June had second or third jobs merely because they liked extra work to fill in their spare time."

It reported that the Statistics Canada survey in June found that 260,000 of the 8.35 million workers employed that month held two or more jobs. The Statistics Canada report said this was three per cent of all employed workers.

Mr. MacDonald said the press report of a potential jobless cut to 3.3 per cent are "gross interpretation . . . tantamount to comparing apples with oranges."

They overlooked the fact that many moonlighting jobs are in areas where unemployment is slight or non-existent.

He said the news reports also ignored the "very strong possibility that most of these moonlighting jobs would be for a comparatively few paid hours and not for a full-time paid occupation."

Quite A Needle

Mel Westergaard, a rancher from Lac La Nonne Alta., holds a four-foot spring loaded drug injection "gun" he has invented, which he says will permit a rancher in a pickup truck to move through his animals and treat those requiring antibiotics without stopping from his vehicle. The instrument has a drug-filled vial at the business end which discharges its contents on contact with the animal. (CP Photo)

Australia, U.S. Show Off-shore Control Risks

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada can benefit from United States and Australian experiences in the question of off-shore mineral rights in a federal country, an authority on international law said Tuesday.

Maxwell Cohen, professor and former dean of law at McGill University, spoke on the topic "off-shore mineral rights considered from an international and constitutional law point of view" at a panel of the Canadian Bar Association's annual meeting.

Speakers noted with approval that the five eastern provinces and the federal government have recently been making progress regarding oil finds under the sea.

Prime Minister Trudeau indicated some weeks ago he was "not married" to the federal government's former position that revenue from undersea products should be split on a 50-50 basis.

Prof. Cohen said Quebec and the four Atlantic provinces were worried that any such undersea revenue would reduce the money they receive from the federal government in equalization payments.

A dollar-for-dollar reduction would leave the provinces much as they were before, and cause anger in the region which has long suffered economic disparity.

Prof. Cohen felt that the Atlantic provinces were entitled to a period "catching up" before any changes in equalization payments were made.

Prof. Cohen said the United States had gone to the Supreme Court to decide the question of undersea rights—the court ruling the federal government had rights from low water no—only to find it still had to work out deals with the state governments.

The federal government and the provinces could go ahead with administrative arrangements pending an opportunity to resolve the constitutional problems. A prior reference by the court would take much time.

Dogs on Trial

BRADFORD, Ont. (CP) — The Canadian national sheepdog trials will be held on the farm of Bill McMichael, RR3 Bradford, Sept. 9 and 10. More than 20 American and Canadian dogs will compete in the event. Bradford is about 25 miles north of Toronto.

Teamster Official Suing for Slander

VANCOUVER (CP) — Senator Ed Lawson, Canadian director of the Teamsters' Union, filed a writ in British Columbia Supreme Court Tuesday alleging slander by Labor Minister James Chabot of British Columbia, and seeking unspecified damages.

No details were contained in the writ. Mr. Lawson said the action was for two statements by the cabinet minister last week.

"Chabot accused me of telling the Teamsters not to abide by a mediation commission decision during a dispute and he accused me of counselling teamsters to break B.C. labor laws," Mr. Lawson said.

He said the accusations were "most serious" because they were made about a senator.

"A senator is considered to be a lawmaker, and if you were a senator counselling people to break the law then you would be most unfit."

New York Sailor Reaches Cobourg

COBOURG, Ont. (CP) — Wayne Deline of Hamlin, N.Y., struggled ashore here from his sinking outboard boat Tuesday while the United States Coast Guard pursued an overnight hunt for him on rough Lake Ontario.

He had set out from Point Breeze, N.Y., about 40 miles across the lake from here, in the 18-foot boat Monday afternoon. He had no particular destination.

The 21-year-old car salesman said he dozed off in the sunshine as he drifted on the lake and was swallowed by violent pains, which he feared were a kickback from the removal of a kidney four years ago.

He said he saw the lights of Cobourg—the only ones visible—so he headed into the harbor.

He was taken to hospital here for tests.

Water Shut Off As Usage Limited

STONEY POINT, Ont. (CP) — Tilbury North Township employees shut off a water valve for about an hour early Tuesday, halting the flow of water to two other municipalities. The move was in protest over a water-usage limit set by the ministry of environment.

The areas affected by the shutoff were the village of Comber and Tilbury West Township.

Tilbury North took the action after the ministry said its water usage could be only 30,000 gallons daily. Anything over that would result in a $100 fine.

The township claims that the Stoney Creek pumping station can accommodate 200,000 gallons daily, more than enough to increase the 30,000-gallon limit.

Comber also has been limited to 30,000 gallons and Tilbury West to 15,000.

Tilbury North threatened about two weeks ago that if the ministry did not increase the limit within 10 days, the water would be shut off.

Reeve Rossaire Rivait announced Monday night that the township's council had "unanimously agreed to shut off the supply of water."

The ministry has agreed to meet with township representatives Sept. 6 to discuss the matter.

Tilbury North is about 20 miles northeast of Windsor.

Mishap Fatal

LINDSAY, Ont. (CP) — Stephen Blasco, 53, of Lindsay, died Tuesday when his car went out of control and ran off Highway 36 just north of this community.

Queensboro

WHITE'S DISTRICT — Bayside Bible Study met at the home of Mr. Maryaret Berkhuizen recently at Massassaga with a good attendance of members.

Rev. Abel Parsons of Foxboro took a recent church service at Westminster United Church. Miss Penny May was organist.

Canada Development Invests in Toronto Firm

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canada Development Corp. has invested $4.5 million in a Toronto venture capital company and is negotiating with two similar companies, CDC chairman Anthony Hampson said Tuesday.

Mr. Hampson said the Toronto company, in which the CDC bought a 36 per-cent interest, is Venturetek International Ltd.

"This is in line with our policy of investing in three or four venture capital companies.

"Negotiations are now well along with two others and we could end up with a total investment in the area of $12 million to $14 million."

He said the money invested in Venturetek was for the purchase of treasury shares.

Venture capital companies operate as sources of capital of new and expanding businesses.

Mr. Hampson said the companies in which the CDC is interested will be making investments of "$50,000 to $500,000, perhaps up to $1 million" in such operations.

District Army and Navy News

A week ago Sunday the ladies of the Legion and the ANAF sure had a ball, even if some of them didn't know what to do with it. However, they took mighty swipes at it while their long suffering menfolk tagged along as caddies. The scene was last at the Barcovan Golf Course and the event was the first combined ladies' golf tournament, the fore runner, it is hoped of many more such occasions. Nine holes were played, some of it good but some of it got lots of laughs but all enjoyed it.

After the tournament was over there was a big barbecue and refreshments laid on and a tired but happy group headed for home. The results were as follows: Low Gross: Joan Seames, 100. Ruth Woodhouse, 102. Low net: Rita Holland, 80; Bunny Christopher, 65; Sheril Goins, 71 and Frieda Mason, 70. Most honest players: Pat Benn and Shirley Booth both tied at 120. The next tournament will also be held at the Barcovan course on Sunday, Sept. 10, teeoff at 10 a.m. Be sure and join in with the group for a day of hilarity and good fellowship. Remember to bring along steak, hot dogs, hamburger or what have you, for the barbecue happy hour after the tournament is finished. Be seeing you.

418 Wing were hosts at their comfortable clubhouse for a horseshoe tournament a week ago with six teams from the Legion, three from the ANAF and four from the host club. It was a pleasant day for it and there were a lot of close matches. A Legion team took top honors while the ANAF team of Bob Brooks and Gerry Robinson were runners up. 418 Wing were great hosts and all enjoyed the hospitality and had a pleasant day of fun.

Put a circle around the date, Sept. 22 for the first big fall dance in the Tartan Lounge. It will be named Alec Adams Night and it is hoped that Alec will be recovered enough to visit his many friends and his musical companions of the Cam Walsh Orchestra who will supply the music with the irritable Bill Salter as master of ceremonies. Tickets at one dollar each will soon be available at the bar.

That friendly group of comrades and their ladies from the Montreal Unit 208 who visited us last year with the Unit returning the visit last fall both visits being a great success, will again be visiting the Duke of Edinburgh Unit on Saturday Oct. 14. So there is another date to keep in mind.

The sick report has risen to six this week with the following comrades in the Belleville General Hospital: W. Norman, 6S; M. Leenan, 6S; J. F. Boyle, 7O1; G. Carver, 8O7; J. Carr, 2T2 Cdn. J. McKay is in room 15, Queen's S. C. Unit.

Decision to Recall Parliament Seen As Astute Move on Part of Liberals

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau's decision to meet the British Columbia docks strike head on, recalling Parliament for Thursday to deal with it, can be interpreted as an astute move to snatch a political hot potato from the election fire.

That is, if he intends to light that election fire in time for the date most heavily favored before the recall announcement. That has been Oct. 30.

If the parliamentary machinery works right for him, he could have the strike-ending legislation approved by Friday and dissolve Parliament on the spot.

That would leave 58 days before Oct. 30—time in which the federal election machinery can be geared for balloting by a potential electorate of about 15 million.

Senior electoral sources, however, say even that won't be cutting the corners close here's one holiday within that period—Labor Day, Sept. 4. These sources say Saturday dissolution would be too late.

Mr. Trudeau Tuesday, in announcing his decision, said Parliament would sit Saturday if necessary.

But there is some agreement that the opposition parties will find it difficult politically to drag their feet in settling a strike that has considerable economic ramifications, particularly for Western Canada.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield has pledge[d] support.

As well, Parliament delayed its summer recess until July 7 to settle the long lineup of Quebec St. Lawrence ports with special legislation.

So there is recent precedent for the special legislation which is expected to be a simple back-to-work measure.

There is also the fact that all opposition parties have been suggesting that a federal election is overdue.

The B.C. dock strike has been seen here as something of an albatross for the Liberal government, with its impact on heavy exports of grain and other materials.

The Liberals hold only 10 of 23 Prairie seats and the government was already under attack for not getting grain shipments—averaging 10 million bushels of wheat a week—rolling through Vancouver.

They hold 15 of the 23 B.C. seats but the Conservatives have been exuding optimism about capturing some of them. The Conservatives now hold none there.

Mr. Trudeau had backed away from a July 17 election at the last minute when he decided the signs were not favorable.

The co-chairmen of the Liberal election campaign committee, Urban Affairs Minister Robert Andras and Regional Expansion Minister Jean Marchand, have said the party is fully ready to go.

They say weaknesses that had been detected in the spring in B.C. and Ontario had been overcome.

It is reported that a forthcoming public opinion poll supports this contention, at least somewhat.

Macdonald Says Energy Exports Would Halt If Shortage Comes

HALIFAX (CP) — Donald Macdonald, federal minister of energy and natural resources, said Tuesday that Canada would cut off exports of electrical energy to the United States should a shortage develop in this country in the future.

Mr. Macdonald was commenting at a news conference on the approval by the national energy board Monday of exports by the New Brunswick Electric Power Commission to power companies in Maine.

The minister said he expected that, at the end of the 10-year contract, the power for export to New England "would in all likelihood be devoted entirely to New Brunswick purposes."

He said his prediction assumed that, during the intervening years, demand for power in New Brunswick would rise to the point where there was no surplus for export.

The decision of the national energy board is the first in which an application for export of power has been approved where generating facilities were planned with an export market specifically in mind.

The power will come from a $184-million generating station to be built at Lorneville, N.B., on the western edge of Saint John.

Fashion Trends for Fall

NEW YORK (CP) — Fall trends are in several categories.

The daytime look for them wear features the new look of topper with pants rather than the jacket of last season. The dress is important as its own, often with a sweater top effect. Plaids are for both town and country, mostly as one accent, either pants or jacket, worn with conservative plain shades.

The dalman is the new sleeve interest, either modified for daytime or in its original fullness starting at the waist. Matte jersey is a favorite fabric for dresses with Melton or soft fluffy fabrics for coat.

For late-day the newest look is a return to the sheet dress, at knee length, although the formal floor-length is still very important. There's a glitter and gleam for evening. Lurex and metallic fabrics are back. Especially popular is a metallic cardigan to wear over evening dresses.

Fur trims enhance coats and even cocktail dresses. Hats are important wardrobe items: cloche or back-rolled brims for daytime, to fur halo's for cocktails or late day.

Fall 1972 will reflect a return to lady-like clothes with character.

DEBORAH GEORGINA ROSS daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Ross, 23 Applewood Drive, Belleville, recently graduated from St. Joseph's School of Nursing, Hotel Dieu Hospital Kingston and was class valedictorian. Miss Ross who is a graduate of BCI.V.S. has accepted a position on staff of the Hotel Dieu Hospital.

MR. AND MRS. BRIAN KODATSKY

Kodatsky – Lepore

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was the scene of the recent wedding ceremony when Rev. A. Laurie Sutherland united in marriage Alison Marie Lepore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Lepore, Belleville and Brian Kirk Kodatsky, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Kodatsky, Port Colborne. Traditional wedding music was rendered by Mr. Frank K. Martin who also accompanied soloist Mrs. Rogers Riedel.

The bride given in marriage by her father wore a white brocade gown which featured vertical panels of silk brocade embroidery. A sheer insert from the high ring collar was embroidered with seed pearls in a floral motif as were the cuffs of the full length sleeves to form an empire styling. The deep full pleats of the gown ended in a full chapel train. Her veil of silk illusion was held in place by a headdress of white tulle rosebuds and satin brocade leaves pointed with pearl drops. Her bouquet was of six bountiful roses and baby's breath.

The bride was attended by her maid of honor, Miss Jane Kerr, who was attired in a pastel flowered gown of pink, turquoise and lilac shadings in empire styling with full short puffed sleeves with turquoise ribbon inserts on the sleeves and the bodice. She wore a large white mohair hat trimmed with matching ribbon. The bridesmaids were Miss Sindy Scratch of Stratford, Miss Verna Cuthbert of Ingersoll, Miss Barbara Horsely of Hamilton and Miss Kathy Fife of Peterborough. They were attired similarly to the maid of honor but with mauve ribbon accents.

The bridegroom was attended by Mr. Len Haslam of Port Colborne. The ushers were Messrs. George and Kim Kodatsky, brothers of the bridegroom, Ed Yakobowski, Port Colborne and Mr. John Albert, Kenmore, N.Y., brother-in-law of the bridegroom.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Royal Canadian Legion hall where the bride's mother received guests wearing a bell-red dress of powder blue. The bodice and long full sleeves were of nylon net with iridescently puffed dots. The skirt was of a silk shantung. Her accessories were white and the corsage was of blue tipped white carnations containing a sweetheart re-shad.

The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a dress of deep pink chiffon with a beaded V-neck and cuffs on the full length flowing sleeves. Her accessories were white and a white gardenia corsage completed her dress.

For the wedding trip to Quebec City and eastern provinces, the bride wore a two piece dress of blue floral prints with an accordion pleated skirt. Her white gardenia carriage matched her accessories.

Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Kodatsky will take up residence in Scarborough, Ontario.

Mirror of Your Mind
by JOHN CONWELL

Can parental screaming do any good?

ONLY the first time. After that, if a child hears his mother and father screaming their heads off at him, the youngster will simply "tune them out." On occasion, the child may even comply with the orders that are yelled at him, but he might be either too stupid or too upset to do what they wanted or he just wants them to stop screaming. In the meantime, his parents have done nothing to motivate him to behave without their screaming at him.

Do only the weak look for sympathy?

NO; just the weak people who could use a sympathetic boost anyway. Someone who seems to be constantly on the lookout for sympathy, however, may need a different kind of understanding. Perhaps he is torn by some inner turmoil that even he can't define. Rather than hint at what is troubling him—even if he knew precisely what it is—the individual has that look about him that invites the compassion of everyone he meets.

Is boredom marriage's worst enemy?

THAT is something that could kill almost any relationship. But it is not very likely that a happy husband and wife could become bored with one another. Oh, there's no doubt that the most loving couple will have moments when it looks as though they could not learn something about the other. Even so, a happy marriage can be like favorite music that never fails to please, no matter how many times it is heard.

Ann Landers

Reader Envious of Writer Signed 'Too Much in Love'

Dear Ann Landers: Your advice to the wife who was extremely affectionate to her husband was excellent. It seems he pushed her away on occasion and hurt her feelings. She wanted to know if she should turn over a new leaf and not go near him unless he indicated that he wanted her. You told her to continue to be affectionate, but to use better judgment —that perhaps her timing was poor. Then you added: "Some men are simply not able to be aggressive."

I realize the grass is always greener, but how I wish my wife would demonstrate some affection. She is a fine person, an excellent cook and house keeper, but our love life is anemic. She will respond only if requested to do so and then she lets me know she is doing me a favor.

I have known for a long time that my wife gets nothing out of our sex life and I have suggested that we see a doctor. Her answer: "Sex is not important to me. I couldn't talk to a third party about anything so intimate."

This woman's positive traits outweigh the negative 10 to one, so I figure I can live with this. But I confess, I resent that lady's letter signed "Too Much In Love" with a great deal of envy.—O. Oky

Dear O.: You and hundreds of others. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: A coworker and I are writing this letter in the hope you will settle a disagreement we are having with one of the management employees in our office.

Church Building

TWEED — Construction of the Free Methodist Church, in its pine-covered setting at the northern limits of the village, is reported progressing. The contractor in charge of the project is Charles McConnell of Napanee.

The building, 56' x 36' with 18x18 vestibule, is of frame construction and when completed, will have an angel stone front wall, with brick walls on the sides and rear. The full basement will contain a Sunday School unit, auditorium, kitchen facilities, nursery, and wash rooms. The grounds will be landscaped and will include a parking area.

To help raise needed funds, members of the Sunday School have embarked on a "Sell A Brick Campaign" with bricks selling for $2. and $5. each. $666.75 has been realized from the sale of bricks so far, with Gregg Wise leading the field in sales. He has sold $250 worth so far.

A hymn sing, to help raise funds was held in the North Addington Education Centre (Stone) on Saturday night, August 26 with the Jim Edwards Family of Wooler, Schutt Sisters, Palmer Rapids, the 13th Chapter from Belleville and others taking part. A handicraft sale will be held later this month, or possibly early in September.

The furniture and electric organ for the church have arrived, and are now in storage awaiting the completion of the building. The organ will be recessed in the stage, with the amplifier speakers concealed in the loft.

One-man Campaign on Smoking

By DORIS CLARK

Because mathematics professor Donald Russell believes the experts, smoking is no longer allowed at meetings of Toronto's York University Faculty of Arts meetings.

Russell has never smoked himself and has been carrying on a letter - writing campaign for the past two years, to persuade airlines and railways to recognize the rights of non-smokers by setting aside non-smoking areas.

Keep it up, Professor

Dear Doris: An old lady told me that I would get a sure cure for the rheumatoid arthritis in my knee if I wore a certain copper bracelet. She gave it to me and said it had done the job for her.

Have you ever heard of such a thing? — Roomatiz.

Dear Roomatiz: When it comes to rheumatoid arthritis, there is a funny thing about it which is an ally of the quack.

Doctors call it "spontaneous remission". It means the disease sometimes will seem to disappear, for no apparent reason. If its victim is wearing a silver horseshoe or a rabbit's foot, or drinking alfalfa tea when spontaneous remission occurs he will quite naturally give the quack remedy the credit. The quack is interested in money, not disease.

Quackery has come a long way since snake oil days.

If you wear a copper bracelet and have any faith in it, go ahead. But do not fail to go to your doctor and follow the treatment he prescribes for you.

This - message is straight from the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, our foremost authority on this widespread, painful disease.

Dear Doris: My husband and I are to be matron of honor and usher at my sister's wedding. We want to have an outdoor party in honor of the bride and groom-to-be.

What type of party could we classify it as? (It will be a surprise).

What type of entertainment, food, decorating, would be appropriate? — Judy.

Dear Judy: What a delightful and novel idea! You might call it a "Congratulations Party" or a "Good Wishes Get-together" and then set out to have fun.

This is no occasion for gifts; you don't want it to turn into a shower. Don't say this on the invitation, of course, but you might tell any guests who ask.

As for food, what do you want? Barbecue would be delightfully informal or an outdoor buffet. Decorations could be crepe paper ribbons, white wedding bells, Japanese lanterns draped around from tree to tree — let your imagination run wild and make it really different.

Leaflets which might help might be: "Pre-Wedding Parties", "Popular Games For Showers", "Party Games and Refreshments", "Throwing a Housewarming — Or Just Any Party" and "Party On A Shoestring", (20 cents each and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

(Leaflets mentioned by Doris are available to readers for 20 cents and a large eight-cent - stamped, self - addressed envelope. If you have not received a leaflet requested, it may be that you have neglected to include the necessary 8"-cent stamp.)

The Experts Say
Laundering Strengthens Cotton-polyester Sheets

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumers should choose permanent-press sheets by price rather than brand, says the Consumers' Association of Canada.

Since their introduction seven years ago, permanent-press bed linens, also called durable press, have captured more than two-thirds of the Canadian market.

Tests conducted by the association concluded that after 50 launderings, sheets containing a blend of 50-per-cent cotton and 50-per-cent polyester were superior in appearance and durability to 100-er-cent cotton permanent-press sheets in both muslin and percale. Laundering strengthens cotton-polyester sheets.

The weight of a sheet is no measure of its strength. The association said that in 100-per-cent cotton sheets the permanent-press finish weakens the fabric, so a heavier cotton must be used.

By December, new fibre-content labelling laws will require all bed linen manufacturers to list their address on a code on each item in label. Care labelling is still not required and will not be found in an assortment of places.

Warm-water washing and hose tumble-drying in a warm cycle with cool down process is recommended. Linens should be removed immediately from the dryer to avoid wrinkling.

All-cotton sheets do not seem to benefit from the permanent press finish, although colors and patterns will not show the wrinkles as much as plain white sheets.

Fading of colors is more noticeable in prints than plain colored sheets, as the colors do not fade evenly.

The association found that a plain hem will pucker less after laundering than fancy hems with contrasting colors or decorative tapes.

It urged the consumer to watch one thing: Dimensions given for sheets and pillowcases made in the U.S. refer to the cut size, so they seem larger. Canadian manufacturers label the package with the finished size—the size after hemming—of the linen.

Imperfect sheets or "seconds" are often a waste of money, the association said. The buyer was usually not allowed to take the sheet out of its plastic for examination before buying it.

Spots, broken hem stitching, pulled yarn or broken filling yarns were flaws that would not seriously affect the life of a sheet, whereas missing or thin yarns or a torn selvage rendered a sheet far less durable.

Can Keep Jobs

NEW DELHI (AP) — Women in the Indian administrative service can now keep both their jobs and husbands. The home ministry said it lifted the requirement that women resign when they married as a step against sex discrimination.

Cleanliness Drive For Bombay City

BOMBAY (CP) — A large-scale cleanliness drive has been launched in this metropolis of nearly six million.

Every morning hundreds of housewives, students, businessmen and factory workers troop out of their homes armed with brooms and baskets. Their slogan list "Bombay is ours. Keep it beautiful."

During weekends as many as 70,000 citizens take part in the cleanliness movement. Housewives who have never walked along a city street for more than a few yards now spend hours washing pavements and cleaning up choked drains.

Subashri Chede, 56, the wife of a textile worker, walked 13 miles on a Saturday collecting rags and pieces of paper from streets.

"There is no use expecting the city government to keep Bombay clean and healthy," she said. "It has not enough garbage vans to do the job. Moreover, the authorities are always plagued with labor trouble."

Students from a dozen Bombay colleges have joined the drive in a big way. They include hundreds of delicate-looking girls.

"If we depend on the municipal authorities, Bombay will remain dirty for years to come," said 19-year-old Gulshan Mehta, the daughter of a millionaire businessman. "The citizens must take up the challenge."

Leaving her Italian sports car in the garage, Miss Mehta walked two miles to Chowpatty beach and started collecting all the leftovers from the food kiosks in a basket.

To curious onlookers, she said: "Why do you keep staring? Please join me in cleaning up this place."

Nearly 20 people responded to her appeal.

Some college students are helping municipal sweepers in cleaning up underground drains — perhaps the most hated job in the sanitation department.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Ali Yawar Jung, wife of the governor of Bombay, has setup a committee to keep selected areas of the city free from heaps of garbage.

Mrs. Jung is particularly keen that people should not throw refuse out of their windows.

She thought of setting up the citizens' committee when a garbage "mountain" almost loaded on her as she and the governor were having an early morning stroll on Malabar Hill, the city's aristocratic district.

That even aristocrats did not know how to dispose of their garbage has convinced the former Indian princess about the need for a mass campaign.

BACKS NATIVE RIGHTS — Nellie Cournoyea, manager of the CBC radio station at Inuvik, NWT, was among the founders of the Committee for the Original People's Entitlement, a group that aims to protect aboriginal rights of native people in the Mackenzie Delta, and to hundreds of whites in the provinces concerned about native rights, has a foot in both worlds. (CP Photo)

Native Leader Says White People Too Greedy

INUVIK, N.W.T. (CP) — "The white people are too greedy. They are grabbing everything. And the native people are wondering why, because it is not really theirs to grab."

The words are those of native leader Nellie Cournoyea, and she was trying to explain why the people of this Mackenzie Delta community made up of 2,000 whites, Eskimos, Indians and Metis don't seem to be getting along well together.

Nellie, as she is affectionately known throughout the delta and to hundreds of whites in the provinces concerned about native rights, has a foot in both worlds.

She was born of Norwegian and Eskimo parents and until she was well into her teens, worked on the family trapline in nearby Aklavik.

With her blonde hair, blue eyes, delicate facial features and slender build, she commands attention in any company. And as manager of the CBC radio station here, her income and prestige rank high in the community.

But Nellie's sympathies remain with the people among whom she was raised and heautopian views haven't made her the most popular person among government officials and private residents here.

Her schedule is a hectic one. Running a radio station, bringing up two children and supplying the glue that keeps the native organization together leaves little spare time.

But she managed to find time for a late-night interview in her downtown CBC office and tried patiently to explain her position.

"How come it is that we have building lots which were agreed by town council that people didn't want to keep those lots, they would go up for public bid?" she asked.

"How come this longtime white resident has now acquired five lots without any of those lots coming up for public bid?

"How come this person that you trust in the game office is buying property cheaply from native people, and yet he says he cares for them?"

The voice was quiet but bitter as she continued:

"How come a territorial councillor can head on to a piece of property for nine years without putting any developments on it, and some native people lose their property after two years because they don't improve their land?

"Why aren't native houses hooked on to water and sewer services? Why is it that the native people get water at 45 gallon drums if we have such a great territorial council, if we have such a good town council?

"How come, when a native person wanted to run for territorial council in the last election, that he couldn't get the support of prominent white people in Inuvik? . . .

"And how come when the Committee for the Original People's Entitlement was formed, we were pounced upon by territorial councillors, by people we thought were our friends, why?"

Nellie's credentials as a spokesman for the people are questioned by some government people. But they seem roundly endorsed by native people themselves.

Her father is Nels Huntum, a Norwegian who came to the delta in the 1920s to run a small trading store and to trap. Her mother is Magrit Mike, a good-natured coastal Eskimo.

Her schooling was spotty. She spent a year in a special class in Vancouver, the year fire destroyed her family's home, took the lives of two of her nine brothers and sisters and injured her.

From there she learned by correspondence courses and her interest in public affairs first surfaced when she became a volunteer worker in the Aklavik community radio station.

When the Aklavik station moved to Inuvik, Nellie was able to catch on as an operator-announcer. Two years ago she became the first woman in Canada to be named a radio station manager.

Nellie gets furious when she talks about how white people take the attitude that Eskimos and Indians aren't ready to run their own affairs.

"Before, I never heard a native get up and apologize for not being able to speak English very well," she said.

She has only scorn for treaties 8 and 11, the pacts signed by some of the Indian bands in the delta. Under them, an Indian family of five is entitled to one square mile of land.

"My father trapped over 25 square miles and went further beyond that for good," she said.

"Do you think that if a government man came along and asked Dad to sign a paper giving up his right to the land in return for one square mile, he would accept it?"

It is this conviction of native leaders that the Indians didn't realize the impact of the treaties that has led to their demands that the treaties be renegotiated.

Food Prices High in Far North

ATTAWAPISKAT, Ont. (CP) — Food must be flown in or hauled by slow barges in this reserve 375 air miles from Timmins, and food prices show it.

Eggs cost $1.35 a dozen. Bread is 75 cents a loaf and it's a week old when it arrives.

Roy Turner said: "It's still fresh by our standard."

Mr. Turner, manager of the Hudson's Bay Co. store, said food supplies arrive twice a week by plane, depending on weather. That added 15 cents a pound to everything. Otherwise they must be shipped by barge, pulled by tugs that carry as much as 1,000 tons of food and fuel to the remote areas along the shores of James Bay.

Potatoes are flown in, and they're not new. Ten pounds of last year's potatoes sell at $3.50. Sending them by barge in the summer is ruled out because of the heat.

A six-ounce jar of instant coffee sells at $2. People use canned milk that sells at 31 cents. A 10-pound bag of sugar costs $2.26.

Mr. Turner said most of his Indian customers are tea drinkers. They used a lot of sugar for it and for a sustaining concoction of tea, flour, lard and sugar.

"It's thick, like soup, and they make it up when they go into the bush because it gives them energy."

The vegetables he ordered were usually restricted to cabbages, turnips and carrots.

Pork chops cost from $1.60 to $2.76 a pound, round steak costs $2.35 a pound.

Chicken breasts cost $1.35 a pound, legs $1.25.

Mr. Turner was born in Toronto and moved north when he was 19, just because he didn't want to live in a city.

He and his wife, a Cree woman, have two children and Mr. Turner said their education is the only thing that would make him consider moving south again.

WEDDING

PINCOMBE — CONLEY

On August 26, Holloway St. United Church was the setting for the double - ring wedding ceremony of Pamela Ann Conley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Conley of Belleville and Robert James Pincombe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Pincombe of Strathroy. Rev. C. W. Coleman conducted the ceremony.

The soloist for the occasion was Miss Bonnie Zavitz of Ilderton, Ont., accompanied on the organ by Ron Nauta of Strathroy.

The bride given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of white organza over taffeta with lace trim featuring an empire waistline and high ruffled neckline. Her full puff sleeves were gathered on a wide band at the wrist. The bride's headdress was a dainty circlet of small white poms and pink sweetheart roses. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses and stephanotis.

The maid of honor, Miss Pauline Wingle of Orwell, a floor length gown of jade green polyester with full skirt and long puff sleeves. She carried a bouquet of daisies and wore matching daisies in her hair.

David Marshall of Strathroy Ont. was best man. The ushers were David Conley, brother of the bride and Richard Pincombe, brother of the bridegroom.

For the reception held at the Sun Luck Gardens, the bride's mother received the guests wearing a floor length pink and white polyester gown with a corsage of pink roses. The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a floor length pale mauve gown with a corsage of yellow roses completing her ensemble.

Guests were entertained at the reception with musical selections by Dave Conley, the bride's brother and also by Bonnie Zavitz and Ron Nauta.

The bride chose a navy pant ensemble with red blouse and plaid jacket for their wedding trip west.

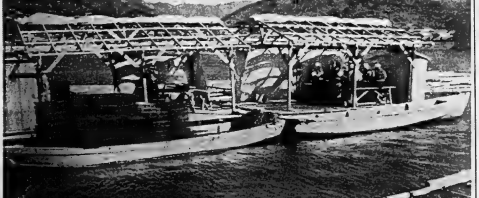
Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Pincombe will reside in Peterborough where the bridegroom is attending Trent University.

Peach Puffs - - A Great 'Brunch' Recipe

TORONTO — Don't limit peaches and cream to dessert in the advice from Dairy Foods Kitchen, Toronto.

Peach Puffs are a great brunch recipe combining peaches, an oven pancake and a spiced whipped cream. The pancake batter is whipped together in the blender and the pancakes baked untended in the oven in pie plates. When they are puffed and golden, remove from the oven, fill with fresh sliced peaches and dust with icing sugar.

Cut into wedges to serve and generously spoon whipped cream flavored with cinnamon and nutmeg on top. Crisp bacon slices make a nice accompaniment for brunch along with lots of good hot coffee. You could vary the recipe for another time by using a different fruit and dairy sour cream or ice cream in place of the whipped cream.



PEACH PUFF
(Makes 8 servings)

3 tbsps. butter
4 eggs
½ cup milk
Thin outer rind of ½ lemon
1 cup sifted all - purpose flour
2 tbsps. granulated sugar
½ tsp. salt

½ pt. (1¼ cups) whipping cream
3 tbsps. icing sugar
¼ tsp. cinnamon
¼ tsp. nutmeg
4 cups sliced fresh peaches
Icing sugar

For the Pancake: Preheat oven to 400 deg. F. Divide butter evenly between two 9" pie plates and melt in oven. In blender container combine eggs, milk and lemon rind. Cover and blend at high speed until thoroughly combined and lemon rind is finely chopped. Add flour, sugar and salt. Blend at high speed until smoothly combined; scrape down sides of blender container if necessary. Pour half of batter in each prepared pie plate. Bake in preheated oven 20 - 22 min. or until puffed and golden.

For the Filling: Whip cream until softly stiff; beat in icing sugar, cinnamon and nutmeg. Divide peaches in half and fill the centre of each pancake; sprinkle each with icing sugar. Cut into wedges and spoon whipped cream over individual servings.

PEARL FARM — Japanese pearl farms are located along peaceful coves and bays in southwestern Japan. Pearl-bearing oysters are kept in closed wire baskets suspended from rafts forground. Workers check the rafts periodically, lowering or raising the baskets according to changes in water temperature. (CP Photo)

Hormone Study Finds About 80 Cancer Cases

BOSTON (AP) — Research-ers whose studies first linked a synthetic female hormone to cancer in the children of pregnant women who took the drug say they have uncovered about 80 cases of such tumors since beginning their investigations.

In 1971, Dr. Arthur Herbst, Howard Ulfelder and David Poskanzer, working at Vincent Memorial Hospital in Boston, caused a medical stir when they reported finding eight cases of vaginal cancer during 1966-69 which were apparently linked to the hormone diethylstilbestrol, or DES.

They said they discovered that in each case, the mothers of the cancer patients had received DES during pregnancy. They reported there was a "highly significant association" between the mothers taking the drug and vaginal cancer in their young daughters.

Dr. Herbst says that since the study appeared, his team has received and confirmed reports of about 80 cases of vaginal tumors in women younger than 25 from throughout the United States and elsewhere.

He said that even though the use of Stilbestrol, a derivative of DES, was widespread in pregnant women in the late '40s and early '50s, the fact that only 80 related cancer cases have been reported would indicate that the risk of cancer in the daughters is "so far not very large."

"We still don't know the risk of any young girl developing a cancer whose mother took the drug, but we feel it is small," he said.

The Herbst team study has two significant medical implications. It is one of the first that a drug taken by a parent has been linked with disorders appearing occurring many years later. And, unlike the cervix, cancer in the vagina is rare, particularly in young.

Since the appearance of the study, Dr. Herbst says, the already declining use of stilbestrol in pregnant women has decreased even more.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration earlier this month banned all production of DES for use in animal feeds, for which it had been used to help fatten cattle. The hormone has turned up in the tissues of animals slaughtered for food and some research reports that DES has caused cancer in some experimental animals.

Canada has also banned the use of DES in animal feeds.

Spassky Fights Hard In Forlorn Endeavor

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — The 20th game in the world chess championship continues today with the kibitzing grandmasters predicting another draw or possibly a victory for Boris Spassky.

Spassky, fighting stubbornly to hold on to the title everyone expects him to lose, bounced an attack by Bobby Fischer on the day in the early stages of the game and then slowly accepted the United States challenger in a long end game that adjourned in the 40th move.

The Russian clearly was trying hard for the victory he needs to stay champion. Fischer, leading 11-8, needs only 1½ more points to take the title, while Spassky needs four points to retain it. With a victory counting 1 point and a draw half a point for each player, Fischer needs only a victory and a draw or three draws. But Spassky must win at least three of the remaining games and draw the other two.

Spassky used about two hours and 35 minutes of his time Tuesday, Fischer used two hours and 22 minutes.

Fischer, playing the white pieces, opened with his favorite pawn to king four for the fifth time in the match. Spassky chose the Sicilian Defence, which gives black good counter-attacking chances.

The game was guided into the Fainer Variation and the players castled on opposite sides of the board when the signal for fierce pawn assaults on the kings. Fischer controlled more open lines and Spassky was content with a cramped but solid development.

Instead of pawn storms, piece exchanges followed. Fischer's attack spent itself about the 20th move, although he kept a rook planted deep in Russian territory.

Grandmaster William Lombardy, Fischer's second, said the position appeared even but he would prefer to play the black side.

The words were prophetic. Spassky, easing his foot out of his shoes for comfort, began occasional strolls offstage, advanced figures first on the queen's side of the board and then on the king's side.

Fischer gradually gave ground and Spassky finally lunged creating a bishop—a powerful piece—for the loss of a pawn.

Fischer, however, was playing accurately and soon the Russian's game was in shambles. Spassky twice, on the 22nd and 27th moves, rejected a triple repetition of moves that would have led to a draw.

Tuesday's game was the ninth to be adjourned in the 24-game match. Six draws preceded it, and coins devotees are disappointed that Fischer now is playing accurately after six victories in the first 12 games.

"He tries a little in the opening but then he is pleased with a drawish outcome," said Yugoslav grandmaster Svetozar Gligoric.

United Appeal Joins Chargex In St. Kitts

ST. CATHARINES, Ont (CP) — Gifts to charity are to your credit, too, in this city they can be against your credit too. The district United Appeal has joined Chargex.

Harold Scott, local campaign director, said four organizers figure "that we're moving into a more less society and we wanted to be there when it arrives."

Credit card donations have been successful in the United States for about three years, he said. Scott said the St. Catharines district appeal is the first to make the move in Canada.

The local fund raisers, who have a target of $300,000, will take the Chargex number of contributors, which can sign up for single or periodic donations. The fund pays the credit-card company 3% per cent.

Murder Charged

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — Donna Marie Gesa, 23, was remanded in custody until Sept. 5 when she appeared in court in nearby Fonthway Tuesday, charged with the non-capital murder of her husband.

James J. Gess, 41, died of multiple stab wounds Aug. 20.

The couple moved to Bay Beach, five miles south of Fort Erie, from Phillipsburg, N.J., about a year ago.

Report Profit

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto Star Syndicate, Inc., Observer, has shown its second year of profit since 1911.

It made a profit of approximately $115,000 in 1971-72. The previous year the Observer retired approximately $85,000. The Observer and its predecessors lost money every year between 1911 and 1970.

Exact figures for each year are not available, however, because of a change in accounting procedures.

The magazine has a circulation of 292,000.

Industrial Chemical Causes Defects and Death in Embryos

NEW YORK (AP) — The industrial chemical PCB has produced deaths in embryos and birth defects in laboratory animals experiments, a United States government biologist reported today.

Dr. Hector Cecil of the U.S. agriculture department said that 70 per cent of mice fed their chickens did not reach term levels of PCBs produced embryos that failed to hatch.

And of the chick embryos that failed to hatch, 54 per cent had defects. Dr. Cecil told the 164th national meeting of the American Chemical Society.

Dr. Cecil described the research as one of only a few controlled studies of the effects of PCBs. Her report followed one on Tuesday of the discovery of the chemical in human tissue.

PCB, while not a pesticide, is chemically similar to DDT. It has found its way into the environment, into marine and animal life, and it has been detected in some drinking water in New York state, and in Arctic polar bears.

Scientists at the chemical society meeting said PCB has been put to such uses as a liquid for transformers, as a lubricant, as a paint additive, in hydraulic fluid, in carbonless carbon paper and probably in many other areas not widely known. The chemical is highly resistant to heat.

"The recent contamination of poultry in 13 states is just one example of the hazards PCB may pose," Dr. Cecil said. "many potential problems are still unresolved and not appreciated at this time because of the relatively small amount of research on PCBs in the past."

In the study at the Agricultural Research Service in Beltsville, Md., chickens were given feed containing 33 parts per million of Aroclor 1254, a PCB. Similar studies have revealed one to two parts per million in some samples and a high of 16 parts in one sample.

Of 1,308 embryos, 843 failed to hatch and of those 226 were abnormal. Half the abnormal embryos exhibited excessive accumulations and cysts of fluid, called edema, on the neck and rump.

The precise cause of the death of the embryos has not been determined. Other birth defects noted were small bodies, skinny legs, rotated ankles, short or crossed beaks and cleft palates.

Most of the chicks that hatched appeared normal. However, these chicks did not grow as well as birds from chickens not given PCBs.

Dr. Cecil told reporters there was still a possibility that some contaminant in PCB could be causing the problems rather than the chemical compound itself, and that this has to be determined conclusively.

Press to Be Thing of Past in Weightlifting

MUNICH (AP) — Chancellor are like super-heavy weightlifters will by legs super by the time the 1976 Olympic Games are staged in Montreal.

There will be fewer of those big, drooping, flabby bellies.

The strong men, from featherweight to heavy, are likely to be taller and slimmer with the chests and shoulders less overdeveloped.

In short, a new, more athletic type of weightlifter may be around four years from now.

This is one of the predicted results of a decision by the International Weightlifting Federation congress here to abolish the controversial press event and retain only the snatch and the clean and jerk in international competitions as from 1973.

The press is the weightlifting discipline calling for the really strong man, as broad as he is tall, who stands firmly on his feet and uses his arms and shoulders only to lift the bar bell over his head after resting it on his chest.

Or that was what the press used to be.

The major reason for eliminating the press was that, gradually, referees allowed lifters to move their knees and legs as well as their hips until it reached the point where it became hard to tell the press from the faster, more gymbastic jerk.

Disagreement among referees on how much was to be permitted made officiating chaotic — with endless controversies and deep bitterness among lifters. There also was the risk of serious back injuries resulting from the new-style press.

Finally, eliminating the press meant shortening the long-drawn competitions now requiring from six to 10 hours for a single weight class.

The snatch and jerk are quick lifts and big bellies now needed in the heavy classes for balance in the press, will only be in the way.

Seven Golds?

Spitz Making Golden Splash

MUNICH (CP) — Mark Spitz broke his third world record in the Olympic pool Tuesday, lowered himself dry and said, "I'm afraid of everybody."

Four years ago, as a brash 18-year-old, the California-born swimmer went to Mexico City announcing he intended to win four individual gold medals and emerged with a second-place silver, a third-place bronze, two golds in relay events and a powerful incentive to do better in 1972.

Today, needing one more victory to match the four achieved by Don Schollander of the United States in 1964, the current Olympic swimming high-he still has a shot at an unprecedented bag of seven golds, a total that has been reached by gymnasts but not been approached by any other athlete.

While Spitz tucked away the 200-metre freestyle title along with his previous victories in the 100-metre butterfly and as a member of the U.S. 400-metre freestyle relay team, all world-record times, two American teammates — a roadblock in the way of Shane Gould, the Australian 15-year-old who was expected to make similar progress through the women's events.

Sandra Neilson and Shirley Babashoff touched barely ahead of the 15-year-old Australian in the 100 metre freestyle, which Shane was trying to add to the 200-metre individual medley she won on Monday's opening swimming program.

Her team-mate, 15-year-old Beverly Whitfield, turned the tables with a victory in the women's 400-metre breaststroke and Rofi and Matthes of East Germany won the men's and metre backstroke in the only other swimming finals of the night.

Canadians continued to improve their respective performances but Tuesday's only finalist was Robin Britton of Ocean Falls, B.C., a 24-year-old veteran of two previous Olympics who finished eighth and last in the 200-metre freestyle after breaking his own Cana-

Canadians continued to improve their respective performances but Tuesday's only finalist was Robin Britton of Ocean Falls, B.C., a 24-year-old veteran of two previous Olympics who finished eighth and last in the 200-metre freestyle after breaking his own Canadian record in the heats.

The world record in the men's 100-metre breaststroke failed to survive the semi-finals of the event. Going into tonight's final, it belonged to Nobutaka Taguchi of Japan after John Hencken of the U.S. held it briefly at the end of the first semi-final heat.

Bill Mahoney of New Westminster, B.C., who became the Canadian record in his heat and broke it again in his semi-final, was unable to qualify.

Spitz will give the record-keepers a real test Thursday, when he goes in the 100-metre butterfly and the 800-metre freestyle relay. If his streak is still alive, he can prolong it in Sunday's 200 freestyle and finish it off in the 400 medley relay on Monday's final swimming card.

Thanks mainly to its swimmers and divers, the U.S. team maintained its lead in the Olympic medal table with five gold, six silver and four bronze. East Germany was second with three, two and four, while Russia moved into third place with its second gold medal—in the 100-kilometre individual time trial—to go with three silver and two bronze.

In the unofficial point standings, based on a 10-5-4-3-2-1 count for the first six placings in final events, the Americans had 114 points to 71 for East Germany and 45 for Russia. Canada, unable to pick up points Tuesday, had a 16th place total of 5.

Italy broke into the medal table with a gold and bronze in trapshooting. Angelo Scalzone won the event and broke a world record by scoring 199 of his 200 targets in the three-competition round.

John Primrose of Edmonton finished seventh among the 37 competitors with a score of 187.

Russia, bidding for a double victory in team gymnastics competition, captured the women's event Monday, had to settle for second-place silver behind the Japanese men who wowed the judges with a half-in, half-out turn and split leap. Russian coach called the Tsukahara Jump in honor of its performer on the horizontal bars, Mitsuo Tsukahara.

David Miller of Vancouver sailed to a third-place finish in the Soling class as the yachtsmen held the first of their seven racer. Allan Leibel of Toronto was fifth in the Dragon contest and the Star entry skipped by Ian Bruce of Montreal made it into the top half of the division with the aid of a disqualification that placed the Canadians ninth in the field of 18.

Two Canadian wrestlers were still alive after three rounds of freestyle competition. Featherweight Gordon Bertie of Edmonton had won two straight bouts while Pat Bolger of Dutton, Ont., was pinned for his first loss in three starts in the lightweight division.

George Saunders of Thunder Bay, Ont., had to withdraw from the middle heavyweight division because of a knee injury after a win and a loss in his first two bouts.

Dale Anderson became the third casualty of Canada's five-man boxing team when he dropped a split decision in the welterweight class. Flyweight Chris Ian of Vancouver and heavyweight Carroll Morgan of Antigonish, N.S., have not yet been action.

Three of the five Canadian bouts took advantage of their second chance to qualify for Thursday's semi-finals in repechage heats on the second day of the rowing and sculling program.

Second-place finishes enabled Canadians to qualify in the coxed pairs and fours and the coxless fours. The coxless pair and double sculls crews finished farther back and were eliminated. A youthful trio of competitors from Sarnia, Ont., improved modestly in the shooting phase of the five-day modern pentathlon competition but still trailed the other 18 teams in a taxing event largely dominated by more experienced Europeans.

Canadians No Longer Wrestling Patsies

MUNICH (CP) — Barry Nye, manager of Canada's team, announced Tuesday that Canadians are no longer the patsies of Olympic wrestling."

He had the figures to back it up. At the 1968 Games in Mexico, Canadian wrestlers won only one bout. In three days of freestyle competition here they have won eight and have two competitors—Gord Bertie of Montreal and Pat Bolgre of Dutton, Ont.—threatening to break into the world's top 10 in the 114-and 136-pound categories.

"Our opponents used to say that drawing a Canadian opponent was an automatic fourpoint win," Nye said. "But things have changed.

"Our boys are no longer frightened by the countries they are drawn against and the opposition is beginning to respect them in return."

Canadian coach Kurt Boese said that even after bouts that have been lost, German and East European coaches have stopped by to congratulate him on the performance of his wrestlers.

"One of our lads lost 16-1 to a Russian the other day," Nye said, "but the Russian coach and the Russian referee came over after the bout to congratulate him on his performance."

Bertie has a better chance at a medal than Bolger as the pair enter fourth-round competition today. He remains undefeated in three outings with two pins and a decision.

Even if he loses Wednesday's fourth match Bertie must drop another decision before he is eliminated.

Bolger has a 2-1 record and another defeate today would drop him from contention. He won his first two matches handily but dropped the third to a Romanian wrestler.

George Saunders of Thunder Bay was withdrawn from competition Tuesday. Saunders suffered cartilage damage to his right knee in the early going and, while the injury was not considered serious doctors felt that he could possibly suffer further damage by continuing. He faces an operation on his return to Canada.

He had won his first match by pinning his Indian opponent

Swimmers Make Relay Final

MUNICH (CP) — Canada's swimming team placed fourth in the heats of the women's 400-metre freestyle relay event today and qualified for the final at the Olympic Games.

While the losers set a Canadian record of four minutes 5.95 seconds, its clocking was the slowest of the eight countries represented in the final tonight.

The East German girls, anchored by Kornelia Ender, equalled the world record of 3:58.11, and the United States was not far off it. The two countries were the best winners in the Americans timed in 3:58.93.

East Germany had the third best time—4:01.63. The 1968 Olympic team set the previous Canadian record of 4:07.2 while winning a third-place bronze. Marion Lay of Vancouver swam the anchor leg.

Team Canada

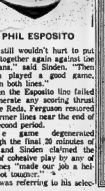
Phil Fizzles Out

TORONTO (CP) — The Great Experiment didn't turn out to be a tactical success Tuesday night but Harry Sinden wasn't discouraged.

The Team Canada general manager-coach hoped to insert some scoring punch in the lineup for their final intra-squad game against the Whites by playing centre Phil Esposito with Frank Mahovlich and Yvan Cournoyer.

The experiment fizzled early as the Whites belabored the Reds 8-2 in the last of three warmup games prior to the long-awaited series with Russia starting at Montreal Saturday night.

And it marked the third game that Sinden's Whites have handled John Ferguson's Reds with ease and the over-all problem was never more in evidence than in the Whites' attack. The losers appeared to be labouring under more than the strain of high temperatures and heavy humidity.



Sinden obviously was outfoxing his assistant by changing lines frequently and playing his three attack units enough time to recuperate from spirited rink-length rushes that kept the Reds bottled up.

Paul Henderson, playing on a line with Bobby Clarke and Ron Ellis, led the attack and was tender Tony Esposito with two goals. Clarke, Vic Hadfield, Mickey Redmond and Rod Gilbert notched the others.

Marcel Dionne and Bill Goldsworthy scored for the Reds on Ed Johnston who replaced Ken Dryden midway through the game, with the Whites leading 8-0.

The Great Experiment had Esposito replacing Stan Mikita, with Mikita moving into Esposito's spot between Wayne Cashman and J. P. Parise.

"Nobody wanted to take any shots," exclaimed Ferguson of the Mahovlich-Esposito-Cournoyer line. "They're three great players, but they'd rather pass the puck than shoot it even with some great scoring opportunities."

PHIL ESPOSITO

"It still wouldn't hurt to put them together again against the Russians," said Sinden. "Then I'd stayed a good game, too, on both lines."

When the Esposito line failed to generate any scoring thrust for the Reds, Ferguson restored his former lines near the end of the second period.

The game degenerated through the final 20 minutes of play and Sinden claimed the lack of cohesive play by any of the lines "made our job a helluva lot tougher."

He was referring to his selection of 18 players, including two goaltenders, from the 35 National Hockey League players in camp to open against the visiting Russians. Sinden disclosed that he'll name his starting lineup Friday night.

Tony Esposito, in line to start Saturday night's game in goal, appeared shaky early in the game as the Whites took a 2-0 lead in the opening six minutes of play. But Sinden didn't find him at fault.

"Esposito had no chance on any of the goals that beat him," Sinden said, "especially the first four."

Six European referees handled Tuesday night's game, two in each period.

The North American system calls for a referee to watch for penalties and two linesmen to keep tabs on offsides and ...

RALPH HUTTON

Pool Dean Retiring

MUNICH (CP) — The daddy of the Canadian swimming team reached his fifth Olympic final Tuesday with the fastest 200-metre freestyle of his 10-year international career. But in the final, Ralph Hutton finished last behind a world-record performance by American speedster Mark Spitz and announced his retirement.

Hutton of Ocean Falls, B.C., 24-year-old veteran of two previous Olympics, was disgusted because he was a fraction slower in the final than in his heat, in which he broke his own Canadian record.

For the second consecutive day, Canadian swimmers were scoring victories against the clock but failing to keep up with the world's best. Even Hutton's slower performance in the 200 freestyle final was almost a second faster than the time that earned him fourth place in the 1968 Olympics.

Hutton said he will compete in the 400 freestyle Friday, go on to a dual meet in Portland, Ore., and then call it a career.

The 24-year-old Giants' right-hander, who pitched a two-hitter against Pittsburgh Pirates last week for his first major league shutout and retired the last 31 batters, mowed down the first 16 Los Angeles hitters Tuesday night before Bernie Carbo broke the spell with a clean double and finished with a three-hit, 3-0 victory over the Cardinals.

The string of 41 consecutive outs broke the major league baseball mark of 38 set by Pittsburgh's Harvey Haddix in 1959, 36 of those coming in his memorable 12 perfect innings against Milwaukee Braves.

Elsewhere in the National League, Montreal Expos nipped Atlanta Braves 4-3, New York Mets blanked Cincinnati Reds 3-0, Houston Astros edged Philadelphia Phillies 2-1, Chicago Cubs downed Los Angeles Dodgers 2-1 and Pittsburgh slugged San Diego Padres 5-1.

Barr, who made 24 relief appearances before getting a start this season, "has earned full-time status as a starter," says Giants' manager Charlie Fox.

Reggie Cleveland of the Cards matched Barr's scoreless hurling until the ninth when Dave Kingman drove in all three runs of the Swift Current, Sask., native with a bases-loaded double following an error by third baseman Dwain Anderson, a bit batsman, a sacrifice and an intentional walk to Dave Rader.

Ken Singleton hit two solo homers in Montreal's triumph over Atlanta. Hank Aaron hit his three runs off the Swift Current, Sask., native with a bases-loaded double following an error by third baseman Dwain Anderson, a bit batsman, a sacrifice and an intentional walk to Dave Rader.

Pittsburgh's Willie Stargell increased his major league lead in RBI total to 101 with his 31st home run and a sacrifice fly in the second that gave the Pirates a one-run in the third inning.

Tiant Keeps Bosox In Pennant Range

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Meet Mr. Excitement of 1972—Luis Tiant.

"I think that he's as good as any righthander in the American League right now," said Chicago manager Chuck Tanner after Tiant pitched Boston Red Sox to a 3-0 victory over his White Sox Tuesday night.

Tiant recorded his third straight shutout and fifth straight victory with a five-hitter.

In his last five starts—all complete games, Tiant, 9-6, has allowed just five earned runs, 21 hits and six walks while striking out 37 batters in that time.

Tiant's latest triumph kept the Red Sox three games behind the leaders in the East Division races.

Baltimore Orioles trounced Minnesota Twins 9-4 and pulled into a first-place tie with Detroit after the Tigers lost to California Angels.

The West race was no less uncertain as Tuesday night's action. Chicago's loss dropped them into second place and Oakland Athletics regained first by a half-game after beating Cleveland Indians 1-0.

New York Yankees beat Texas Rangers 6-7 in 11 innings in the first game of a double-header before losing the second, 7-4, and Kansas City Royals defeated Milwaukee Brewers 6-4 in other league action.

Bobby Grich drove in four runs with a grand slam homer and triple as Baltimore beat Minnesota despite Harmon Killebrew's milestone home run. Killebrew hit No. 536 of his career, tying him with Mickey Mantle for fourth place on the all-time list.

Killebrew admitted his first-inning home run gave him initial satisfaction, but the Twins' eighth straight loss took most of it away.

Rudy May pitched a four-hitter and Leo Cardenas hit a two-run single in the eighth to lead California over Detroit. Frank Freehan got three of the hits off May, including home run in the ninth.

Bert Campaneris drove in the winning run with a double and a fifth-inning single and Darold Knowles combined on a three-hitter to pace Oakland's victory.

The Yankees won their first game as Johnny Callison drove in the winning run with an 11th-inning single. Ted Ford's run-breaking homer touched off a four-run uprising in the seventh inning to give Texas the second game.

Argos Meet Rested Riders

Cahill Keeps His Cool

OTTAWA (CP) — Rested and ready, Ottawa Rough Riders take on their traditional foes from Toronto in Eastern Football Conference action today, eager to deal yet another blow to the winless Argonauts.

But if Toronto coach Leo Cahill is worried about his team's losing streak, he's not showing it. They've lost all four regular season games.

"I'm not prepared to panic," Cahill told a news conference here Tuesday night.

"And I'm definitely not afraid of losing my job."

He told reporters curtly that there was "nothing" wrong with the Argos, aside from the fact that they lost 10 players from last year's roster.

But with his star quarterback Joe Theismann out for another month with injuries, Cahill probably has some quiet worries about the formidable Rider machine which has already beaten the Argos twice this year, once in pre-season play by a whopping 41-7 count.

Ottawa is undefeated in three starts this year, but Coach Jack Gotta is not making overconfident noises about prospects today.

He says he's concerned that his Riders may be a little "stale" after their 10day break and that they may have trouble matching the momentum that has put them at the top of the EFC.

As well, he says the two new quarterbacks that Toronto will play — Wally Gabler and Jim Chasey, have played against Ottawa before "and have an idea of what we do."

"Both of them are mobile too, which are making preparations to handle that."

Coach Cahill says Gabler, who played with the Argos before being traded by them two years ago, "was the best available" man to fill the shoes of Greg Barton, dropped by the Toronto team. The club was in Hamilton with an injured knee.

Gotta is looking for improvement from his leading rusher, Art Cantrelle, who has picked up only 94 yards in 31 carries this season.

But, says Gotta, "Cantrelle will be all right. He was playing when he was hurt. He's a better ball player than he's looked so far."

He said Rhome Nixon haven't been at their best because of little hurts. Now they're better."

Nixon is Ottawa's leading receiver with 189 yards, in 11 receptions.

For Toronto, tackle John Tanner comes off the 30-day injured list to take Roger Scales' place. Scales was traded to Edmonton in the deal that brought Gabler to Toronto.

"These footballs are missing, Coach. Maybe you get those guys on too stiff a diet?"

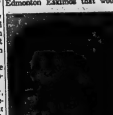
Old Pals New Rivals

WINNIPEG (CP) — Don Jonas and Tom Wilkinson, room-mates on the road when they shared quarterbacking duties in 1970 for Toronto Argonauts, face each other as rivals tonight in a Western Football Conference game.

Jonas hopes to lead Winnipeg Blue Bombers to a victory over Edmonton Eskimos that would leave the teams deadlocked for first place with four wins and a loss each. Wilkinson would rather be didn't.

Eskimos, undefeated in four games this season, have a 9-0 record extending through the 1971 season. They returned to action Jauch said: "We'll just see what position we're in at that time."

Jonas, who left Toronto for Winnipeg and became 1971's most valuable player in the Canadian Football League, has a 3-1 record this season for Wilkinson, who will be calling his second consecutive game for Edmonton.



"He's always been a smart quarterback," said Jonas. "I know how dedicated he is, because we used to spend hours going over films together. What's held Tom back is he's never really had the opportunity . . . there's always been somebody else.

"Now he's with the right club, with the right attitude and the right type of coaching staff. I think he has enough to prove to people, just like I did when I came to Winnipeg."

Jonas and Wilkinson left Toronto when Argonauts picked Joe Theismann and Greg Barton. Wilkinson's next stop was British Columbia Lions. There he quickly suffered a knee injury that sidelined him for the season.

Eskimo head coach Ray Jauch said Bruce Lemmerman, whose shoulder separated in an Edmonton hunting for Wilkinson, is expected to be back in action by October.

Asked who will be Eskimos' No. 1 quarterback when Lemmerman returns to action Jauch said: "We'll just see what position we're in at that time."

Printers Even Up

Rollins Nip Reid Again

Scott Reid continued to be jinxed by Rollins' Construction but Ted Waite was wondering what he would have to do to win last night's second game of the Community Softball League semi-finals.

The Construction's Waite fired three-hit ball for 13 innings last night before Dave Lott crossed the plate with the winning run giving Rollins a two-game lead in the best-of-seven semi-finals. The 1-0 loss was the fourth such losing score absorbed by Quinte's Reid this season, against Rollins.

In the second half of the night's double - header, Howard and Roberts evened their series with Devolin Motors by blanking the Motormen 2-0.

Waite weathered some early inning weakness when Quinte was hammering the ball to the fences where only some good fielding plays kept Quinte off the score sheet.

The stocky contructionmen pitcher gave up only a single to Lyle Sheets in the sixth, Hugh Brennan in the 11th and a 13th - inning double to Reid in earning the shutout. He struck out 10 and walked two.

Reid was touched for 11 hits by league pennant winners, but he came up with most of his 11 strike-outs at opportune times to squelch any threats, until the 13th frame. Dave Lott reached first on a fielder's choice and, then back-to-back singles from Waite and Carl Boomhower brought him in for the only run of the game.

Paul Goodfellow, Waite and Steve Ling each had a pair of singles while Wayne McTaggart and Doug Adams had doubles and Dale Duval, Boomhower and Al Ferguson added singles.

The end came suddenly for Devolin in their second meeting with Howard and Roberts in their remis when Dwight Raitsweit singled to open the sixth, Gary Goyer tripled and an error on John Campbell's ground ball resulted in the Printers' winning runs.

Devolin pitcher Ron Marcale had a one-hitter going up to that point. He finished with a three-hitter as he struck up six strikeouts.

Bob Ebbier fired the win for the Printers, their first of the series, also allowing three hits. The southsiders fanned 11 and walked only oce.

Eric Maher, Dave Rosebush and Tom MacDonald each singled for the losers while John Campbell added a single to the winners hitting total.

The Run That Was

This was it as far as Rollins Construction and Quinte Hotel were concerned in their Commercial Softball League semi-final match last night when the Constructionmen's Dave Lott had reached base on a fielder's choice and scored on Carl Boomhower's single in the top of the 12th to give Rollins the 1-0 win and a two - game lead in the best-of-seven series.

Read Beating Big Guns

Read continued their role as South Hastings Baseball League giant killers Tuesday. After disposing of pennant winning Plane's Concrete in the opening round of playoffs, they hung a 4-2 loss on second - place Melrose last night in the first game of a best-of-seven finals.

Larry Coffey threw seven-hit ball for the winners, striking out four batters and walking three. For Melrose it was Terry McTaggart and John Pepper giving up five hits and seven walks while striking out 12.

Carm Milligan singled twice for Read with the other hits going to Coffey, Pete Enright and Steve White. Glen McMechan's three singles paced the losers with McTaggart, Bruce Pascoe, Rick Meagher and Wayne Harrison getting the other hits.

Pony Club Goes Royal

Five of the Highlands of Hastings Pony Club best Juniors will be going to the CNE Friday and though they won't see any royalty, they hope to return to Belleville with a little royal silverware.

Peggy Peake, Gary McInroy, and Rosaline Brown of Belleville and Roxanne Goble and Nancy Hales of Trenton make up the Hastings' Club team that will be matching pony knowledge against teams from across Canada in the Prince Philip Cup competition for junior horsemen at the CNE Friday.

The local club accumulated enough points from three previous meets to qualify with Baltimore Hill as representatives of Eastern Ontario in the Cup competition.

The Phillip Cup was originated by the Prince himself in order to raise interest among the junior riders and the trophy was brought to Canada last year giving the Hastings Club their first shot at winning it.

There are 14 different games to practise for the competition including rope and tire racing but only five will be involved in the actual cup racing.

The finals will be held Friday morning with the Cup meet held that afternoon.

Can't Make Two

Quinte Hotel shortstop Wayne Woods sets himself for the throw to first in an effort to turn a double play. Woods had tagged Rollins' Doug Adams as he raced to third but he couldn't make the play in time as the Rollins edged the Hotelmen 1-0 in 13 innings to take a two games to none lead in the best of seven Commercial Softball League semi-finals.

Stars Secure Future Early

TORONTO (CP) — Minnesota North Stars wasted little time signing up their players for the future, getting a start even before the 1971-72 National Hockey League season ended.

With the threat of the World Hockey Association in neighboring St. Paul, general manager Wren Blair and coach Jackie Gordon were obviously aware of the threat the proximity posed to their marketable players.

As a result of the early selling job, the North Stars didn't lose a player to the rival WHA. And two Minnesotans—Bill Goldsworthy and J. P. Parise—had added reason not to regret coming to terms.

With the threat of the World Hockey Association in neighboring St. Paul, general manager Wren Blair and coach Jackie Gordon were obviously aware of the threat the proximity posed to their marketable players.

As a result of the early selling job, the North Stars didn't lose a player to the rival WHA. And two Minnesotans—Bill Goldsworthy and J. P. Parise—had added reason not to regret coming to terms.

The veteran winners were selected by Harry Sinden to try out with Team Canada for the forthcoming eight-game series with Russia which should determine, once and for all, the world hockey power.

"Sure, I was a little surprised when Harry asked me to play," Goldsworthy admitted shortly after his goal ended the scoring in Team Canada's final intrasquad game here this week prior to departure for Montreal and the opening game of the series Saturday night. "It's a real honor to play for your country."

The lanky forward, who missed the second galpe with a shattered nose after being clipped in a scrimmage by Jean Ratelle's stick, was still sporting the remnants of a bruise and stitches around his right eye.

"I still don't know how it happened," he smiled, adding, "It really shook me."

Both Goldsworthy and Parise were approached by St. Paul Fighting Saints of the WHA early in that fledgling league's organizational period.

"They (St. Paul) were generous with their offer," Goldsworthy admitted, "but there was nothing in the way of cash in the bank to support the offer.

"I signed with Minnesota for a few thousand dollars less, but I also make bonuses. Besides, the Stars are a pretty good outfit to play with and they represent security."

Parise another admitedly surprised North Star with his selection to play for Team Canada, agreed with his teammate's assessment of the hockey picture in Minneapolis.

"It was too early for them to put money in the bank for a player like me," said Parise. "They don't start throwing around $1 million for me like they do Bobby Hull."

Hull jumped Chicago Black Hawks to become player-coach of the WHA's Winnipeg Jets for a contract estimated at $2.5 million. He was followed by centre Derek Sanderson who left Boston Bruins to join Philadelphia Blazers for a five-year contract reported worth $2.5 million.

"A player like me has to have some security," Parise emphasized. "Then I only signed for two years. After that, who knows?"

Minor Lacrosse Winding Up

Thursday will see the winding up of a busy season for the Belleville Minor Lacrosse Association and the Quinte area will finally have to show their stuff on the floor instead of on the bench.

Trophy presentations and executive reversals will wind up the season for lacrosse Thursday night at the Dick Ellis Arena starting at 7.30 and a scheduled coaches game at 8 p.m. might wind up some of the association's benchmen until next year's program.

Kinsmen Tykes Taste Success

Kinsmen tykes tasted playoff success Tuesday with an 11-9 Belleville Minor Baseball win over Alhambra 109.

Kevin Parnes and Jeff Hayward combined for a six-hit pitching effort for the Kinsmen, striking out 12 batters and walking seven. The loss was pinned on Larry Hanlon and Mark Pearson.

Brad Miller socked a homer and single for the winners while Bruce McFiren added two singles and a triple and Brad Begby a double and single. Brian Cleaver singled twice for Alhambra.

Series Square

Crookston roared back to even their best-of-seven Thurlow - Sidney Softball League finals with Holloway in a big way Tuesday night with a convincing 21-4 victory.

The Crookston win evens the series at one game apiece

Thurlow Sweeps Series

Thurlow BYBP bantams trained their batting guns on Fort Henry Heights to squeeze out a 13-13 Ontario Baseball Association playdown win and win their first-round series in two straight games.

Bruce McDonnell and Brian Masterson looked after the Thurlow pitching, striking out eight batters and walking six. Their batting attack was led by Dave Andrews who collected three hits in addition to playing a standout defensive game. Parley Vader and Brian Masterson added two Thurlow hits apiece, while Boyce and Draper equalled that total for the Kingston team.

Thurlow's next game in the "C" playdowns will be next Saturday against Hagerville or Dorchester in a second-round series.

Missiles Fly Over Decision

MUNICH (CP) — A banana can and countless paper missiles flew in the direction of the ring Tuesday when a Russian light middleweight was awarded a split decision over his American opponent in the first round of Olympic boxing competition.

The loser, 21-year-old Reggie Jones, had opened a deep cut over Valeri Tregubov's right eye in the final round and the referee had halted the bout to permit the ring doctor to examine it.

When the votes were counted, one of the judges voted for Jones and two voted for Jones and the other two called it a draw. But some Olympic regulations judges whose score cards show a draw must vote in favor of one of the fighters. Both picked Tregubov and gave him a 3-2 decision.

The crowd of 5,000 screamed for the decision and kept up the protests through the next three bouts. One of the ring officials was struck on the head by a missile.

The victory by Tregubov, a 30-year-old three-time Olympic champion, was the fourth straight by a Russian fighter and the first defeat in five starts for the United States team.

Nobody Climbs Fence

The National Billiard mosquitoes almost made it to the top of the fence in Tuesday night's Belleville Minor Soccer division finals but their climb fell just short as the Supreme Fence Flyers held on to win the league championship.

The regular season pennant winners built up a 4-0 lead on two goals from Randy Cox and singles from Gary Fredericks and Paul D'anna before the Billiard-boys got unwound midway through the second half.

Mark Crawford, George Moletta and the ever-dangerous Elvis Leonardini scored in quick succession for the Nationals, but couldn't manage the equalizer before time ran out.

CFB Turns Tables

CFB Trenton managed to turn the tables on the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association pennant winners last night.

They battled Parsons to a 2-2 tie during regulation play, emerging with a 4-3 decision on a series of penalty kicks used to determine the winner.

A header by Bill Lucas gave Belleville an early 1-0 lead, but John Cooper's penalty kick evened matters at 1-1. The air base carried a 2-1 lead into half time on a breakaway goal by Chuck Eddy.

A second-half goal by Peter Hillier tied the game at 2-2 before CFB won the issue by converting more of their penalty shots.

In another Charity Cup second round match it was Belleville United doubling Belawa 6-2.

Mario Collevigh and Chris Johnson scored two goals each for United with Stu Hadley and Sandy Duchart adding one each. The win moves them into the finals against CFB.

Sunday, United will travel to Aurora for a six-team tournament which will include teams from Illinois and New York States.

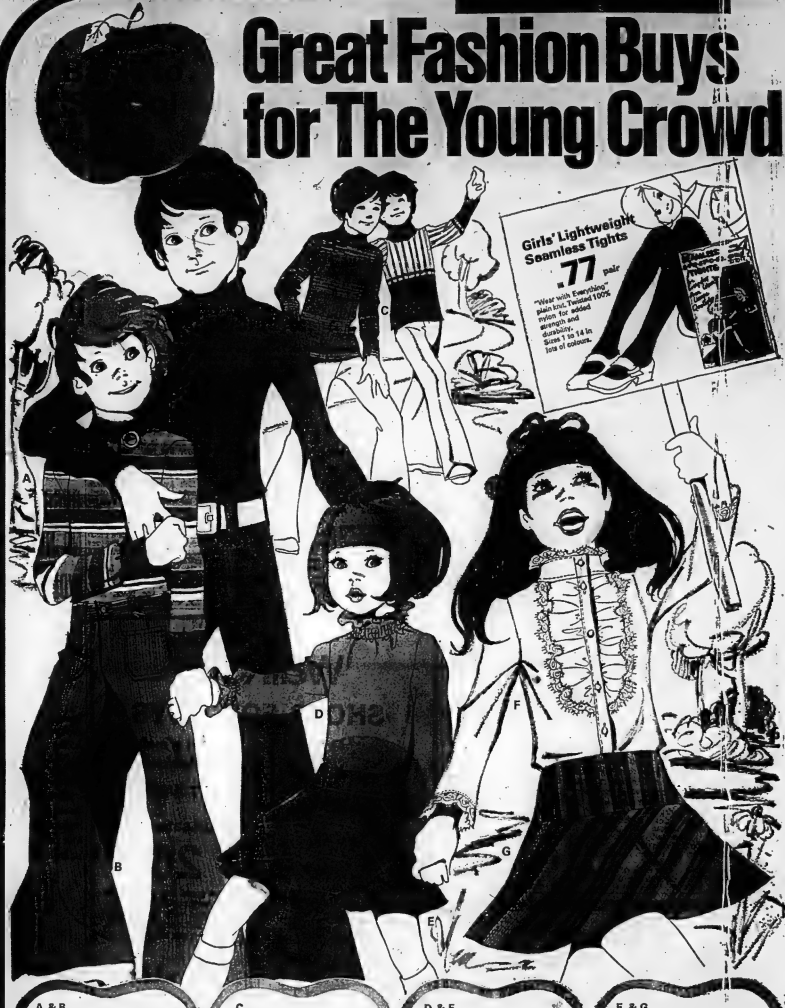
Mead Squirts Best Peewees

The Red Sharks were taken hook, line and sinker as Mead Johnson OASA squirts clobbered them 24-1 Tuesday to capture the house league peewee softball championship.

The win gave Meads a two-game sweep of the final series and brought their season's house league record to 13-0-1.

Tim Soule went the distance for the OASA squirts, allowing three hits and no walks. He struck out 13. For Red Sharks it was Ward Morrison allowing the only losing cause.



Andy Rozali powered a homer, triple, double and single driving in five Mead's runs. Bob Hedge added four singles and Ron Begley three, while each of them stole three bases as well. Steve Gilbey connected for a homer and single and Don Turner two singles and a double.

Ken Bonisteel tripled and scored the only Red Shark run with their other hits going to Morrison and Stokesbury.

Questions And Answers

By The Ontario Motor League

QUESTION: We are planning a trip to Cape Cod, Mass. in the near future. Please give information on what to see, beaches, price of motels, a scenic route there and a fast route home.

ANSWER: The east coast of Cape Cod is washed by the Atlantic Ocean. Along there we have the Cape Cod natural seashore. Established in 1966, eventually it will encompass 27,000 acres. The beaches are reached by paved roads from U.S. no 6, and picnicking is allowed on the beaches in all areas.

Hyannis on Nantucket Sound is a centre of summertime resort activities. Its harbor is deep enough for oceangoing yachts and there are many fine beaches there, particularly Craigville Beach. The Cape Playhouse is nearby at Dennis.

Chatham, with Nantucket Sound on one side and the Atlantic on the other, is a fine spot for fishing. Bass, bluefish, and snappers are caught there. Commercial and charter boats are available at Rock Harbor in nearby Orleans.

Provincetown which has the largest art colony in the country, offers a unique atmosphere and much of interest. The Provincetown Art Association holds two summer exhibits of modern art and the Provincetown Players produce plays during the season. Concerts are presented in season by a Symphony Orchestra. All kinds of water sports are available near the village.

Plymouth is a place of historical interest. It was on Plymouth Rock that the Pilgrims landed in December 1620. During the first winter almost half of the 102 persons brought over by the Mayflower died of exposure, cold and hunger. The Mayflower II, moored at the state pier, is a full scale replica of the ship that brought the pilgrims to the new world. Costumed guides indicate how the passengers lived and worked aboard ship. Open daily 9 to 5. Admission Adults $1, children 50 cents.

Martha's Vineyard is an island about six miles from Woods Hole. Martha's Vineyard is the site of several towns which have long been popular as summer resorts. The leading ones are Vineyard Haven, Oak Bluffs, and Edgartown. Oldest settlement on the island, Edgartown was an important seafaring town in the days of whaling. Many charming old homes still line the narrow streets. There are excellent beaches, golf, fishing and other sports. The State Lobster Hatchery in Oak Bluffs may be visited daily from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Ferries operate daily between Woods Hole, Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket.

Nantucket Island— Much of Nantucket's charm is its cobblestoned main street and its handsome old houses, built during the prosperous whaling days. The island has a famous artists colony; art exhibits are held in the Kenneth Taylor Gallery and in July and August outside. Plays and concerts are also presented in July and August. There are excellent beaches, two golf courses, sailing, tennis and fishing.

Nantucket Whaling Museum Broad Street, houses ship models and many interesting objects of the era when Nantucket was a leading whaling port. Open 10 to 5. Admission adults $1, children 50 cents. Nantucket is 30 miles off the mainland and reached by ferry from Woods Hole on Cape Cod.

Average rate of motels of Cape Cod is $20 to $25 double occupancy in season. For a family it may be more economical to rent one of the many cottages there that range in price from $75 to $300 a week. If the cottage is equipped with a kitchen you can cook your own meals and save a lot of money this way, especially if you have a family. There are also tourist homes whose rates start at $3.50 a person per day and go up to $9 or even a little more.

Scenic route: Take 401 to Ivy Lea Bridge, Interstate 81 to Watertown, N.Y., route 3 through the Adirondacks to Lake Placid, route 73 and interstate 87 south to Glen Falls, route 4 to Try, N.Y., and route 2 east by-passing Bodion on 128, route 3 and 6 to Cape Cod.

Fast route home: Take the same route to the Massachusetts Turnpike, take this west to the N.Y. Thruway, New York Thruway to Syracuse, 81 to Ivy Lea Bridge and 401 home.

Before you invest hundreds of dollars in any encyclopedia, invest 49¢ in a New Funk & Wagnalls.

Before you buy anything as important as an encyclopedia, you should take it home and live with it for a while.

But the only way you can do that with most encyclopedias is by buying the entire set.

Not with the Funk & Wagnalls New Encyclopedia.

Come in and buy the first volume for only 49¢. If you like it, you can buy the remaining 26 volumes (including index and bibliography), a volume or two a week. For only $1.99 each.

Naturally, this makes buying an encyclopedia easier. It also makes not buying it easier. When you sell an encyclopedia this way, it has to be good enough to keep people coming back for more.

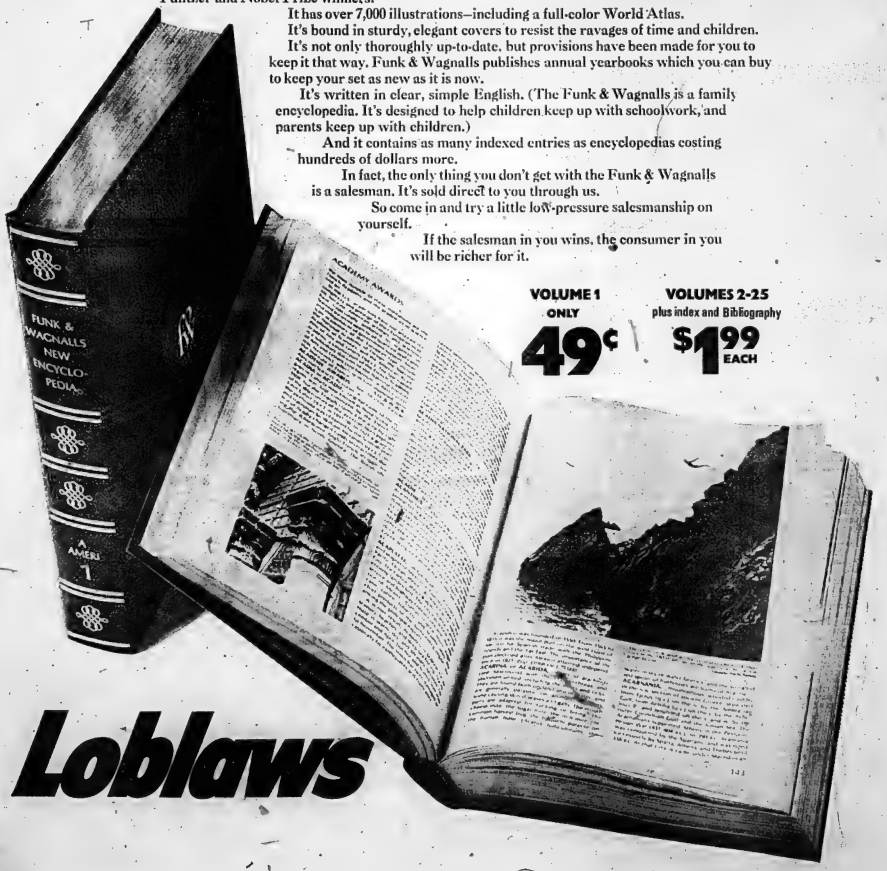
It is.

The Funk & Wagnalls New Encyclopedia is the work of over 500 scholars, including many Pulitzer and Nobel Prize winners.

It has over 7,000 illustrations—including a full-color World Atlas.

It's bound in sturdy, elegant covers to resist the ravages of time and children.

It's not only thoroughly up-to-date, but provisions have been made for you to keep it that way. Funk & Wagnalls publishes annual yearbooks which you can buy to keep your set as new as it is now.



It's written in clear, simple English. (The Funk & Wagnalls is a family encyclopedia. It's designed to help children keep up with schoolwork, and parents keep up with children.)

And it contains as many indexed entries as encyclopedias costing hundreds of dollars more.

In fact, the only thing you don't get with the Funk & Wagnalls is a salesman. It's sold direct to you through us.

So come in and try a little low-pressure salesmanship on yourself.

If the salesman in you wins, the consumer in you will be richer for it.

Washing Facilities Lacking

Peterborough Rent Strike Is Planned

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Three of four families who live in four apartments in a semi-detached building in the downtown area said Tuesday they will refuse to pay their September rent unless washing facilities are installed.

Tenants complained there are no showers or bathtubs in the apartment units.

However, a city official warned Tuesday that two of the families who are receiving welfare assistance risk loss of the rent portion of their aid if the September rent is not paid.

Mrs. Sam Calladine, who lives with her husband and five children in one of the apartments, said her family uses a metal washing tub in the kitchen to have baths.

Mrs. Calladine, whose family does not receive welfare assistance, said she has not paid her August rent and will not pay any further rent until washing facilities are installed.

The two other families complaining of the facilities are Mrs. Ida Campbell who lives with her four children, and Norman Liscomb who lives with his wife, two children and two grandchildren.

Mrs. Campbell, who receives $283 each month in welfare assistance, and Mrs. Liscomb who receives assistance of $68 a month, confirmed Tuesday that they paid August rent, but said they will not pay September rent unless conditions are improved.

Gerry Turner, executive director of the city's social and family services department, said: "If they're not going to pay rent, we're not going to issue it."

He said the $100 monthly rent portion of Mrs. Campbell's assistance, and all of Mrs. Liscomb's $68 monthly assistance would be terminated if a rent strike occurs Sept. 1.

Mr. Turner said: "We are somewhat sympathetic to these recipients. We will be going to see them to advise them of our action to withhold rent."

Dr. Robert MacMillan, acting medical officer of health with the health unit, said he had not been informed of the complaints concerning washing facilities.

"I will have my chief inspector go down there," he said.

Peterborough city assessment lists list the owner of the building containing the apartments as Miss Jean Pelcher of Peterborough. Miss Pelcher was not available for comment Tuesday.

Resources Demand Will Exceed Supply

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A Canadian author and university professor told a youth conference on the environment Tuesday that the demand for essential resources will soon exceed the supply and this situation might lead to the extinction of the human race.

Fred Knelman, said there is still hope for the survival of the world. He said the explosion of consciousness and commitment appeared to be growing more quickly than the factors contributing to world pollution.

"Nations and corporations opt for the short-term returns," he said.

Mr. Knelman said people must become more conscious of living on a planet of finite resources to insure there is a future.

"If we could all decide to live ecologically moral lives we would subvert the system," he said.

Three More Charter Flight Ticket-sellers Close Doors

TORONTO (CP) — Three more companies that sell tickets for charter flights have closed, bringing to 12 the number of such firms that have gone out of business in Toronto this year.

Toronto police said they are looking for two men believed associated with Deltena Air Sea Services Inc., Miro Travel Inc., and Travel Information Centre. The three companies failed to open for business Monday.

Earlier, three other firms went bankrupt, another was dissolved and five others went out of business. Police said they are still looking for the owners of New Air Fare, Charter Travel Centre which closed this month. They are based in New York and London, England.

A spokesman for the Canadian transport commission in Ottawa said almost all countries in Europe are having their citizens stranded in North America because of the closing of many charter ticket firms.

The closures, in addition to others in Montreal and New York, also have resulted in a steady stream of Canadians arriving at overseas embassies looking for passage home.

Airlines Authorized To Fly Home Stranded

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission has authorized Air Canada and several European airlines to bring back Canadians stranded in Europe because of air charter problems.

A commission spokesman said Tuesday that Air Canada, Sabena, Air France and Swissair have been given permission to make seats available on regular flights for these stranded tourists.

Air Canada is switching from its normal DC-8 aircraft to an elongated version of the same airplane to carry 80 extra passengers from Paris today, the commission source said.

A similar aircraft would pick up an extra 80 passengers in Zurich, Switzerland, Sept. 7.

The airlines will be charging about $120 to $140 a seat to the returning charter passengers, the commission spokesman said.

Air France has also been authorized to fly back French nationals stranded in Canada because of charter problems here.

Disputes between charter brokers and charter air carriers have left passengers with out return passage.

PC Regime in Alberta Completing Good Year

EDMONTON (CP) — The first anniversary of Progressive Conservative government in Alberta is at hand and Premier Peter Lougheed can look back on a satisfying year with few upsets.

"We haven't been accident prone," Mr. Lougheed said in an interview, listing teamwork and luck as major factors in keeping the new government out of hot water.

Even political opponents, whose job it is to be critical, admit that the 49 Conservatives—particularly the 22-man cabinet—have shown "a degree of competence" since voters put the Social Credit party out to pasture after 36 years in power.

Mr. Lougheed, the 44-year-old Calgary lawyer who led the Conservatives to their upset election triumph Aug. 30, 1971, said solid accomplishments were possible because he was lucky in selecting his cabinet.

"They all worked out . . . they all seemed to fit . . . probably because we had a nucleus of 10 members who had served in the team approach and it spread."

He said an effort to get all members involved—39 had no previous experience in the legislature—allowed the Conservatives to slip smoothly into office last Sept. 10.

The rookie administration made rapid-fire changes in some areas—tax relief for senior citizens, investment facilities for the handicapped, agricultural marketing and a new tax policy for the oil industry—but tread cautiously in others. Public hearings were the method employed to deal with controversial subjects.

Former premier Harry Strom said the Conservatives' uneven progress was "evidence of their not expecting victory." Their first year was one "in decisiveness, a lack of direction."

The Lougheed team has come up with no major changes in policy, "except perhaps to adopt the practice of borrowing for capital projects," and most of their legislation was of the housekeeping variety.

But then again, Mr. Strom said, Social Credit—with 22 members—was somewhat inadequate in its new role as the official opposition.

"I have to be critical of our side as well. Although we had years of experience in government we found it a little difficult to adjust to the opposition/adversary role . . . to point out things we're wrong."

Social Credit, he said, decided to "play it cool . . . to adopt a responsible attitude . . . but we'll soon be in a stronger position to come out with alternatives."

The most effective opposition thrusts, many observers said, came from Grant Notley, Alberta's young New Democratic Party leader and the only NDP member in the legislature.

Mr. Notley gave the Conservatives full marks for "flourish and style." They even showed a degree of competence, but "made no significant moves on even one major problem."

The new structure within the Conservative party, he said, consists of business leaders, "the aristocracy . . . the social leadership . . . the input comes from people from the right side of the tracks and they don't need the government the kind of information needed to cope with the real problems."

Mr. Lougheed said the Conservatives staked out a new Alberta position in federal-provincial relations, serving notice that the province "will resist the federal presence seeping into every move we make."

The government took a strong stand for a greater degree of consultation, particularly on resource matters. Mr. Lougheed said there have been some concrete steps toward greater co-operation.

Bob Russell, provincial leader of the Liberals, not represented in the legislature, said the Conservatives' first year was careful and undramatic. He lauded the government for holding public hearings on various topics.

Premier Lougheed insisted the Conservatives have been moving ahead rapidly—"We've implemented or are working on 60 per cent of our election platform."

The first year was smooth sailing, he said, but "next year will be a different watershed."

Coming up next year is restructuring of provincial-municipal financing and education financing—including the removal of education costs from property tax—methods to control health costs, implementation of human rights legislation, a natural gas royalty plan and an oil sands development policy.

Growth to Cut Drinking Time

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP) — Residents of this Northern Ontario community will have their drinking time cut by an hour when they amalgamate with Mount Joy at the beginning of 1973.

At present, with Timmins on daylight time and Mount Joy Township, just west of here, on standard time, thirsty patrons of local hotels have been able to squeeze in an extra hour of drinking in Mount Joy.

But under the consolidation, the entire area will have to abide by the same time.

Timmins Arranges Handouts for Bears

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP) — Bears, hard-hit by this year's poor berry crop, will get a last-minute chance to store up some fat for the winter with free handouts supplied by local organizations.

The Timmins Porcupine Chamber of Commerce publication central committee and the Porcupine and district branch of the Ontario Humane Society have arranged to set up six feeding stations where meat and food scraps donated by local supermarkets will be dispensed.

The stations, on private land, will be closed to hunters and sight-seers and the organizers hope they also will help to keep the bears away from garbage cans and houses.

Between 600 and 1,000 pounds of scraps will be distributed weekly for the next two months, after which the bears will begin to hibernate.

Canadians and Colleagues May Decide To Fold Vietnam Control Commission

NEW DELHI (CP) — Canada and its two fellow members may decide within days to fold up the International Control Commission in Vietnam after 18 futile years of squabbling and inaction.

Canada, India and Poland must agree by Sept. 30 whether to adjourn the commission or move its headquarters from Saigon, South Vietnam, to some other country.

Indian and Canadian diplomats here, and external affairs department officials in Ottawa, indicate that adjournment is a likely outcome of the three-country discussions that are to start shortly.

The Indians and Canadians agree that adjournment would spell the end of the ICC.

Sept. 30 is the deadline Saigon has set for departure of all Indian personnel on the ICC including the Indian-run secretariat of the commission.

The issue erupted last January when India theoretically neutral chairman of the commission announced it would open an embassy in Hanoi, North Vietnam, is now also has only consulates in Hanoi and Saigon.

South Vietnam promptly retaliated by cancelling all ICC visas effective in April.

The renewal date was later extended to Sept. 30 for the Poles and Canadians, but the Indians were told to leave by then.

The ICC was set up by an international convention at Geneva in 1954 to oversee withdrawal of French colonial forces from Vietnam and to supervise elections in North and South.

Elections were never held in the South, and the ICC became paralysed by the cold war and subsequent involvement of U.S. forces in the Vietnam war.

U.S. Army Kept Watch On 100,000 Civilians

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The United States Army kept watch on more than 100,000 American civilians and civilian organizations and filed dossiers on people's finances and sex lives, says a year-long senate study on army spying released Tuesday.

The highly critical study—started following widespread reports last year of illegal army spying into the private lives of anti-war civilians—concluded that "the major impression from our long study of these files is their utter uselessness."

Senator Sam Ervin (Dem. N.C.), chairman of the Senate's constitutional rights subcommittee which conducted the study, said that the army cannot be taken at its word that it has ceased such surveillance.

He called for congressional approval of measures to force an end to such covert activities by the military and assure a person's undeferred right to associate with whomever he pleases and to speak out freely in support of unpopular causes.

The report said the army reluctantly turned over its files to the Senate investigators and in some cases only after Ervin threatened specific legislation demanding defence department co-operation.

Files on civilians, often including their finances, psychiatric histories and sex lives, were kept at more than 300 army centres throughout the country, the report said.

The army reported that it kept such files to keep track of possible dissenters in case of civilian uprisings, but the subcommittee's report doubted this.

"The overwhelming majority of the reports pertain to the peaceful activities of nonviolent citizens lawfully exercising their constitutional rights of speech, press, religion, association and petition."

Sharp Reports China To Keep Up A-tests

OTTAWA (CP) — China intends to go on testing nuclear weapons in order to build up its deterrent defences in the face of continuing strategic weapons development by the United States and the Soviet Union, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Tuesday.

Mr. Sharp, just returned from a 19-day visit to China, told a news conference that while in Peking he had an "extensive argument" with Chinese leaders over nuclear testing.

The argument took place at separate meetings Mr. Sharp had with Premier Chou En-lai and Foreign Minister Chi Peng-fei, both of whom resisted the Canadian's appeal that China stop testing and support the international non-proliferation treaty.

In the context of some of Mr. Sharp's other remarks, it appeared that fear of the Soviet Union is perhaps the main reason for China's determined effort to build up a nuclear force.

Discussing China's attitude toward other countries, Mr. Sharp said Peking leaders speak as though relations with Japan can be "normalized." However, he didn't get the same impression with respect to Chinese relations with the Soviet Union and India, which are tied together through a bilateral friendship treaty.

As for Sino-American relations, these were "better."

Teacher Blames Firing On His Stress on Learning

TORONTO (CP) — A Sarnia, Ont., high school teacher who said he was fired because he "rocked the boat" by emphasizing learning rather than marks in his classes is fighting to get his job back.

Joseph Thompson, 54, is looking for part-time work now but still has hopes he will be back in his classroom.

His lawyers will go before the Supreme Court of Ontario Thursday to appeal for a new board of reference to hear the teacher's appeal over his firing.

Mr. Thomson said he was fired from Central Collegiate Institute by the Lambton County board of education April 24 because he was not putting enough emphasis on marks.

The board listed 11 grievances against the English and Latin teacher, which they said amounted to insubordination.

Mr. Thompson, father of 11 children and teacher for 22 years, said that in his classes marks are not the point. "Learning is the point."

Heads Ethnic Radio

McKeough Home, Eludes Reporters

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough arrived back in Canada Tuesday from London but eluded reporters waiting to question him on alleged financial interests in a land development company.

Published reports have linked Mr. McKeough to a controversy involving the subdivision of land owned by a company in which he is said to have a financial interest. A Toronto newspaper said Mr. McKeough, as minister of municipal affairs, approved the subdivision.

Mr. McKeough was in Europe negotiating a loan for the province when the story was published.

Hydro Talks Are Continuing

TORONTO (CP) — Negotiations continued Tuesday between Ontario Hydro and the striking Canadian Union of Public Employees, but there was no comment forthcoming about what progress is being made.

Hydro and the union, which has had 12,000 workers on strike since June 21, resumed discussions Monday for the first time since they broke down Aug. 16.

The union is seeking wage increases of 18 per cent over two years, plus a three-per-cent cost-of-living adjustment each year.

Service is being maintained by supervisory and professional personnel.

Paul Little, Mr. McKeough's executive assistant, was asked how the minister had managed to elude reporters.

"It's none of your business," said Mr. Little.

Mr. Little indicated that the controversy surrounding Mr. McKeough's alleged financial holdings had nothing to do with his return to Canada. He also said he did not know of any plans by the minister to comment on the matter.

Top CNE Steer Sold For $13,132

TORONTO (CP) — Two Ontario men, James McCallum of Strathroy and George Earley of Kerwood, made themselves more than $13,000 in three minutes Tuesday.

That's how long it took to auction off their one-year-old grand champion steer at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Calgary Brewery Co. of Calgary, Alta., paid $13,132.50 for the 1,055-pound beef steer. Bruce Davenport of the CNE agriculture department said it was the highest price ever paid at the annual auction.

A spokesman for the brewery said the animal would be shipped to Calgary and auctioned off again with the proceeds going to charity.

Lewis Backs Call Of House on Strike

WINNIPEG (CP) — NDP national leader David Lewis Tuesday cut short his proposed three-day tour of Manitoba to make plans for a return to Ottawa today for the recall of Parliament.

Mr. Lewis was due to leave here at 1 p.m. today for the flight to Ottawa to prepare for the special session of Parliament Thursday to deal with the dockworkers strike in Vancouver.

He was to have been in Thompson today to tour the underground operations of International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. and had planned to spend Thursday in Dauphin.

He told reporters new he endorsed the government's action in summoning Parliament to end the strike which he said has harmed western grain movements and western farmers. He vowed his party's support for speedy passage of legislation to deal with the crisis.

Earlier, in a luncheon speech to a service club, Mr. Lewis lashed out at the federal system of paying incentive grants to corporations, saying many of these grants are non-taxable and, in some cases, like the food and chemical industry, result in loss of jobs.

His speech here marked the first time in his current tour that he has concentrated on the grants program, particularly DREE, the Federal Agency Designed to encourage industry to locate in have-not area.

Mr. Lewis told his Winnipeg audience some grants and tax concessions result in new jobs.

"But I question that we are getting the best possible value for our money."

He said between 1960 and 1970 DREE grants to the food and beverages industry totalled $19.4 million and were aimed at creating 3,442 jobs. But the total employment in the industry had instead dropped by one-half of one per cent between 1960 and 1971.

Americans Inspect Pipeline at Inuvik

INUVIK, N.W.T. (AP) — Canadian technicians gave a group of about 40 Californians a look Tuesday at two research areas near the Arctic Circle that may solve pipeline fuel delivery problems across land where a spade hole can expand to a trench in hours.

En route to this village 60 miles south of the Arctic Ocean, the group of businessmen, state and city officials, and newspaper editors and publishers toured oil-gas pipeline research centres at Norman Wells and San Sault, in the Mackenzie River area.

The centres are operated by the Arctic-Northwest Study Group, an association of 16 companies.

Both stations are researching new technological means of delivering fuel by pipeline to Canada and the continental U.S. and striving for means of assuring protection of the ecology in the region.

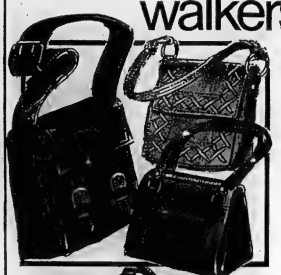
"The land here is so filled with water, so soft, so easily moved that in combination with the permafrost (frozen soil beneath the surface) it slips and breaks up," said Manager Nick Lenstra of the San Sault centre.

"For example, we had some water in a pool near a slope here so we took a shovel and dug a small hole on the rim to drain it. Eight hours later that small trench was eight feet deep, five feet wide and many yards long."

The $4.2 million San Sault research centre includes various methods of testing overland below-ground pipelines, with compressed air substituting for natural gas.

Visiting Russians See Picket Line at Winnipeg

WINNIPEG (CP) — Four officials representing metal-working trades in the Soviet Union, on a tour of Canada, saw something Tuesday they wouldn't find at home: A union picket line.



The officials, guests of their trade union counterparts in North America, the United Steelworkers of America, visited the site of a strike bound Winnipeg plant and chatted with strikers.

Eugene Alekseev, head of the international service of the U.S.S.R. Metallurgical Workers Union, chatted with the head of the striking union local on the picket line.

Later, Mr. Alekseev said: "Striking is a difficult way to settle disputes. In our system, it is much easier to deal with management."

In addition to visiting the picket line at Dominion Bridge Co. Ltd., the Soviet officials conferred with two New Democratic Party cabinet ministers and two government backbenchers.

Two Students Report to Rotary Meeting

PICTON (Staff) — Paul Beattie and Alice Cowan, Prince Edward Collegiate Institute students who took part in citizenship programs through sponsorship by the Picton Rotary Club yesterday described their experiences at a luncheon meeting.

Miss Cowan, a Cherry Valley teenager who was chosen for a United Nations seminar in Kingston this spring termed it "a very informative and meaningful experience."

She said the seminar was conducted by the department of university extension at Queen's University under the direction of Professor Charles Pentland.

Its over-all purpose was to place students in a "near real" world situation involving racism, alliances, and different governments.

Students also were allowed to grow involved in working toward an ultimate goal "one step closer to world peace and perfection."

Delegates were shown a much closer and more concentrated view of the United Nations and its procedures.

Miss Cowan attended the seminar as a member of the Guinean embassy, one of three countries which sponsored the resolution presented at the mock security council meeting.

The 20-point resolution was drafted before the "delegates" arrival by the program director and the university's library staff.

Research was begun at once by Miss Cowan and other students to determine its validity.

Discussions formed an important part of the seminar and included topics such as the economic situation of Rhodesia and its racial problems.

Miss Cowan particularly enjoyed two lectures, one delivered by a white Canadian who had spent several years in Rhodesia and the other by a black Rhodesian who lived a life of poverty in his own country.

She commented on the objectivity of their remarks and said it is perhaps one of the most difficult roles imaginable to cast oneself in the role of the blacks fighting for the Rhodesian cause.

Paul Beattie, a two-time winner of "The Most Scholarly Approach Award" at PECI, was one of 280 students to attend a citizenship program in Ottawa.

He visited the Parliament building and was welcomed by Ottawa mayor Pierre Benoit.

At Carleton University he enjoyed a lecture delivered by the Honorable Lester B. Pearson, a professor there.

At the close of the citizenship program all students were invited to write essays describing What My Home Town Can Learn From the Nation's Capital.

Mr. Beattie read his essay to Rotarians stressing in it the sire differences between the town of Picton and the city of Ottawa.

He noted Picton has a population of 5,200 while Ottawa claims 270,000 citizens although Ottawa was incorporated 17 years later.

The reason for the difference in growth patterns, he explained, is due to the fact that many firms consider the eating's capital a natural location for offices and retail outlets.

Mr. Beattie said Picton lacked this opportunity and has very little to attract people because there is little industry.

He described tourism as the major industry here and mentioned Prince Edward's provincial parks and other recreational outlets.

Ottawa grew through careful planning but Picton has basically grown up on its own. A non - partisan town planning committee could boost growth and stimulate interest in projects such as an outdoor skating rink comparable with the skating area on the Rideau Canal. Mr. Beattie referred to Picton's "blighted areas" and suggested additional low rental housing could alleviate this problem.

Traffic problems here were observed in his essay and he remarked the through highway should be rerouted to the south of Picton.

He noted Picton could undertake projects such as the development bicycling trails in the county on unravelled county roads.

Walking trails also are needed in the county and the poorly marked Quinte Trail does not fill the need, he said.

Mr. Beattie said the trail is difficult to follow and part of it runs through marsh land. He urged its improvement as well as the creation of additional nature trails.

Pollution is a common problem in Picton and Ottawa and Mr. Beattie challenged Picton residents to use organized planning in a full scale anti-pollution drive.

The PECI students were thanked by Rotarian Major A. Robinson who commented that they have served as ambassadors for the rest of Prince Edward County through their participation in citizenship programs.

Ah! The Troubles Of A King!

Steven Graham, seven-year-old Corbyville youngster named king of Thurlow township's playground penny carnival at Zwicks Park yesterday, had a problem. Just as he was about to formally present a bouquet to carnival queen Rhonda Burley, nine, Corbyville, Ranger, the playground's master butted in on the act. At least, the queen was amused.

Playground Idea Works

A playground recreation program which not only paid for itself but had money left over ended yesterday at Zwick's Park.

The raucous romping of 100 youngsters reflected the enthusiasm of all participants — young and older — for the summer project organized this year for the first time by the Thurlow township recreation committee.

Yesterday, a picnic and penny carnival at Zwick's brought the project to a close for its first year.

The program, centred on school areas because of population density, was launched July 1 by the committee.

No funds were voted the project, says committee treasurer Mrs. Diane Genereaux. The $2 registration fees were its sole financing.

Other measures helped. Hastings County school authorities permitted use of school grounds — and interiors on rainy days. The 16 teenage township girls, acting as supervisors all volunteered their services free, after some wielded shops on first aid and arts and crafts.

The program centred on four schoolgrounds — Foxboro, Harmony, Corbyville-Canniton, Point Anne-Douglas R. Atkins. It ran two days a week — long enough since parents had to transport the youngsters, says Mrs. Genereaux. Had more travelling been involved, enthusiasm for the project — and attendance — might have waned.

As it was, more than 150 youngsters registered, above committee expectations.

"We ran it fairly economically," admits Mrs. Genereaux. "We even had some money left over."

The success of the initial attempt makes the program a future encouraging more ambitious.

Mrs. Genereaux says if facilities can be made available she'd like to see the program extended into less populous areas — like Foxboro, Roslin, Plainfield.

Also, next year she'd like to see the young supervisors — who may train in Belleville with the city's recreation department — apply for a federal Opportunities for Youth grant to ensure them some payment.

Montrose Zoning Sought

Residents of the Montrose Road area — midway between Belleville and Trenton — petitioned Sidney township council last night for speedy implementation of zoning schedules for their so-called Country Club Village neighborhood.

The council immediately asked Frank Stokmans of Quinte Planning Board — who was in attendance at the meeting to prepare a zoning bylaw.

Stokmans told the council and a delegation of Montrose ratepayers it would take at least six to eight months before new zoning schedules could be processed through to final approval by the Ontario Municipal Board.

The ratepayers' request, voiced by Tom Flynn of the newly formed ratepayers association, followed announcement that a new neighborhood store is planned for a two-lot site at the corner of Pilgrim Road and Montrose.

Flynn told council residents had bought in the district on the understanding that they would be living in an RI residential community but "we are not against commercial development." He said residents want zoning to ensure that commercial building takes place in the most suitable locations only.

There is no zoning in the area now and Stokmans said "the developer of the area can do pretty much what he wants to."

Flynn said that developer Jack Parrott had put covenants on some of the deeds restricting the land use to residential.

Stokmans said a public meeting would be called once the recommendations for zoning the district are formulated.

Emergency Call Personal Tragedy

PICTON (Staff) — An emergency call to a drowning accident resulted in personal shock for a Picton ambulance driver Tuesday evening when he discovered the victim was his own son.

Drowned at Cove Beach near Cherry Valley was a Picton teenager. 14-year-old Sherman Andrew Clancy Bond, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bond, 36 Queen Street.

His companion, Donald Striker, also 14, of RR1, Cherry Valley was admitted to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital in shock following the accident.

Mr. Bond, operator of Bond's Ambulance in Picton, was called to the scene only to find that it was his own son who had been drowned.

A spokesman for the Picton Detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police said the boy's body was recovered in about eight feet of water.

No details surrounding the tragedy were available from police today and the drowning is under investigation by Cpl. L. Price and Constable Goodyer of the Picton Detachment.

Mashmakhan : New Personnel, New Sound

Canadian Groups Here Friday

The first time Mashmakhan released a record, it sold a half million copies in the United States. In Canada, it became instant gold and the Japanese made it the third largest selling single in that nation's history.

The wheels continued to turn as the group was invited to cross Canada on the new fabled Festival Express train that included such rock luminaries as Janis Joplin, The Band and Ten Years After. A tour of the east lured 40,000 Japanese fans to one concert in Tokyo.

Then the group decided to split. Two of the members founded a folk-style rock trio called Riverson while a third decided to pursue the independent road. Only organist-composer Pierre Senecal was left.

That was more than a year ago. Since then the Montreal-based band has been resurrected and now threatens to become more successful than its forerunners of the same name.

Senecal, along with guitarist Brian Greenway, bass player Steve Lang and drummer Lorne Nehring introduce their new sound to Belleville Friday in a concert at Ben Bleecker Auditorium. With them will be another top Canadian group, April Wine.

Mashmakhan has come a long way since Senecal invited three-quarters of the group called Checque to an exploratory jam session.

"We try to get people where they sit," Brian said. "Our direction is to get people on their feet."

The first Mashmakhan took a different approach, he said. "The old group went straight for the head — very ethereal sounds."

Rock groups come and go like shooting stars and Senecal doesn't mourn the old times — especially with a brand new single, Ride Johnny Ride, climbing to the top of the charts.

"This new group was formed more out of friendship than anything," he explained. "It just happened that the music was good."

April Wine is another Canadian success story. Originally from the Maritimes, its four members now reside in Montreal but their sound is best described as British.

The group's first hit, You Could Have Been A Lady, seemed to spark their stage act, prompting a Toronto Globe and Mail reviewer to comment on their "straight, ahead, fire-all-bombs style."

Now a new number called Bad Side of the Moon is headed for Number One, and the group's future looks rosier than ever.

Belleville pop fans are in for some good sounds now that Kilowatt and Donald K. Donald Productions have joined forces to promote Canadian talent. Lighthouse is scheduled for a concert here two months from now and other big bands will follow.

The promotion team recently brought Crowbar to Belleville Memorial Arena. They have most of Canada's leading musicians under contract and are determined to make sure they receive maximum Canadian exposure.

Record Reviewers A Motley Lot

By MICHAEL BENNETT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

An affectionate look at that devotee of the disc, that stereophonic Sophocles, the record reviewer.

He's wooed, booed, wined, dined, denied, deified and crucified. Sometimes he's a critical masochist, soothsayer, sage and sad sack.

Most of his waking moments are spent under the headphones. He's been known to nod off to Brahms, the Beatles and Blood, Sweat and Tears.

His friends marvel at his record collection, but then they don't have to listen to them all.

His four-year-old son screams for equal time for Winnie the Pooh and Sesame Street.

He's accused of being a frustrated musician, a vicarious pop star, and even a groupie!

The listening public, suffering from a severe case of AM and FM overload, has thrust the role of tastemaker upon him.

He knows what he likes, but it's not the gospel accordiegly to.....

The Rock 'n' Roll Raver: Everything from McKinley Morganfield (also known as Muddy Waters) to McKendree Spring is right on, uptight and out of focus. Fortunately, he has a vocabulary spoken in desperate need of a language methods course.

The Vinyl Valedictorian: He's invariably found in libraries, making quotations from weighty tomes. His critiques are peerless, civilized and antiseptic. The kind of pithy prose usually associated with longhair music when the term was reserved for Liszt and Chopin. He loves the music, but it's fluffy - pia tonic affair.

The Quoted Quoter: Suffers from a definite lack of self-confidence. His reviews are punctuated with asterisks and footnotes: See August, 1903, Rolling Stone for Jon Landau on Van Morrison and includes references to support his decisions to accept or reject an album. He spends $369.42 a year on subscriptions to music magazines.

The Plastic Pathologist: The ghost of Thomas Alva Edison haunts this young scientist. He doesn't listen to the music, he's looking for flaws from the pressing plant, and from gas in the lacquer. He's completely wired for sound and the needle on his $3,512 stereo is always pointing with him.

The music is a spiderweb of sound gently enfolding the reviewer with its far-out, groovy, bon vibes, only to be interrupted by a nasty scraping against the 12th and 13th frets, unless Lester Bangs doesn't agree with the reviewer in Creem magazine.

A bit of England: I'd never even heard of sherbets or cilentos, tabors and crumhorns, let alone heard them played, until I listened to Evenson and Fantasia Lindum (Island) by Amazing Blondel. John David Gladwin, Terence Alex Winwood and Edward Baird bring the music of olde England back to life.

Sweet, soulful sounds: Capitol invested a lot of money and the listener enjoys the returns with the first album by Skylark. B. J. Cook, who once worked with Ronnie Hawkins, and Dewy Gerard take care of the vocals and. David Foster's arrangements are exceptional. Skylark is the best new group to come out of Canada in years.

Undiscovered delights: One of the most talented and unappreciated songwriters in the States today is Randy Newman. He's been writing and singing delightful, inscrutable songs for a long time and Sail Away (Reprise) is just another example of what a lot of people have been missing.

Fun, funky folk: Welcome to Fat City (Paramount) probably got lost in the shuffle of releases this month. Too bad. Bill Daroff and Taff, Rivers have the finest album by a couple of his follies in a long while. And Readjustment Blues should become a classic war-protest song.

Festus Started As A Singer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Festus straightened from a crouch, dropped his guard and seemed to be waiting.

His opponent stepped in and landed two left jabs.

Festus's look of amazement took on a hint of anger, and he brought up his guard, crouched and opened an assault.

Luckily for his opponent, the bell sounded moments later, and that fight in a college fraternity smoker years ago in Colorado was over.

That was one of the first hits of acting Ken Curtis, now a star of TV's Gunsmoke.

It was long before the character, Festus, was born and back when Curtis—in real life Curt Gates from a ranch his father homesteaded near Lamar, Colo.—was a rugged, young 175-pounder. Curt not only was good at boxing but played football and staged strength feats like taking on his Colorado College fraternity brothers one by one and beating all comers at the "tumbleJack's push."

Curt developed his fraternity brothers into a pretty fair group of songsters, and that early effort, along with his ranch background, apparently formed the springboard for a long-start step to Hollywood. He had written a musical and wanted to try to get it published.

"They didn't think anything of my songs," he recalled, "but they liked my singing, and I was put on the staff of NBC."

During the Second World War he enlisted in the army. After his return he joined The Sons of the Pioneers, a representative of Columbia Studios heard him singing Tumbling Tumbleweeds and he was asked to do a series of musical Westerns.

Since then he has appeared in a number of movies and TV series and has produced three films. It was in 1963 that he was asked to join the cast of Gunsmoke.

Underneath the scraggly beard of Festus, Curt still looks much the same as he did in college days. His voice, some lines, but much the same.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (Reuter) — Comedian Sammy Davis Jr., who couldn't even get a room on the famous Las Vegas Strip when he started entertaining here in 1944, has bought a share of the Tropicana Hotel, Davis said Tuesday.

Davis said he bought shares amounting to eight per cent ownership of the hotel but did not say what price he paid for them.

Davis, 46, will be the first black ever to own a share in a major Las Vegas Strip hotel.

He said he will leave for Sands Hotel, where he is currently performing, when his contract expires. That contract still has about 14 weeks to run.

After that, he said, the Tropicana will open an entirely new nightclub, called the Superstar Room.

The Sands is owned by billionaire Howard Hughes.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A Superior Court judge has taken under submission actor Mickey Rooney's request for custody of four children of his fifth wife.

Judge Mario Clinco said Tuesday he expects to decide within three weeks.

Kelly, 12, Kerrie, 11, Kimmie, Sue, 8, and Kyle, 10, have been living with their maternal grandparents for six years.

Their mother, Barbara Thomason Rooney, was shot to death in 1966 by a man friend while estranged from Rooney.

The 51-year-old actor said he wants the children to live with him and his seventh wife in Florida.

The grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Thomason, contend that Rooney has neglected to visit the children often and that the children are happy in the Thomasen home.

WARWICK, R.I. (Reuter) — Rolling Stones Mick Jagger and Keith Richard are due to appear in court today on charges resulting from an airport fracas with a photographer and police July 18.

Photographer Mayer. Joseph Calucci, said last week that the two will appear in Warwick for their trial, but it is not known if they would be here to appear in court.

Jagger and Richard were arrested with three members of their entourage after arriving at Green State Airport on the eve of a concert in Boston.

Jagger is charged with obstructing a police officer in the performance of his duty and Richard with simple assault.

The other three, also due for trial today, are Robert Frank, the Stones' official photographer, charged with assaulting a policeman, Marshal Chesi, president of Rolling Stones Records, charged with obstructing a policeman; and Stanley Moore, a Stones bodyguard, charged with assault.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

THURSDAY, AUG. 31

Aries (March 21 - April 13): It seems that others are slow—their agreement with your plans depends on letting them work things out at their own pace.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Letting well enough alone again is a fine art likewise helping coolest the scatter of yesterday's errors without adding more.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): The closer the relation, the more likely your chances for disagreement. Seek no favors, ask no special obligations today.

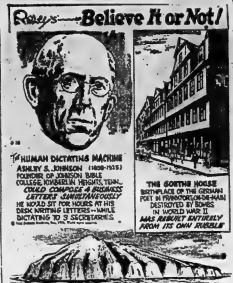
Cancer (June 21-July 23): Select activities needing no detailed co-operation or consultation, go it alone. Give people a break from your sensitivity.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 23): Living beyond your means is fashionable, almost unashamed. Leave friends out of finances so that you still have both later.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take a long hard look at your life, what you are doing and planning to do, your friends and where your relationships are leading.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Going ahead with already thriving projects can be rewarding particularly if you find problems. New ventures run into trouble.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): There's just enough resistance now to make progress interesting and challenging. Sweeping changes are beyond today's scope.



Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Going directly to the point may be more accurate, but likely to precipitate refusals or denials. Side your inc.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The balance between your needs and what you must do to cope with the needs of people near you may be difficult to find.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Any flaw in your planning shows with no time left for corrective moves. You attract criticism regardless of issues.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Now is a prime time for conflict—those with mates have it near at hand, those alone have not far to go to find it.

Preventing Boils Not an Easy Task

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: For about four years I have been having boils in my armpits. My doctor gives me penicillin and tells the to use hot compresses. Meantime I suffer at least a week until it comes to a head and releases pus. I get boils at least six times a year.

Please tell me what to do. I am in good health otherwise and have allergies.—Mrs. P.B.

Boils, a misery, famous back to the time of Job!

The armpit and nape of the neck are common sites for recurring boils, and seldom is there a quick and easy way to stop them. This isn't to say they can't be stopped, but it takes some doing.

Some folks are staph carriers, meaning that they carry the common staphylococcal germ, usually in the nose and often around the groin and genital area as well as in the armpits.

The staph germ can hang around without giving any trouble damage until it manages to establish a colony in a pore, or in some insignificant break in the skin, and set up an infection. That's a boil.

Basic task in avoiding boils, when they are recurrent, is scrupulous cleanliness. Underarms should be kept shaved. The area should be washed with an antiseptic soap or solution. These usually contain hexachlorophene, an agent which should be thoroughly rinsed afterward.

Then an antiperspirant should be used, because it is important to keep moisture at a minimum — moisture encourages the staph germ. (A patient with allergies may have to take pains to choose an antiperspirant that doesn't touch off allergic reactions.)

If penicillin doesn't happen to be sufficiently effective with a given strain of the germ, a laboratory can make cultures of pus from a boil and sensitivity tests can indicate other antibiotics that will act more vigorously. In stubborn cases it can be worth the trouble to do this.

Once a boil appears, antibiotics, heat, and finally drainage of the boil are all that can be done. The real battle is in preventing the boils from appearing.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My tongue has been split for at least five months and will not heal. Is there anything you could recommend? I have used mouthwash, salt, and water, even peroxide.—E.R.P.

Some tongues have deep fissures (cracks) normally. These can accumulate food particles which provoke irritation.

Sensitivity to certain foods can cause trouble, too. I have in mind a patient who had trouble after eating walnuts. So pay attention to what you eat, usually some rather unusual food, prior to the splitting.

If your tongue has normally deep fissures or cracks, mouthwashes or brushing of the tongue with a soft toothbrush to clear the crevices may help.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: It is very important that you answer this letter in your column as soon as possible. My brother is going to be operated on for trouble with his prostate gland.

What I would like to know is will his sex drive stop? He is going through such mental torment. I'm, too embarrassed to ask his doctor.—M.R.

Depends on the type of surgery that is required. For the majority, sexual capability is about the same after the operation as it was before.

If you're too embarrassed to ask the doctor, and he is having much marital torture, why doesn't HE ask the doctor? Sounds like the simplest way.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♥	Pass	3 ♥	Pass
4 ♥

Opening lead — three of diamonds.

A fine declarer does everything he can to avoid or at least postpone, a two-way guess for a queen. He hopes something will happen along the way that will enable him to avoid the guess.

Here is a typical situation where West leads a diamond and declarer sees that his potential losers are two spades, a diamond and a trump. The trump loser seems to depend on guessing the location of the queen, which is favorable, but South has no idea at the start where the damsel is located.

He postpones a confrontation with the issue by ducking the diamond, winning the return with the ace, ruffing a diamond with the nine, cashing the A-K of clubs and ruffing a club in his hand to produce this position:

North
♠A 9 8 4 2
♥K 3
West	East

♥Q 8 5	♥4 2
♦Q 7	♦K 9 8
♣J 9	♣Q
South
♠10 7 3
♥A J 10 8

Now declarer plays the A-x of spades, hoping a favorable situation will develop. As it happens, West wins with the king, and, let's say, returns the queen of diamonds. Declarer ruffs with the king, discarding his ten of spades, and though he later loses a trump trick he makes the contract.

But note that West can defeat the contract by returning a low-trump in the diagrammed position. South wins with the eight, returns to dummy with a trump, but is then forced to lead a spade. East takes the jack. West shedding a club, and West scores the setting trick when the queen of trumps when East leads the queen of clubs.

Tomorrow: Expensive error.

Million B.C. Voters Will Decide Today Style of Wacky Bennett's Swan Song

VICTORIA (CP) — An estimated one million British Columbians vote today in a provincial election widely expected to preface the final chapter in the amazing political career of 71-year-old William Andrew Cecil Bennett.

Win, lose or draw, this is probably the last time the self-made millionaire from Kelowna will fight an election as leader of the Social Credit party he has marched to victory seven times since 1952.

His retirement between now and the next election is a matter of open discussion even within his own party, and if David Barrett's New Democrats, David Anderson's Liberals or Derril Warren's Progressive Conservatives come out on top today, that retirement could come faster than anyone anticipated.

Standings in the 55-member legislature at dissolution: Social Credit 36, NDP 12, Liberals five, Conservatives two. Standings following the Aug. 27, 1969 election: Social Credit 38, NDP 10, Liberals five.

The spectre hanging over this election—with four parties in the running—is that of a minority government, Social Credit or NDP, after the votes are counted tonight.

Premier Bennett himself led the province's last minority administration for a few months after Social Credit smashed the Liberals and Conservatives at the polls in the 1952 election. After being defeated in a house vote, Mr. Bennett went back to the voters in 1953 and obtained the majority mandate Social Credit has hung on to ever since.

It was Mr. Warren, a 33-year-old Vancouver lawyer, who raised the possibility of a minority government by charging into the election at the head of a slate of 49 candidates. Only one Tory ran in 1969.

The Bennett leadership was the only major issue to emerge from a 25-day campaign marked by confusing crosscurrents of non-issues, low profile leadership, heavy advertising and escalating problems for Social Credit, mainly of its own making.

After calling the election July 24, Premier Bennett simply dropped out of sight for the first month of the campaign, announcing he would stump the hustings without benefit of a publicized itinerary or the usual entourage of reporters and cameramen.

The Social Credit leader resurfaced now and then to drop a few election bombs, then vanished again. He came up for good during the final week of the campaign in the Greater Vancouver area, to blast "the socialist hordes at the gates of British Columbia."

In the final few days of the campaign, no fewer than three members of Mr. Bennett's cabinet announced they would be leadership candidates when the premier steps down voluntarily.

They are: Rehabilitation Minister P. A. (Flying Phil) Gaglardi, 59, of Kamloops Resources Minister Ray Williston, 58, of Fort George, and Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, 46, of Comox.

The premier has said repeatedly there is a "no vacancy" sign in his office, but he failed to stifle the flood of leadership candidacy announcements emanating from his ministers, or speculation about his retirement plans from Social Credit backbenchers.

The opposition parties gleefully shouted that there was a leadership battle going on in the midst of an election campaign. The old man of 70 was losing his grip on the party, the wolves were trying to cut down Mr. Bennett during his last harness.

Predictably, it was Mr. Gaglardi, the pint-sized Pentecostal preacher from Kamloops, who found himself in the hotseat in the final week of the campaign as the leadership issue exploded into public view.

The former highways minister was quoted in a Toronto Star interview that found its way in part into B.C. newspapers as attacking Mr. Bennett's leadership. He denied it and has filed suit for libel.

Mr. Bennett said he believed Mr. Gaglardi was telling the truth, but warned that his minister must win his case in court or there will be a vacancy in the cabinet.

This kind of infighting in the camp of his enemies has excited Mr. Barrett, a 41-year-old former social worker who has walked softly during the campaign, wielding a big organization stick in Social Credit's interior heartland.

Mr. Barrett is a political brawler who has headed the party since shortly after the 1969 election. He rallied down-plank after plank in the NDP platform, paying scant attention to Mr. Bennett's polemics about the socialist invasion.

Liberal organizers had hoped for much more of a mud-slinging duel between the two major protagonists that would have allowed Mr. Anderson to come across as a sort of reasonable, thinking man's alternative.

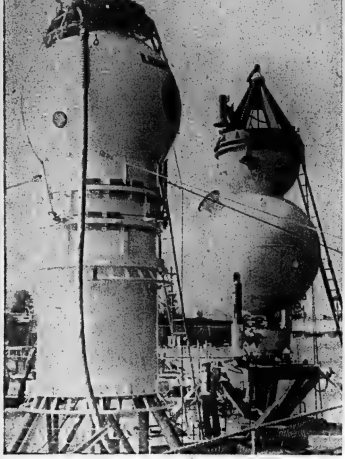
Consequently the 35-year-old former MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, who took over as provincial liberal leader from Dr. Pat McGeer in May, has complained bitterly about the lack of interest in the issues.

The Liberals and Mr. Warren's resurgent Conservatives are locked in a struggle to determine which party will emerge as what they leaders both describe as "the free enterprise alternative to Social Credit."

Mr. Warren is trying out techniques he learned at the knee of Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed, the Conservative leader who knocked off Social Credit in an election in the prairie province one year ago today. Mr. Warren was a member of Mr. Lougheed's Calgary law firm during the Tory rebuilding process in Alberta.

Georgian Bay Plan to Be Unveiled

TORONTO (CP) — A report suggesting ways of planning the future social and economic growth of the Georgian Bay region will be made public Sept. 8 at a meeting in Barrie.



Sam Clasky, director of Ontario's regional development branch, explained Tuesday that the report "isolates regional trends in such areas as agriculture, recreation, tourism, job opportunities, urbanization, and conservation.

"This kind of analysis enables us to distinguish those economic and social qualities of that exist in this part of the province."

Provincial treasurer Darcy McKeough will discuss the report at the Barrie meeting.

Georgian Bay region consists of Grey, Bruce, Dufferin, Simcoe, Muskoka and Parry Sound.

Police Chiefs' Association Told of Law Reform Plans

QUEBEC (CP) — The law reform commission of Canada has come up with tentative recommendations that would force husbands and wives to testify against each other, Canadian police chiefs were told Tuesday.

The recommendations also would abolish the oath witnesses now take to tell the truth in court.

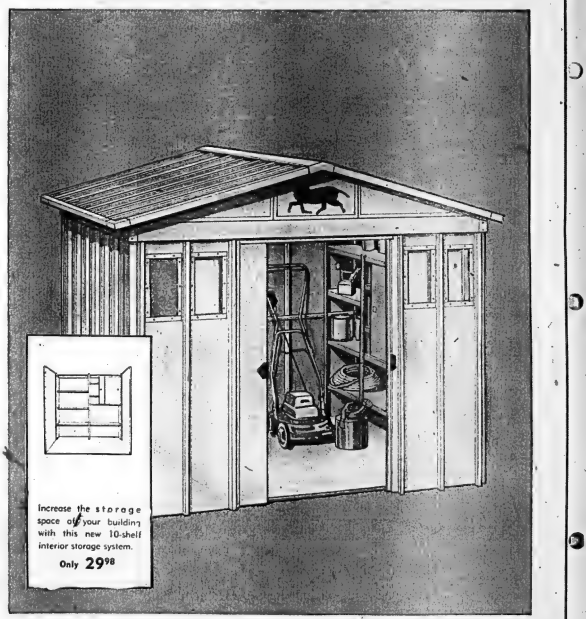
Judge Rene Marin of Ottawa, an Ontario provincial court judge temporarily attached to the law reform commission as a special adviser, revealed the proposed changes at a session of the 67th annual convention of the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police.

Another change would do away with the judge's questioning of child witnesses about their belief in God, their schooling, their church attendance and their belief that God will punish them in the afterlife if they lie in the witness box.

Judge Marin said that under the tentative recommendations a witness would be admonished by the judge to tell the truth and warned that perjury is a serous offence.

He said the recommendations are not final. They could be modified in response to submissions from the public, lawyers groups, police and other interested organizations. The judge said 720 copies of the recommendations were finalled last Friday to provincial justice department officials, Crown prosecutors, defence lawyers and police officials. But they had not been revealed publicly until he spoke of them Tuesday.

Judge Marin said the rule that spouses can not be forced to testify against each other was "based on the impossibility of marriage."



"It was said that if a spouse was forced to testify against his mate the marriage would be dissolved.

"Well, we wondered if society, in the case of a serious crime, has a greater interest in trying to preserve a marriage or in bringing the person who committed the crime to justice."

Trudeau to Attend Toronto Game

98 Seats Taken by PM's Party

TORONTO (CP) — Political implications of the upcoming Canada-Russia hockey series are becoming increasingly evident.

Prime Minister Trudeau, originally scheduled to attend only the opening game in Montreal Saturday, has announced he will also attend the second game in Toronto Monday.

The Liberal prime minister also is expected to be seated close to Ontario Conservative Premier William Davis.

"The first time we knew the prime minister was coming here to see this game was last Thursday," said Harold Ballard, president of Maple Leaf Gardens.

"The total requirement for his staff and security men is 98 tickets," he added.

He said it was customary that VIPs sit directly behind the penalty box.

"We also thought this would be ideal from a security point of view." Mr Ballard said, "but Mr. Trudeau's aides would not go for it."

He said the prime minister wants to be seated at the other side of the rink, directly behind the Canadian bench.

This seating arrangement would put Mr. Trudeau and Mr. Davis in range of the same television camera.

Suggestions have also come up that Mr. Davis be given the privilege of dropping the puck for the opening faceoff in the Toronto match, but Hockey Canada officials have ruled against this.

They said there will only be one puck-dropping ceremony and that will be done at the opening game in Montreal, by Mr. Trudeau.

News coverage of the games is also expected to break many records.

Total media representation at Maple Leaf Gardens is expected to be about 450, 50 more than the previous Gardens record for the George Chuvalo-Muhammad Ali title fight in 1968.

Czechoslovakia is sending three writers, Sweden four and Japan and Switzerland one each.

Five Soviet journalists also will be on hand for the games.

Britain Will Withhold Proposed Uganda Loan

LONDON (CP) — Britain may have knocked another prop from under Uganda's shaky economy with a decision to withhold a proposed $25-million loan, officials here believe.

Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home said Tuesday the loan, which Britain agreed to in principle last year, no longer is under consideration.

Foreign Office sources said the money has been frozen because of Uganda President Idi Amin's decision to deport more than 50,000 Asian holders of British passports from his country.

An official in the Overseas Development Administration said the $25 million would have been used primarily for construction of a large number of new cotton gins.

Uganda has deponded heavily in recent years on income from cotton exports to bolster dwindling foreign reserves.

Britain has supplied about $11.25 million a year in aid to Uganda since the mid-1960s. This aid has not been affected so far by the government's declaion, although it, too, may be suspended unless Amin agrees to moderate his policies.

Suspension of all Britain's annual aid to Uganda would have a crippling effect on the economy since most of it is used in providing technical assistance, such as training Uganda students here for key jobs in their own country.

Since many of the Asians being expelled held important jobs in commerce and industry, this type of training now becomes more important.

She Wants to Stay

HAMILTON (CP) — A woman told a court Monday that she wants to remain with her husband, even though he already has a wife and four children.

Nancy Ward was testifying at the trial of her husband, John Patrick Ward, who has pleaded guilty to a charge of bigamy.

Court was told Ward, 38, married Claire LaDelpah June 4, 1964. They had four children and lived together until August, 1970.

On March 4, 1972, Ward married Nancy Elizabeth Howard without having received a divorce from his first wife.

The new Mrs. Ward had no idea at the time that he was still married, she was also told.

After Nancy Ward told the court that she wanted to remain with Ward, defence counsel Ian McCullam asked for a suspended sentence.

"We've heard from the girl who is usually considered the victim," he said. "She does not sound like a victim or think of herself as one."

Provincial Court Judge Albert Marck remanded Ward in custody until Sept. 5 for sentencing.

Chicago Police Rescue Hostages

CHICAGO (Reuter) — Police killed one gunman and wounded and captured two others today to rescue four women hostages after a two-hour high-speed chase through Chicago's north and south sides.

Scores of police squad cars and a helicopter tracked the fleeing gunmen and their hostages as their car raced through darkened streets and alleys.

Warned by the gunmen that the hostages would be killed if any of the pursuers closed in, the chase quickly developed into a tense, deadly battle of wits with police commanders repeatedly ordering their men to keep their distance to preserve the captives' lives.

The drama began at a luxury Japanese restaurant on North Clark Street late Tuesday night when the gun-toting men burst in to hold 14 patrons and staff at gunpoint for nearly an hour, then herded four women hostages into a getaway car supplied on the gunmen's orders.

The chase ended in a gun fight on South State Street when one of the gunmen—identified as Mike Jones, 17—was killed by a police bullet through the head and his companion wounded.

One of the woman hostages was reported injured.

The gunmen had attempted to rob the restaurant and seized hostages when police surrounded the building.

Landlord Is Banished From Rights Hearing

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — The president of Seven City Development Co. of Sudbury, which is facing allegations of discrimination, was banished from an Ontario Human Rights Commission inquiry Tuesday after he interrupted the hearing with repeated outbursts.

Bud Nikolic, had shouted that the inquiry was "a waste of time" and that he and his company were being discriminated against by having to attend.

The inquiry is being held to hear charges by Leroy Matthews, 27, of Mississauga, Ont., who claims he was denied an apartment in 1971 by the company because he is a black West Indian.

Mr. Nikolic shouted that the inquiry was "a waste of money."

"And all for his black, dirty, rotten good for nothing," he shouted, and pointed to Mr. Matthews.

Walter Tarnopolsky, vice-president of York University, and commission chairman, then banished Nikolic from the room until he should be called to give evidence.

The outbursts took place as commission counsel Sidney Goldenberg was questioning Sana Nikolic, a daughter-in-law, who is responsible for the company's books and records.

Mr. Goldenberg was attempting to find records that would show the number of rent deposits and receipts that were received by the company on Dec. 13, 1971, the day Matthews applied for an apartment.

Mr. Tarnopolsky adjourned the hearing to an unspecified date in October so a complete file with all documents related to deposits can be produced.

Bridge Strike In Third Day

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A one-way traffic flow in a three-block-long stretch of downtown Windsor continued today as a strike by Teamsters Local 880 employees on the Canadian side of the Ambassador Bridge went into its third day.

Windsor police have blocked off the approach to the Canada-U.S. tunnel to provide for three parking lanes for trucks waited to use the alternate international route.

Many of the trucks have been diverted from the bridge to the tunnel. Trucks too large to use the tunnel, including auto haulaway rigs, are making a long detour to the Blue Water Bridge at Sarnia.

Chrysler Canada Ltd., however, is having some 1973-model cars driven from its Windsor assembly plant to Chrysler Corp. plants in Detroit. Some U.S.-built Chrysler products are being driven through the tunnel to Chrysler in Windsor.

The strike was called Monday morning in support of the union's demands for a new collective agreement with the company.

Six Wafflers Quit Brant NDP Executive

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — In a dispute over the issue of the radical Waffle wing of the New Democratic Party, six members of the Brant NDP Riding Association have resigned.

The six, all Waffle supporters, in a letter to the Brant NDP membership, said they "no longer see the riding executive as a focus for our activities."

They said the decision of the NDP provincial council meeting in Orillia in June, asking Waffle elements of the party to disband or face expulsion, "forced us to re-examine our positions in the party."

The six are Dave Neumann, first vice-president of the executive and delegate of the Brant federal riding committee Don Orth, second vice-president Len Padyk, treasurer and Brant riding delegate to the Norfolk-Haldimand riding committee Elfrida Neumann, secretary Martin Senthann, Blenheim Township representative and Brant riding delegate to the Oxford riding committee; and Ed Blackwell, Onondaga Township representative.

They said they resigned so the riding executive could elect substitutes "who still feel it is worthwhile working through the NDP as it now exists."

"Because we feel strongly about such issues as foreign ownership, the resource sell-outs, branch plant shutdowns and women's rights, some of us will work through the new Ontario Waffle Movement for an Independent Socialist Canada."

McGovern Plan Wins No Allies On Wall Street

NEW YORK (Reuter) — George McGovern's revised economic plan calling for $30-billion cuts in military spending and tax reform has failed to win converts on Wall Street.

The Democratic presidential candidate chose Wall Street—which he calls "The Lion's Den"—as the site Tuesday for launching the new version of his economic and welfare plans which have been heavily criticized in the past for being too radical.

The reaction on Wall Street was that his plans are still too radical, but many conceded that they now are much better thought out and better politically.

In the speech, McGovern proposed the creation of a "national income insurance plan" to replace the current welfare system and called for an end to tax loopholes which benefit the rich and cuts in defence spending of $10 billion a year for three years.

But an earlier controversial proposal to give every American a $1,000 grant as a basic income was missing.

McGovern's speech did much to calm Wall Street fears, but few analysts could be found to praise the new proposals.

"Whatever his case for tax reform, its adoption in this form would be very disruptive," one said.

But other observers said McGovern now is proposing programs which would be acceptable to the Democratic party's more traditional supplies of campaign funds, even if Wall Street does not favor the plans.

McGovern proposed an "income insurance" plan that would guarantee $1,000 a year in cash and food stamps for families of four with no other income which he described as an alternative to "the present welfare mess."

In an effort to reassure wage-earners that their earnings would not be threatened if he is elected, McGovern said: "No American whose income comes from wages and salaries would pay one penny more in taxes than he does now."

McKeough Quits Cabinet

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough, embroiled in a controversy involving land holdings by his family in Chatham, Ont., resigned today from the Ontario cabinet.

He said he informed Premier William Davis of his decision in a long distance call to London at 10.30 a.m. today and added that he felt he was "guilty of no more than a mistake in judgment."

But he told a press conference he could not live with the doubts raised of his integrity in the minds of some members of the public and was quitting because "the people's belief in the system is most important."

Demands for Mr. McKeough's resignation were voiced earlier this week by leaders of the Liberal and New Democratic parties after it was disclosed he and other members of his family owned part of a real estate firm which in 1969 obtained permission for a subdivision from the municipal affairs department, when Mr. McKeough was head of that ministry.

The firm is South Chatham Estates, Ltd., which is engaged in a development in the Chatham area.

Mr. McKeough arrived in Ontario Tuesday from Europe, where he had accompanied Premier Davis while negotiating for a $31 million loan for the province.

Mr. McKeough, 39, read from a lengthy 15 page statement, but refused to answer reporters' questions.

"I am satisfied that I personally have done nothing wrong," he said.

"Even my political opponents have not accused me of being dishonest. For this I'm grateful and proud—for there is nothing more important, to me and my family than honesty and integrity.

"However, it is my conclusion that doubts have been raised and that these doubts may continue to be raised so long as I remain in this ministry and cabinet," Mr. McKeough said.

"Those who know me appreciate that I cannot live with these doubts for the months ahead I cannot tolerate these doubts knowing in my own mind that I do not deserve them."

Mr. McKeough said he would continue to represent the people of Chatham and Kent County in the legislature.

"It's a beautiful sunset."

Dave Barrett Premier-elect

VICTORIA (CP) — The New Democratic Party turned British Columbia politics upside down Wednesday in an upset provincial election victory that trampled W.A.C. Bennett's Social Credit party into minescule opposition.

Premier-elect Dave Barrett, 41, led the New Democrats out of nowhere in an unparalleled rampage through the Social Credit ranks as 11 cabinet ministers went down to defeat.

Standings following B.C.'s 30th general election (with one seat still in doubt) and following the Aug. 27, 1969 election:

	1972	1969
NDP	38	12
SC	9	38
L	5	5
PC	2	0

At dissolution of the 55-member legislature July 24 the standings were: Social Credit 36, NDP 12, Liberals 5 and Progressive Conservatives 2.

No one had predicted an NDP majority government prior to the election—certainly not Mr. Barrett, a former social worker, who offered no prognostication at all.

"All my life I dreamed of the day there would be an . . . NDP government—that day has come," the jubilant NDP leader told a news conference in his Coquitlam riding, which he retained by a margin of more than 10,000 votes.

A combination of two major factors appeared to be responsible for turning Social Credit's seventh campaign for re-election into William Andrew Cecil Bennett's last hurrah.

First, there was the re-entry into provincial politics of a revitalized Conservative party led by Derril Warren, 32, a Vancouver lawyer who was defeated in North Vancouver-Seymour.

Although the Tories elected only two members on 13 per cent of the ballots cast, the party's 49 candidates bit off a big chunk of the Social Credit vote.

This allowed Mr. Barrett's New Democrats to elect 38 members on only 39 per cent of the popular vote. The Liberals, led by David Anderson, picked up their five seats on 16 per cent of the vote.

The other big factor was the breakdown of the Social Credit campaign bandwagon, blown off the tracks by announcements from three cabinet ministers—all of them defeated—that they would run for the Social Credit leadership when Mr. Bennett stepped down.

The leadership issue exploded during the last week of the campaign and Mr. Bennett appeared powerless to prevent the flood of speculation about his future plans emanating from his own party.

It is doubtful that Mr. Bennett will sit in the legislature as leader of the opposition. And it is virtually certainty that he will step down as Social Credit leader in the weeks ahead.

The big question facing Social Credit now: Who will succeed him? The three announced candidates, all beaten by New Democrats, were Rehabilitation Minister P. A. Gaglardi in Kamloops, Municipal Affairs Minister Don Campbell in Comox and Resources Minister Ray Williston in Fort George.

Two other promising prospects—Attorney-General Leslie Peterson in Vancouver-Little Mountain and backbencher Herb Capozzi in Vancouver-Centre—also were beaten by what Mr. Bennett calls "the socialist hordes."

Of the three ministers re-elected, only Labor Minister James Chabot appears to pack any real weight in the party's upper echelons and with the former premier. Mr. Chabot, 45, a bilingual former CP Rail agent, was an unannounced darkhorse candidate for the Social Credit leadership Wednesday. Today he is a frontrunner.

The election was a disaster not only for Social Credit in

Gaglardi Loses Seat

KAMLOOPS (CP) B.C. (CP) — Philip Arthur Gaglardi's flamboyant political career ran into a brick wall Wednesday night with the unkindest cut of all—the voters in his beloved Kamloops riding turfed him out in favor of a New Democrat.

The Social Credit minister of rehabilitation was beaten by refinery worker Gerry Anderson, 49, a political novice. Mr. Gaglardi lost by almost 500 votes at a Tory yanked in almost 2,000 votes.

'Fat Boy' Did Well -- Mother

COQUITLAM, B.C. (CP) — "The fat boy did all right for himself."

The speaker was Dave Barrett's mother, who watched Wednesday night in the crowded Coquitlam sports centre as her beaming premier-elect of British Columbia in an election that toppled the 20-year reign of William Andrew Cecil Bennett and the Social Credit party.

It was the fulfillment of a dream for the pudgy, pugnacious leader of the New Democratic Party.

The long-drinking political brawler who tormented the Social Credit party from the time he entered the legislature in 1960 after a stormy career as a social worker, finally succeeded by maintaining a low profile in the election campaign.

Mr. Barrett has kept big lar bor at arm's length since he became leader of the NDP.

One reason for keeping labor and the party separate was his feeling that the NDP could never succeed if it was tied too closely to labor. Another factor has been Mr. Barrett's displeasure after the labor group pushed Tom Berger past him in the 1968 leadership race.

Prophetic Sign

As Premier W. A. C. Bennett of B.C. finished his campaign for re-election, behind his head there was a sign that proved prophetic. The premier's head covers the second line of the slogan — but there were no qualifying phrases required to make the sign accurate after votes were counted Wednesday night. (CP Photo)

The tour, sponsored by the Society for the Advancement of Indian Culture, arrived in Canada last month.

Davis Soothes Business Heads

LONDON (CP) — Ontario Premier William Davis today assured British business leaders that most Canadians do not want to shut their doors against foreign investors but there is genuine concern that "executive direction" over foreign-controlled Canadian companies should remain in Canada.

In his first major London speech as Ontario leader, Davis also said his province will undertake many trade missions, expand transatlantic package tours to the province and encourage more branch plants in Britain and Europe to help offset the impact of British joining the Common Market.

These are only a few of the steps, he said in his prepared speech, to indicate Ontario's continuing desire to do business with this part of the world "even though the rules of the game are changing."

More British and European tourists will be urged to come to Ontario through an emphasis on package tours developed by the province "in conjunction with the wholesale travel trade and travel carriers."

British writers will be employed to prepare Ontario tourism literature.

Davis spoke at a Savoy Hotel luncheon sponsored by Ontario Arnot General Ward Cornell.

The premier told his guests Canada still needs foreign capital. But Canadians do not like to see workers laid off in a branch plant in Toronto as a result of an executive decision in New York or Detroit, "nor do they enjoy the spectacle of a plant being closed down as a result of executive decisions made in some other country."

Too Many Diagnostic Tests

Schools Graduate 'Clinical Clerks' -- Potter

TORONTO (CP) — The quality of medical education was criticized by a medical professor and the provincial minister of health Wednesday.

Ontario Health Minister Dr. Richard Potter said medical schools graduate doctors who are "no more than clinical clerks."

Dr. George Miller, professor of medicine an director of research in medical education at the University of Illinois college of medicine, told the closing session of the PanAmerican Conference on Medical Education that medical education fails to prepare students for a rapidly changing medical world.

He said medical students are selected more often by tests that predict whether they will survive in medical school rather than whether they will make good doctors.

Earlier, Dr. Potter criticized medical schools for training students to rely on diagnostic tests and drugs too much.

"I question if it takes six, eight or 10 years at a cost to the public of up to $100,000 to do no more than graduate clinical clerks," he said at a noon luncheon of the conference.

The health minister said there is some evidence that with the introduction of health insurance the quality of care may be deteriorating.

He said he is concerned when he goes to hospitals notes a diagnosis of abdominal pain, and then sees every dram test ordered for the pati

"It is necessary for a doctor to order all the tests in the book, then have them interpreted for him and then prescribe a pill produced by a pharmaceutical house that has brainwashed him into using it by providing it free . . . I question the quality of the pharmacology taught in medical school. I wonder if they know what is in pills and the quality of pills," he said.

Police Revise Tickets

Local police forces are issuing traffic tickets in a different manner following a ruling by Judge J. C. Snowdon in provincial court Monday.

Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police have decided to delete a contentious phrase from the uniform traffic ticket when giving tickets for offences other than speeding.

City police, meanwhile, have gone back to the long summons used before the standard ticket was introduced last October 1.

Judge Clendenning ruled the ticket was invalid for offences other than speeding on the grounds that it was "duplicitous". He said wording of the ticket did not specify the charge in those cases — more than 200 of which are listed under the Highway Traffic Act.

An OPP official said today: "Our directions are that we can cross out (the speeding portion of the ticket) or we can write out a regular information form.

The long summons would be issued when the offence did not warrant an on the spot ticket, he said.

Deputy chief Harold Reid of the Belleville Police Department, said city constables will issue the old summons by mail, at least until Chief Dougan's Chief returns Friday from a police convention in Quebec City.

In Kingston, John Sampson Crown Attorney for Frontenac County, has given instructions for city police to delete the word "speeding" when issuing tickets for offences other than speeding.

B.C.

British Columbia, but also for the movement founded by Mayor C. H. Douglas and William Aberhart of Alberta in the 1930s.

The defeat of the Bennett government came one year to the day after the country's only other Social Credit administration was beaten by the Conservatives in Alberta.

With so many cabinet ministers gone, a leader who in all probability will retire and no real muscle left in the Social Credit front bench, party organizers will have a difficult time putting the pieces back together.

The Tories in B.C. also face some difficult decisions in the weeks ahead, after the party's losing to New Democratic Colin Gabelmann in a riding formerly held by a Liberal, Mr. Warren, a protege of Tory Premier John Robarts, called Mr. Barrett "Mr. Bennett's age had become an issue and the last-minute appearance of the party's leadership had no effect on the eventual outcome."

Mr. Warren, who had promised early in the campaign he would step down as party leader if defeated in his home riding, now says he'll spend a month thinking things out.

The two Conservatives elected were D. C. Worden of Alice in Oak Bay and Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich in Saanich and the Islands. Dr. Wallace was elected as a Social Credit in Peace River in the party in 1971 to sit as an independent, then joined the Conservatives this spring.

The Conservatives could increase their Parliamentary position to three members when returns from the Peace River South riding are completed. Don Marshall, another Social Credit defector who joined Mr. Warren's party, trailed Social Credit's Don Phillips by a slight margin when counting halted for the night Wednesday.

Mr. Anderson, 32, a former foreign service officer, made it into the legislature by the skin of his teeth on the fourth and last ticket-splitting by voters in the two-member Victoria riding.

He defeated Industrial Development Minister Wesley Stiliwell-Hodgins, whose Social Credit colleague mate, Newell Maryson, topped the ballot with 16,000 votes. Mr. Anderson won on the third at 9,231 and Mr. Stilling third with 9,200.

Once again it was the two Conservative candidates who got Mr. Anderson elected. They pulled down almost 19,000 votes between them—votes that likely would have gone in large measure to Social Credit had the two Conservatives been running.

The Liberals' share of the popular vote dropped from 19 per cent in 1969 to 16 per cent this time—dangerously close to the Conservatives' 13 per cent.

The Liberals held their seat in dual-member Vancouver Point Grey, in North Vancouver-Capilano and in West Vancouver-Howe Sound. They traded North Vancouver Lonsmour for Mr. Anderson's Victoria seat.

With 93 per cent of the votes counted Wednesday night, the number of ballots recorded and ready was a record 1,073,652. Highest previous turnout was in 1969, when 996,804 people cast ballots. In 1969, the vote was 979,266. There were 1,334,416 eligible to vote Wednesday.

Total party votes with 100 votes in brackets: NDP 391,326 (331,813); SC 325,698 (437,777); Liberals 164,085 (186,235); PC 124,650 (1,087).

Of the 18 members elected with Mr. Bennett when Social Credit formed its first majority government 20 years ago by defeating the Liberals of Byron (Boss) Johnson, none was left following the NDP sweep.

Bert Price, onetime party whip, was defeated in Yale-Vancouver-Burrard. Highway Minister Wesley Black lost in Nelson-Creston. Mr. Bagshaw lost in Kamloops, and Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford was defeated in Omineca.

All 12 NDP incumbents were returned. The NDP also elected five women and the first two black members of the legislature—former professionals football player Emery Barnes in Vancouver-Centre and Rosemary Brown in Vancouver-Burrard.

What kind of legislation can British Columbians expect from the premier and his new administration? Government automobile insurance; repeal of B.C.'s controversial labor legislation, collective bargaining rights for civil servants, a guaranteed pension of $200 a month for senior citizens, increased corporation taxes, legislation to control parties election campaign expenses.

Agnes Caused High Water

The United States department of commerce has come up with the explanation for unusually high water levels on Lake Ontario this year.

Hurricane Agnes is the culprit, say the Americans.

Lake Ontario and its basin which includes the Bay of Quinte) received 100 per cent above normal rainfall in June, and Agnes brought more in July. Normal June rainfall is about 3.42 inches; this year the lake basin got 6.65 inches. Because the St. Lawrence River couldn't handle this excess of water the levels rose and didn't peak until late July.

The rapid rise in the level of the lake and bay in April and May, compared to 1971, was due to above normal rain and snow during the preceding months.

Agnes had a similar, but not as dramatic, effect on Lake Erie. However, the increased water flow at the Lake Erie compounded Lake Ontario's problems.

The peak water level in the Bay of Quinte lasted until mid-August, say waterfront property owners. In the past two weeks the water level in Belleville harbor has dropped about eight inches.

The water levels are expected to continue their decline to the usual winter low.

Treasure Still There?

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority's Macaulay Mountain project was the "plant's tombstone" could be the hiding spot for gold stolen in 1823 from a county settler.

The scenic conservation area, once owned by rescued William Macaulay, was the location for a notorious treasure hunt in 1824 when a Kingston prisoner claimed the money taken from lumberman Simeon Washburn was buried there.

The book The County, written in 1967 by Janet and Richard Lunn, states that the money was stolen from Mr. Washburn in the autumn of 1823 while he and his wife were attending church.

A man named Joe Smith who had hired at Mr. Washburn's store for several nights before the robbery, was blamed by Hollowell township residents susceptible on the theft.

Approximately one year after the money was stolen, Mr. Washburn received a letter from a prisoner at Kingston jail who claimed his friend had taken the money and confided its hiding place to him.

The convict, who signed himself Nathan D. W. Osborn said his friend had told him' about the money because he was in jail and expected a sentence in state's prison.

"He rote to me and said that he had left all the silver that he took from you deposited not far from your place he gave me the description and decired me for to go and see if I could find it. I never made the search yet for it and one expect it as he told me I will now give you the description as he rote them to me and it will not be much trouble for you to go and see."

The rather confusing instructions which followed referred to a stream, a leaning elm tree and a large rock as landmarks in the search.

When Simeon Washburn received this letter, Picton residents excitedly agreed the money must be buried at the giant's tombstone and joined in a massive treasure hunt to unearth it.

The money was never found although many searches followed.

Swine Yard To Close

Swine raisers in Lennox and Addington county are raising hell because the provincial road that the assembly yard operated by the Newburgh pork producers is being closed this fall.

When the Newburgh yard closes, area pig raisers will have to haul their hogs to either Madoc or Picton.

In former years between 100 and 200 hogs a week would be handled each week at the Newburgh assembly yard.

But in recent years the number of hogs has declined steadily to the point that in some weeks the yard has received less than two dozen hogs and the costs of operation became prohibitive.

Operation of the Newburgh livestock sales barn in the same location will not be affected by the closing of the hog assembly yard.

Swimmers Get Awards

About 175 young swimmers plus scores of parents converged on the Kinsmen Pool on Dundas East last night for the season's second and final swim award presentations.

The pool closes to the public this Friday.

Rows of swimmers from toddlers to teens trailed up in an informal podium to receive their proficiency medals. Pool authorities indicated more than 500 young people took swimming lessons at the Bell Hill pool this year.

Kinsmen say it cost $10,000 to operate the pool for the two summer months. A new filter system was installed and has recently been installed.

Royal lifesaving tests will be conducted on Saturday but for the 100 beginners, 35 juniors, 28 intermediates and 15 senior swimmers "is it night's ceremony at the pool marked the end of their programs of achievement in the water.

The beginners' program at the pool is directed by one while for other courses there is a small fee.

Geese to be Protected This Year

Shooting of geese in the vicinity of what was become a prime Quinte district wildlife management area has been "prohibited by the department of natural resources.

The ban was announced 40-day as duck-hunting locations were allocated after Camden East Lake, 15 miles north of Napanee.

The lake has been under development for the past two years as a bird sanctuary and wildlife area and has drawn much attention from birdwatchers and the general public, officials at the department's Napanee district offices report.

The ban covers the lake and its immediate vicinity and is designed to protect efforts to raise a large flock of Canada Geese on the lake. In an initial effort to establish the flock, wildlife officials collected and transported goslings into the area from Toronto island.

"It's very important that these birds be protected," said a department spokesman today.

Yesterday the names of 40 hunters seeking hunting locations on the lake for the opening day of duck-hunting season — Sept. 23 — were drawn at Napanee. Application were received from marksmen in an area from Frankford to Kingston.

Regulations call for the hunters to build their hunting blinds in areas allocated by Sept. 15. If the shelters are not in place by that time, the locations will be offered to other applicants.

After opening day, the shooting locations are available to hunters on a first-come-first served basis.

Development of the area took years of groundwork involving land acquisition and rights-of-way around the lake — where shallow water and marshy shorelines were ideal for a sanctuary project.

In the past two years its presence has become widely known. Installations now include a viewing platform from which the public may scan the area.

Response so far has shown "people have become very interested in the project," said the department official.

For the Birds: Camden East Lake Emerges As Wildlife Area

Mohawks Decline New Nose Count

TYENDINAGA RESERVE — This is the only municipality in the Quinte district which will not be enumerated for new Ontario local government voting lists.

The reason: There's no need for it, since the reserve elects its own council under the federal Indian Act, says Chief Earl Hill.

Starting Sept. 5, enumeration will be held in local municipalities to draw up voters' lists that are not based on property qualifications. This is in keeping with new Ontario legislation.

The door-to-door enumeration will last 10 days, says provincial regional assessment commissioner Leighton Thompson, at Trenton, whose office will supervise assembly of the new voting lists for local municipalities.

He says the service was offered the Tyendinaga Mohawks but its reserve council refused.

Chief Hill says since reserve elections are held under federal legislation, there would be no purpose in such an enumeration.

At present the Indian Act has not been changed and all persons 21 years and over, resident on the reserve, may vote to elect its council and chief every two years.

The voting age in federal elections already has been lowered to 18 years. Chief Hill says Indian groups — including the Association of Allied and Iroquois Indians, to which the Mohawks belong, is working on proposals to amend the Indian Act.

By 1973, when the next local council election is held on the reserve, the act may have been changed to permit the younger voting age group, said the chief. 1

Six-day Bike Races Real Test

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Roaring '20s and the Dirty '30s were the heyday of the flapper, the Lindy Hop and Charleston and the sporting event that captured the interest of both the common people and the elite in North America—the six-day bicycle race.

The six-day bicycle race was a sporting phenomenon perhaps unmatched in history. People would pack the wooden benches of an arena to watch teams of two drivers circle around and around at speeds of up to 30 miles an hour on a high-banked track.

There was no stopping, riders whirring high up on the banked bends then shooting down into the straightaway, on a race to nowhere for six days and nights.

People would wander in off the streets, plunk down their admission and watch for minutes, or hours, or even days. The drivers circled the track, sometimes accelerating in bursts of speed for several laps in the technique known as "jamming" or slowing almost to a stop in slack periods, often in the early hours of the morning with no one to watch but the cleaning women mopping up after the crowds of the evening before.

The European teams, men like Gustav Killian and Heinz Vogel of Germany, Piet Van Kempen of Holland or France's Jules Audy, were attractions, but perhaps the greatest pair were the brother team of Doug and William Peden of Victoria.

Both Doug, now 55, and William, known as Torchy, 63, were stars in many sports, but it was in bicycle racing that they achieved their greatest fame. Both are enshrined in the British Columbia Sports Hall of Fame.

Torchy is a six-day impartial. His world record of 28 wins in the gruelling races lasted 28 years, until it was finally snapped in 1963 by Rik van Steenbergen of Belgium.

Doug, now sports editor of the Victoria Times, was his brother's partner in six of these races and competed in several others before finally retiring.

Torchy went on to compete until the late 1940s, with a succession of partners. Then he left the sport to work in a sporting goods firm in Chicago.

Torchy will officially open the National Road Race Championship in Burnaby, B.C., July 30. The champion ship, a 112-mile test over the streets of the Vancouver suburb, is the last Olympic trial event before the Canadian cycling team is named to compete in the Olympics at Munich.

In an interview, Torchy recalled the problems he had in the six-day races.

Both he and his brother were over six feet, with Torchy weighing about 225 pounds in prime condition and Doug about 200. Their burly frames made them instantly recognizable in contrast to the other racers, most of whom were whippet-lean.

"I guess the career wouldn't have been possible if I hadn't met Toronto race manager William MacMorton on a trip east in 1928," Torchy recalled.

"Weight was a problem, but MacMorton got interested and we worked together at developing new ideas to handle my weight, such as a shortened wheelbase and the rake of the fork."

The revamped bike must have been a success, as Torchy won a place on the Canadian team competing in the cycling events at the Olympics in Amsterdam in 1928. Pool poisoning combined with two tire punctures at crucial periods knocked him out of the medal hunt. He then coached the Canadian cyclers in 1932 and 1936.

The six-day bicycling craze was never the same after the start of the Second World War, although there were attempts to revive interest in North America in the 1940s. But memories of two of Canada's greatest international sports stars still linger today.

Manx Have It Made

DOUGLAS, Isle of Man (AP) — This island in the Irish Sea midway between Liverpool and Belfast was known a few years back as a quaint tourist spot with international motorcycle races, tailless cats, horse-drawn and birch-whipping of wayward youth.

Today, thanks to easy taxes, it is getting a new image as a haven for the retired and wealthy. It has become a centre of first-rate banks, insurance companies and brokerage houses.

Preparing for association with the European Common Market through Britain, the self-governing island is determined to keep preferred tax status for its 50,000 citizens.

So far, the Isle of Man has been accepted by the market as a special case. People hope that settles the question. "I think we are too small for Europe to worry much about us," one official commented.

Residents are proud both of their British past and of their long tradition of local autonomy.

While British, they want it clear they are not English, Welsh, Scottish nor Irish. They are Manx. They boast the world's longest continuing Parliament, dating to the 10th century.

Many of the newcomers are Britons from former colonial posts wanting to retire on low taxes. During the Mau Mau crisis, more than 200 applications for residence were received from the Britons living in Malta or planning to retire there.

For more than a decade the maximum income tax has been fixed at 22% per cent. Britons, compared to England's standard since the rate of nearly twice that and up rises to 97 per cent for incomes over $34,000 a year. Dedu ct ions are generous and many Manx pay no taxes at all.

London is only 55 minutes by air and there are no passport or customs controls. Some 1,111 residents of the Isle of Man find no obstacles to spending most of their time elsewhere.

Christy Hopeful

TORONTO (CP) — In the world of equestrian competition, Canada has "a certain stigma" to overcome and a petite beauty from Indonesia is helping her overcome it.

"The image of Canada is cowboys and Indians, horse hunters and rodeo riders," says Christilot Hanson, Canada's best woman of the year and candidate for dressage honors at the Olympic Games in Munich this summer.

Christy, 25, was born in Batavia and began riding here at the age of 10. Despite her youth, Munich will be her third Olympics.

She claimed her place in international rankings last year in Calli, Colombia, where she twice mounted the Pan-American Games podium to receive a gold medal—one as individual dressage champion and the other as a member of the championship dressage team.

Christy was 17, a year under the minimum age for competitors, when she went to the Olympics in Tokyo in 1964. She had to get special permission to compete and, despite her lack of experience, finished 20th out of 30.

Since then, Christy's talents —and the stature of Canada's equestrians as a whole—have matured rapidly.

"I discovered that in international competition you need great nerves and you must be prepared to stand on your own self at all times," she says.

She firmly believes the "horse-hunter" image is changing.

"At Calli we were able to judge our progress and by Bertina Chile for the first time, we showed it was substantial."

Dressage has a lot in common with figure-skating, Miss Hanson says.

"The rider has to memorize a written test of approximately 30 different movements and perform them in a 20- by 60-metre area before a panel of five judges.

"Like figure-skating, dressage is most difficult in judging. There is no clear-cut decision as in jumping or racing. It's all in the judges' opinions."

Among Canada's problems have been the lack of good horses and a dearth of Canadian judges of international calibre. The picture is brightening because of the success of Christilot Hanson and her fellow riders.

Commercial sponsorship of various competitions is helping raise standards by making prize money available for more events. This in turn makes it possible for owners — often not the riders—to buy better horses and encourage more riders to compete at higher levels.

Canada's top equestrian mounts are mostly imports and mainly thoroughbreds, sometimes temperamentally unsuited to the exacting requirements of dressage competition.

"We are beginning to consider more and more that it's only a start and it takes four to six years to develop a horse for Olympic competition," Christilot says.

Basic dressage is the basis of all equestrian disciplines and it is obedience training that every horse should have in its first year. This is understood in Europe, but it is only beginning to be understood here.

Bulls Test Men

PAMPLONA, Spain (AP) — "Look out!" cries Governor, Federico Gerona de la Figuera. A few pounds overweight but still nimble at 47, he leaps to the fence as a half ton of fighting bull roars by.

Eight days of every year thousands of men, young and old, go through similar evasive actions to escape the horns of six fighting bulls as they pound through Pamplona's streets. It is called the Festival of San Fermin, and also the running of the bulls.

Gerona does not participate—unless he gets caught out by accident. But he acknowledges unofficially that he has lured men to test their courage on cowardice, called to Estland's standard since the festival began centuries ago.

Pamplona's running of the bulls was popularized by Ernest Hemingway. It has grown annually since the '20s, lubricated by wine, legend and luck. It seldom rains during San Fermin.

This year's festival ended with only four hospital cases.

Seven persons have been gored to death since 1900. The last death was in 1969.

"It is very dangerous," says Gerona, who is a doctor.

"Considering the circumstances it is a wonder more people are not hurt."

Only those clad in white pants, white shirt and wearing a red scarf around the waists and a red kerchief at the neck are corralled genuine runners. But it takes more than a uniform.

A 16-year-old veteran explains the technique: "I wait in a doorway on Estafeta Street. When the bulls get near, I run out in front of them, always looking back over my shoulder. I only do this for 20 or 30 metres but that's plenty."

Hundreds of spectators watch safely from balconies above. The word spreads quickly when one bull becomes separated and panicked.

Another danger is that with so many runners in the street a fall means a human pileup. This happened this year at the entrance to the bull ring. The bulls turned around—and the 30 prized persons fled to be treated for light injuries.

Timber Cutting Limited

MANILA (AP) — Stunned by the extent of damage in the worst flooding in recent memory, the Philippines government says it will crack down on the nation's hard-to-control timber industry.

"I will not issue any timber licences to anyone—under any pretext," President Ferdinand E. Marcos said angrily, after vast areas never before believed were left under several feet of water in storms that left 30 dead in the lands in July.

Agriculture Secretary Arture Tanco Jr. estimated that easily half of the flood damage was due to indiscriminate logging.

Trees' roots hold down soil and help it absorb water. When trees are cut, the soil is left loose, ready to be washed away by the next hard rain.

Backed by the president, Tanco suspended eight logging permits and said 120 permits that expired last year won't be renewed.

The government says uncontrolled logging in the Philippines' lush forests is stripping away more than 600,000 acres a year. Tanco said it will take "$1 billion and three generations" to repair present damage.

Powerful logging interests stand in the way of proposed reforms. Wood based industries employ 150,000 persons and bring in $250 million in exports annually.

Another problem is uneducated peasant farmers who do slash and burn farming, leaving behind ugly, scarred land when it will no longer produce crops.

The agriculture department has 678 forest rangers. Tanco says he needs 4,000.

Philippine law requires loggers to replant two trees for every one they cut but Tanco says: "This law is being violated like nobody's business."

The Far Country

In an article in The Canadian Geographical Journal, N. L. Nicholson provides some interesting population statistics.

Mr. Nicholson refers to the marked concentration of population along the southern margin of the country. This belt covers 439,000 square miles or 12 per cent of the total area and supports some 16 million people.

In other words 80 per cent of the people live on 12 per cent of the land. Conversely 20 per cent of the people are scattered along 88 per cent of the land.

A downtown scene in one of our big population centres has a caption noting that Canadians "have become city dwellers." But on another page there is a picture proclaiming "the rugged character of the Canadian Shield" as shown on the Mattawa River. A tributary of the Ottawa River, this is nonetheless on the fringe of civilization, being well known to travellers in the north country between Mattawa and Pembroke. Yet it is close enough to the far country where few people have trod.

The vast majority of Canadians stick to well-defined paths. Among the scattering who do know the wilderness are bush pilots and geologists. The latter in particular are close at times to an environment that remains close to pristine perfection, knowing nothing of pollution or the hand of man. . .

A young Vancouver-based geologist of our acquaintance has been for some time in the British Columbia interior. His wife, a Brockville native and widely-travelled in her own right, has been along with him on an expedition this summer. Now visiting her parents in Ottawa, she tells of a fantastic summer in the north and really hated to leave it . . . I find it a bit hard adjusting to city din after the total isolation and serenity of the wilds."

The poet William Wordsworth, even in his day, wrote of the "din of towns and cities" and it is encouraging to have this glimpse of a Canada few of us know but trust will always remain unspoiled and relatively untouched by civilization.

Equality

We see that in Toronto there is a 19-year-old lass who handles a pneumatic drill and other jobs normally the preserve of the male. She is happy in her work and her boss is happy with the way she does it, giving her equal pay with the fellows who in turn are happy that "Little Eva", as they call her, is around.

A little less rugged a task but nevertheless one the girls have been performing with charm and flair all summer is the gas station stint. Soon, we suppose, they will be dispersing to school, university or other jobs. That is the way it is come September and it is just one of those things we must put up with when the year goes into decline.

In the Maritimes they seem to have gone into this aspect of Women's Lib with a keen eye to fashion and attracting customers. Hitherto ladies in the girls wear only tuxedo miniskirts or khaki shorts, depending on the station, and very smart they are too. But in the east they have gone even further. In the August issue of the Atlantic Advocate there is an advertisement showing a radiant young woman in a black, white and red mini dress. She is standing by the gas pumps which bear the name of a very well known New Brunswick industrialist who recently moved to the Bahamas leaving his sons to look after his many business interests. Obviously these include petroleum and the caption on the ad, incidentally, says "Waiting to Serve You." On her dress, which is demonstrably a uniform the company has had designed for the girls, is the name of the said industrialist.

Who ever would have believed the Maritimes were backward in promotional or any other matter?

Dies in Crash

History has repeated itself tragically for the Royal Family. Back in 1942 the Duke of Kent was killed in an air crash. Just about that time his nephew, Prince William of Gloucester, was born. Now he too is dead, victim of an air crash. The elder son of the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, Prince William was competing in an air race when his plane fell to earth shortly after take-off.

Concession Follows Concession

Quebec Squeeze-Play Embarrasses Trudeau Government

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government is saying almost nothing about it publicly — but plenty in private — hoping the taxpayers won't notice how neatly it has been one-upped by Quebec.

It is another benchmark in the long and continuing federal-provincial power struggle between Ottawa and Quebec City over social security.

Quebec's latest position always has been, since former Premier Maurice Duplessis staged the first-ever walkout from a federal-provincial conference, that the province should decide social security policy and administer.

With the federal government, of course, largely financing it.

Former Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent was the first of-succeeding federal government leaders to object to this.

And it was in the face of just such an objection — to Quebec's persistent go-it-alone social policy — that Maurice Duplessis resplendent in morning coat, jammed on his hard silk hat And walked out of the first dominion-provincial conference some 20 years ago.

Since then, through sheer unyielding pressure, successive Quebec governments have managed to push Ottawa into concession after concession.

The federal government and the other nine provinces could have their own cost-sharing programs.

Quebec must have its own — and frequently got it.

Its own income tax.

And its own Pension Plan.

There are other Quebec "specials," too, but it is with the province's own Pension Plan that the federal government — and the taxpayers — could take a shafting.

Quietly but quickly, a few weeks ago, Quebec passed legislation drastically changing the terms of its plan from the federal government's Canada Pension Plan.

Both were set up with Ot-

"You seem to be suffering from a military-industrial complex!"

awa reluctantly bowing to Quebec's wish to have its own plan — eight years ago.

And both were on an even footing.

But no longer.

For under the new legislation, Quebec has sweetened its plan so that in some instances its beneficiaries will be getting $50 monthly more than Canada Pension Plan members.

The irony is, as usual, that Quebec is one of those provinces least able to afford it.

Starting in the new year, Quebec is increasing the limit of maximum pensionable earnings — the highest wage level on which pension contributions are based — by $400 to $5,300.

Two years later it increases again to $8,300.

These increases for Quebec while the level for the Canada Pension Plan remains $400 lower at $5,500.

There are other differences, but this perhaps is the big one.

The federal government, in a basic flap, is busily "conferring" with Quebec, while talking of rushing through legislation to restore balance between the two pension plans.

Rushing it through when?

Before the end of the year— with an election in the way and Parliament not sitting — when Quebec starts paying higher pension benefits?

Failing that, Welfare Minister John Munro has said, in seeming to assume a safe return to power, the Canada Pension Plan legislation will be changed to equate with Quebec sometime next year on a retroactive basis.

But meanwhile, being upstaged this way by Quebec threatens all sorts of pension hangups. And with the two pension plans out of balance, employers with workers in Quebec and the rest of Canada would have a double standard of pension payment assessments.

What makes it all the more embarrassing for the federal government is that it is one of those very employers with thousands of civil servants both living and even more, working, in Quebec.

Insurance Industry Under Fire in States

By DON O'HEARN
From The Intelligencer's Quoca's Park Bureau

There is a hell-raiser in Pennsylvania.

Herbert S. Denenberg is insurance commissioner for the state.

Denenberg took office a year and a half ago.

In the short time since then he has become a national figure.

And there's some chance that as a spin-off there could be some hell raised here in Ontario.

Denenberg has made a frontal attack on the insurance industry.

It has been a persistent attack and he has pursued it with flair and showmanship.

He has simplified the complexities of insurance to where they are comprehensible to the public (And to press and television).

He has used his authority to prevent increases in insurance premiums.

He has educated the public on how to shop for insurance (and confounded the industry) by distributing shopper's guides for auto, health and life insurance.

And he has exposed alleged waste and extravagance in insurance practices.

Across the line they now are calling him the Ralph Nader of the insurance industry.

And not only has he received the interest of national magazines but he has been getting attention from the public right across the country.

The significant thing that Denenberg is doing is shaping up as the same thing that Nader did in the automotive field.

Nader's persistence and sharp criticism eventually took the evil of untouchability off the auto industry. The public became accustomed to the fact that it wasn't talking back to God to criticize it, and in turn, of course, the industry itself began to accept this.

The public currency is probably better off for it. At least it is a better circulating medium.

Already through the Denenberg efforts there are the first signs of this in the insurance industry in the U.S.

And one big change of climate that occurs there, certainly will eventually make its way into Canada.

In fact Denenberg findings already have stirred Consumerist Shulman to criticize Canadian life insurance. Other politicians can be expected to follow along as the work of the Pennsylvania commissioner gets better known on this side of the border.

Not that there probably is the scope that there is in the U.S.

Generally speaking we appear to be more advanced in both control over our insurance and our public programs than in the States.

But also there is no question that there is considerable room for improvement.

Politics and The Olympics

Peterborough Examiner

The only thing that is more surprising and saddening than the behavior of some of the black dictators of the new African nations is the behavior of Western governments who tolerate it.

Take the example of Rhodesia for instance. Rhodesia has been a thorn in the side of black African rulers because of its ruling white minority.

But instead of helping the Rhodesian blacks by weaning out a form of gradual change-over from the exclusive white rule, they've defeated every such effort and used the Rhodesian blacks' plight simply for anti-West propaganda purposes.

Now that the starting time for the 1972 Olympic Games in Munich, West Germany, is nearing, the black dictators and their dictators are at it again. Carefully waiting for the last minute when their move could conceivably cause greater propaganda impact or more confusion, the Republics of Guyana, Tanzania, Ghana, Sierra Leone, Ethiopia, Sudan and Liberia announced that if Rhodesia is allowed to compete they will withdraw from the games.

The Olympic Games so far have very successfully kept clean of any political implication. Olympic leaders wisely decided to accept any nation's athletes, regardless of the nature of their government. That system has so far worked splendidly.

If nations were selected according to their governments or their governments' political and economic systems, few nations would be eligible. Accordingly, the free world's athletes have competed against the representatives of Nazi Germany, Communist Russia, Castro's Cuba and heaven knows who else and with what political system — and successfully in the sense that the individual athlete has not been made to suffer for his host's actions. It has worked.

Now the above mentioned African want to blackball Rhodesia's (incidentally mixed, black-and-white) contingent because of Rhodesian government policy.

The world should not allow it. And to back up their pious decisions whose own rules are a disgrace and a disaster to the blacks of Africa.

Narrow Escape For King of Morocco

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst

Morocco s the Arab country best-known to Canadians, that is to hundreds of our fellow citizens who have taken advantage of Club Mediterranee and other travel package schemes to visit this Islamic kingdom.

It is the closest of the Arab nations in Canada, exotic moroccan places like Marrakesh and Rabat being only hours away from connecting air flights at Paris, London or Madrid.

This is not the beginning of a travel pitch, if anything the contrary, bearing in mind the public violence displayed in the last 18 months in efforts to assassinate Hassan II, the Moroccan king.

Like King Hassein of the Jordan, the other Arab kingly target and a near-namesake, Hassan has developed all kinds of tricks to stay alive. This is true even though others were killed in the unsuccessful efforts to date to kill him.

The latest effort involved four U.S.-built jets of the Royal Moroccan Air Force, whose pilots tried to shoot down Hassan flying home in his personal Boeing 727 jetliner. It failed when the Arab-manned but-killer pilots over the jetliner's radio that he was piloting a mechanic and the king was dead.

After the king's jetliner landed, the rebel pilots realized too late Hassan had duped them.

The previous unsuccessful attempt by Hassan's enemies a year ago, resulted in a bloodbath in which 98 persons were killed. Most of the victims were harmless by-standers at a royal party during an outdoor banquet in the Rabat royal palace to gun down the hated monarch.

Hassan in Morocco, like Hussein in the Jordan, is not being attacked without very sound reasons. In Hassan's case, it relates to his failure to make Morocco into a constitutional monarchy and his refusal to permit a multi-party system to develop.

Like Hussein, Hassan's fellow Arab neighbors are not necessarily his allies. In some cases, notably Libya under the fiery, fundamentalist Colonel Qadafi, they are his avowed enemies. The reason is understandable. If they consider to be corrupt, they are bound to criticize him.

This is all the more curious in Morocco's case, since Hassan II can claim, with much justification, direct succession back to one of the original disciples of the Prophet Mohammed himself. This gives him a quite-sacred place in the hearts of the many backward Moroccans—hearts of the devout Moslems who rule Libya.

However Islam is divided into sects like Christianity and over the centuries, they have assumed political and social differences, as well as religious ones, quite the same as in Christianity.

Hassan's problem is that he cannot stop in time. The better educated technocrats around him, most favorably impressed techniques for social change. The success of tourism, for example, indicates the new places where Morocco can find external sources of needed income.

The anti Royalist members of political parties promised a constitution by Hassan have become over a decade ago, await change to come from above, are opposed by the technocrats kept

Bible Digest

"And when he was in affliction, he besought the Lord his God, and humbled himself greatly before the God of his fathers." — 2 Chronicles 33:12

It is regrettable that he is so often the case. So many never give God a thought as long as they think they have everything under control. In spite of their human weakness and because He loves us He will yet bear and answer prayer even in our darkest hour. I'll sought the Lord and He heard me and delivered me from all my fears."

'Conflict' And Image Of Party

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

One would have hoped to have heard a more inspiring direction from the Premier of this Province to members of the caucus, than that which Mr. Davis at the end of January produced when "he told them that conflicts of interest were harmful to the public image of the Conservative Party . . ."

Surely this is a principle involved higher than the public image of any political party or of any individual involved in the process of Government.

The principle is a simple one that a man should not be judge in his own case and where he enters into political and public life, he must put the public interest ahead of private interest.

Just as a judge is required to do, a member of Government, and particularly a Cabinet Minister, and more particularly still because the head of the Government should endeavor at all times to be like Caesar's wife — beyond misconstruction of motivation.

These are simple, well known British principles of public life and justice, and it is sad to think that those "set in authority above us" are more concerned with their public image than with the true principles of justice.

The Poverty Of Protest 1972-Style

Scott Young in The Globe and Mail

The thought keeps intruding: Yes, but the protesters are right the system is wrong. War is wrong, poverty is wrong, cancer is wrong, terrorizing citizens is wrong. The poverty of the protesters is that they have found no way that is right. They hate war in Vietnam, as they start one in Mount Sinai, hate terrorizing the innocent, so they terrorize the innocent, hate the violence of limb and life so far away, so make little children suffer who are within reach. That's a police policy?

Of course it is pretty subjective, so I will try to be objective. There are no more than a few dozen of the characters who really know what it is all about. They are young adults not kids, and are ideological opponents not only of President Nixon, but of all authority and social systems. They are cruel and ruthless and have no more reluctance to act as conscience or to question their motives or action. They lead a bunch of intellectual dumbbells who are the sheep of history through the state of dumbedidom that is made up of those touched by the fact that some think they are avenging warriors and others think they are the second coming of Florence Nightingale.

Northern Wins Satellite Job

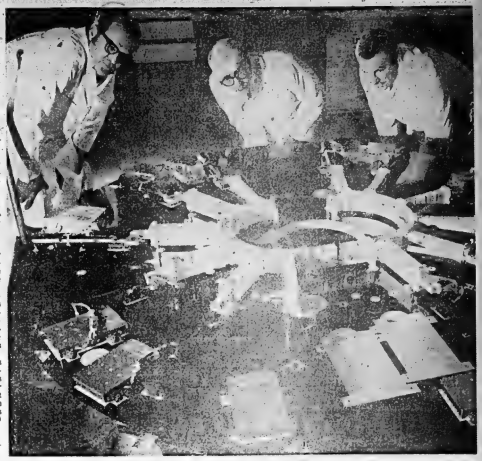
Northern Electric has signed a $6-million contract with Hughes Aircraft of California to provide components for the first domestic satellite communications system in the United States.

The work will be done at the company's plant in Lacorne, Que. — although this contract evokes memories of opportunities that once might have made Belleville a space-age production centre.

In 1969, Northern set up a special unit to produce the receiver and transmitter.

In 1969, Northern — under a $1-million subcontract from Hughes — set up a special unit at its Belleville plant to produce the receiver and transmitter for Intelsat 4, the communications satellite funded by an international consortium.

When it was nearing completion, in 1970, Hughes and RCA Canada Ltd. suddenly became rival bidders for the multi-million dollar contract to build Telesat — Canada's first domestic satellite.



At the time, a Northern spokesman said the federal government's choice could decide if the company's Belleville satellite installation would continue. The federal contract went to Hughes.

However, some time later Northern announced construction of a new plant at Laverne near Hull and the Belleville satellite unit was disbanded.

After Hughes won the Telesat order an agreement was signed with Northern for follow-on contracts. These involved providing up to 15 additional satellite electronic platforms for other systems manufactured by Hughes.

The current contract calls for production of three platforms on which transmitters and receivers are mounted for a satellite system being built for Western Union Telegraph in the U.S. The contract was negotiated under the 1970 follow-on agreement.

The equipment being supplied is the same as Northern manufactured for Canada's Telesat satellite ANIK, which will be launched this November.

Club Plans Skatathon

Belleville Rotary Club is sponsoring a Skatathon to be held between Christmas and New Year.

The club is contacting the nine sporting organizations which are members of the Minor Sports Association. MSA coaches in turn will be responsible for stirring up interest among the youngsters.

Participants will seek sponsors at from one cent to five cents a lap of skating around the Memorial Arena or the Dick Ellis rink. Of every dollar earned, Minor Sports will get 65 cents and the Rotary Club 35 cents for expenses and club projects.

Announcing the project at the club's luncheon meeting, vice-president Glynn Reynolds said the Skatathon is being modelled on one run by two small clubs northwest of Toronto — Woodbridge and Vaughan.

The club was addressed by Cliff Belch, deputy director of the Belleville Recreation Arena committee who spoke of the success of this year's program for both young people and adults in the community.

A highlight has been the swimming program at the Ontario School for the Deaf sports complex as well as at the Y and Kinsmen pools. Among those using the facilities are young people from the Tyendinaga Reserve.

The entire program has been extremely varied, involving use of community schools and playgrounds and bus tours for the senior citizens for example. Cost of the program for the year is $37,000.

Mr. Belch said there is a possibility of some programs being changed by next year. One is the children aged five to 12 which is a big undertaking and some children, his own included, admitted Mr. Belch, are not interested in it.

Search Powers Are Defended

MONTREAL (CP) — Justice Minister Jerome Choquette had to make a pointed effort to "dispel the apprehensions which exist" as a result of special powers of arrest and search recently granted the Quebec Police Commission.

Mr. Choquette referred specifically to assertion in the English-language press when he discussed the matter in a speech to this week's Canadian Bar Association meeting in Montreal after an earlier statement to Canadian police chiefs in annual session at Quebec City.

The justice minister devoted much of his Montreal speech to his concepts of federalism and this may have obscured some of what his reference to Quebec's decision to investigate organized crime. The police commission begins the investigation this fall.

Amendments to the Police Act in this connection had ties of "objections in some quarters because they were considered to imperil civil rights," said Mr. Choquette.

"I want to take this occasion to dispel the apprehensions which exist in respect to the extent and possible abuse of these powers of seizure of papers or documents useful to the inquiry.

"The powers granted to the police commission which have found criticism are principally those dealing with the seizure of documents by a warrant. This procedure, it will be admitted, is consonant with the general traditions of our criminal law which provides for search warrants to be issued by the courts.

"In the case of the police commission, one must remember that it is composed of four judges and other commissioners. Furthermore, it is intended that the commission while presceding with the inquiry will act in a similar situation as a court, as we have provided that evidence-gathering and presentation of proof will be the function of a specially constituted unit of lawyers and policemen.

"We feel, therefore, that the commission and its judges will be in a position not dissimilar to the justices of the peace or other judges who are asked from time to time to issue search warrants.

"It is also our view that the commission and judges will be in a better position to appreciate the opportunity of authorizing a search rather than other judges who would not be familiar with the trend and developments of the investigation.

"Finally, all objects and documents seized must at once be brought before the commission, which ensures the complete supervisory role to the commission and its judges.

"This procedure, although novel in an investigative commission must be appreciated in its context and in relation to the subject matter of the inquiry — the activities of organized crime. We are dealing in this instance with specialty ac- creative and clandestine activities. We are not dealing with the ordinary run-of-the-mill commission of inquiry.

"We have also been reproached with having granted to the investigators a power of search and seizure without warrant under special circumstances when objects or documents are liable to disappear and not be available because a warrant cannot be obtained in proper time. I have already stated that such documents or objects should be at once brought before the commission which is a form of control of abuses."

Abortion Issue

Quality of Life Said Important Factor

MONTREAL (CP) — A human fetus is a living human being, but its life does not necessarily have to be respected above all else, Dr. Llew Purvis, professor of gynecology at the University of Montreal, said Wednesday.

"What is most important is not the life itself, and its biological functions, but the quality of that life, and its purpose," she told a panel discussion on rights of the unborn at the Canadian Bar Association conference here.

"Have we the right to bring into the world innocent children destined to a life of misery in an overpopulated and polluted world."

Dr. Purvis, said that women will not be free until they have exclusive control over their bodies.

There is no bodily function more dangerous than pregnancy, she said, and it should be the woman who decides to take the risk.

Dawn Jubb, assistant professor of medicine at the University of Toronto said "all mothers have problems, but that is entirely outside the question of the rights of the unborn."

"First we must decide what those rights are, and then go on to find a solution to the mother's problems within that framework."

Dr. Jubb said that a human being exists from the moment of conception and the only circumstance in which that life can be sacrificed is a "one-for-one trade" when the mother's life is at stake.

"Fetal battering is no answer to the baby battering that further has mentioned."

Dr. Jubb said there is no support."

means of removing a pregnancy from a woman's life.

"If she has an abortion, she must live the rest of her life knowing she was responsible for a life which she chose not to

Lawyers on the panel discussed other aspects of an unborn child's rights.

Children delivered by car accidents a month before birth should have the right to compensation, said William MacDonald of Vancouver, chairman of the bar association's family law section.

"If that deformity occurred because of an accident at the time of conception, however, the conclusion becomes more difficult," he said.

CANADIAN INTERNATIONAL AIR SHOW
SEPT. 1-4, TORONTO

One of the world's biggest air shows, the Canadian International Air Show at the Canadian National Exhibition waterfront, is more exciting than ever this year. Each afternoon at 1:30 from Sept. 1-4, thrill to 2½ action-packed hours featuring the largest selection of aircraft ever seen together...ninety-five aircraft of all descriptions gathered from around the world.

The feature of this year's show is "Fan-Air-Asia '72"... an intriguing forty-five minute fly-past of aviation through the years, comprising twenty-three antique, vintage and classic aircraft dating from 1908 to the dramatic mid-40's. You'll see planes that struggled into the air in the dawning days of flight and sixteen friendly dog-fights between famous fighters of both World Wars. A British Sopwith Pup will tangle with a German Fokker, and a U.S. Corsair engages a Japanese Zero. All together an exciting blend of the historic and the nostalgic.

Other top-flight attractions include:

★ Precision flying by the Canadian Armed Forces T-33 jets flashing in hard formation over the waterfront.

★ Twin Otters, Turbo Beavers and Trackers of the Ministry of Natural Resources water-bombing a fire.

★ A para-drop by members of the Canadian Airborne Regiment plus skydivers hurtling from two miles up—arming for a ground target only ten feet across.

★ U.S.A.F. F111's with their variable wings.

★ The Canadian debut of the R.A.F. Harrier—the only jet fighter in the world capable of vertical take-off, hovering and supersonic dash.

★ And many more dazzling aerial displays.

Please note: Due to the special nature of this year's tree Air Show, you must be at the CNE waterfront in order to see everything to its greatest advantage.

Throughout the CNE grounds as always, there's a tremendous variety of exciting things going on, including:

The People's Republic of China— Appearing for the first time at the CNE, the Republic of China is mounting an impressive display of that nation's cultural, artistic, agricultural and technological achievements. In the Queen Elizabeth Building.

Plus ★ The Canadian Armed Forces Exhibit ★ International Pavilion ★ 3 in 1 Matinee Thrill Show ★ Big Bands ★ Aquarama ★ and much, much more.

Where else can you see and do so much in one place for so little... including free admission to Ontario Place!

Catholic Teachers' Pay Not Set

TORONTO (CP) — Roman Catholic school teachers in six major districts across the province will return to the classroom next week without salary settlements for the coming year, Douglas Knott, a spokesman for the Ontario English Catholic Teachers Association said Wednesday.

Mr. Knott said 8,500 teachers, more than half the membership in his association, are affected by a failure to reach settlements in Metropolitan Toronto, Ottawa, Sault Ste. Marie, London, Essex and Waterloo.

The old agreements expire today, leaving the teachers to work under the same salary and working conditions as in the 1971-72 school year.

Mr. Knott said the association will call a meeting here of local presidents Sept. 6 and 9 to consider possible action.

He said the problem throughout Ontario seems connected with the province's crackdown on school spending "which is forcing boards to play it tight."

Mr. Knott said school trustees generally want to withhold non-monetary items from negotiation—sabbatical leave, class size, working conditions and so on—while teachers want concessions in such areas, raising salary gains this year may be slim.

Gaps in Law

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — An environmental lawyer said Wednesday that no one in the province will have "true environmental rights until the serious gaps in Ontario's legislation are closed."

David Estrin, a member of the Canadian Environmental Law Research Foundation, made the comment while speaking at the final session of a three-day conference on the environment at Queen's University.

Mr. Estrin suggested that independent commissions be set up to administer environmental laws and do some realistic planning.

Trial Delayed

WARWICK, R.I. (AP) — Postponement was granted Wednesday until Dec. 13 in the district court trial of two leaders of the Rolling Stones rock group—Mick Jagger and Keith Richard—and three members of their entourage. Charges arose from an alleged scuffle with a newspaper photographer and police July 18 at Green Airport. Jagger was charged with obstructing a police officer while Richard was charged with simple assault.

Bee Barrier

NEW YORK (AP) — Swarming honey bees caused a minor traffic jam when they stopped to rest on a Fifth Avenue signal light and drew crowds of curious onlookers.

No one knew where the swarm of 7,000 to 10,000 bees had come from but police had to rope off the corner of 17th Street to prevent the pedestrians from blocking traffic.

Girl Fined

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Denise Alton, 19, was fined $250 and prohibited from operating a motorboat next summer after she pleaded guilty Wednesday to a charge of operating a motorboat in a dangerous manner.

Police told provincial court that a boat operated by Miss Alton hit a smaller wooden boat operated by three boys. Two boys had to jump for safety and the third had to flatten himself in the bow to avoid injury.

Spying Ends

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The defence department insisted, Wednesday that the army had stopped spying on civilians and destroyed its files on thousands of Americans despite a Senate subcommittee suggestion that the dossiers might still exist. "The army is out of that business," Pentagon spokesman Jerry Friedman said. "To the best of our knowledge, all the files we said would be destroyed have been destroyed."

Fatal Prank

NEW DELHI (AP) — A student jumped into a tiger's cage in a zoo in Baroda, India, and pulled the tiger's whiskers. New Delhi newspapers reported Wednesday.

With one blow of his paw the tiger broke the youth's neck, killing him instantly.

Game Drawn

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — Bobby Fischer was only one point from the world chess championship today, and the big question was whether he would try to wrap it up in today's game or cautiously coast to victory on two half-point draws.

Fischer and champion Boris Spassky drew their 20th game Wednesday, giving the American challenger 11½ points to Spassky's 8½.

Some observers say the last seven games were drawn because Spassky was playing sound chess and not because Fischer's appetite for a win had diminished. Others believe that having racked up six wins to Spassky's three in the first 13 games, and one of those Russian three a forfeit, Fischer felt he would prove nothing by taking risks.

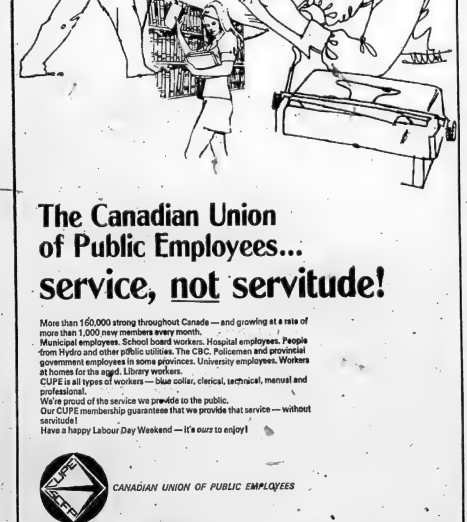
Art Stolen

ROME (AP) — Under the cover of a violent thunderstorm, thieves broke into a church near Rome and made off with art work valued by priests at $1.7 million. The theft of paintings by 16th-century wooden figure of the Madonna and other art works, was discovered Wednesday by two priests at the Church of Mentorella.

May Lose Bases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union may soon be forced to give up its naval bases in Egypt, United States intelligence sources here say.

Relations between the two countries have been rapidly deteriorating in recent months and President Anwar Sadat of the United Arab Republic already has told the Russians to withdraw their air force and army units.



Assails GM

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ralph Nader's Centre for Auto Safety accused General Motors Corp. Wednesday of concealing a serious steering defect in almost 285,000 1958-and 1960-model Cadillacs.

Lowell Dodge, director of the centre, told a news conference about 160,000 of the 12-and 13-year-old cars are still in use.

Complete Walk

OTTAWA (CP) — Four members of an Ontario youth organization finished a 275-mile walk from Toronto to Ottawa by presenting a brief Wednesday on Parliament Hill to Health Minister John Munro recommending a ban on advertising of all chemicals subject to abuse.

CONSTABLE AND MRS. TERRY LEWIS

Lewis – Donohoe

St. James the Minor Church in Stirling was the scene of the recent wedding ceremony when Catherine Judith Donohoe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Robert Donohoe, R.R.1, Stirling, exchanged vows with Constable Edwin Terrance Lewis, Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil K. Lewis, of Renfrew. Father James F. McGarvey officiated and Miss Lana Lachappelle was soloist with accompaniment by the organist James Morrow.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length princess style gown of Paloma silk. Re-embroidered Belgium lace accented the high wedding band neckline, and wide bands in the full sleeves. Two rows of the same lace enhanced the front of her dress, and a detachable chapel train fell softly from the shoulders. A tiered bouffant silk illusion veil was attached to her single organza rose headpiece with peau de soie leaves and a scroll edge trim. She carried a bouquet of red roses and white carnations.

Maid of honor, Miss Jean Donohoe, sister of the bride, wore a light green polyester bodice gown with an overlay of green and gold chiffon skirt and matching elbow length sleeves. Her gown also featured a ruffled collar with a gold headpiece. She carried a nosegay of green and gold baby mums. Bridesmaids, Mrs. Michael Doucette of Belleville and Miss Ellen Lewis of Renfrew, sister of the bridegroom, were dressed identically to the maid of honor. Flower girl, Miss Patricia Hannah of Delora, cousin of the bride, wore a light green polyester gown with a green and gold bow at the back of her dress with matching head band. She carried a basket of green and gold baby mums.

Best man was Constable Michael Doucette of Belleville. Leonard Polky of Renfrew and Robert Macaulay of Frankford ushered the guests.

For the reception held at the Lower Trent Valley Fish and Game Club in Frankford, the bride's mother greeted guests wearing a light green brocade silk dress with matching flowers in her hair. Bow accessories and a corsage of yellow mums and carnations enhanced her dress.

The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a coral crepe dress with white ruffles at the collar complemented by white and coral bows in her hair. Her dress was completed by white accessories and a corsage of white mums and carnations.

For the wedding trip to points east and the U.S., the bride donned a street length dress of blue tweed with a white collar and cuffs. White accessories and a corsage of pink mums and carnations complemented her dress.

Upon their return, Constable and Mrs. Lewis will reside at 130 Sidney St., Apt. 10, in Belleville.

School of Needlework For Poor Gentlewomen

LONDON (CP) — A school founded a century ago to provide "suitable employment for poor gentlewomen" is flourishing and prosperous in an age of technology and mass production.

The school, founded by Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, is the Royal School of Needlework. It appeared at a time when the choice of skills "poor gentlewomen" might respectably learn was limited.

In its centenary year the school can claim a worldwide reputation. Only the splendid late Victorian house, with its vast rooms and wide crimson carpeted staircase, which accommodates it retains the peaceful and unhurried 19th-century atmosphere.

The subjects in the syllabus read rather like museum labels—crewel work, patchwork, samplers, church kneelers and blackwork (the Elizabethan technique used for small pieces such as cuffs, with meticulous stitching all in black and gold).

But the heads bent over the embroidery frames are mostly young and there are at present 190 students on the register. These girls, some taking private lessons, others doing a full two years' apprenticeship, have chosen this career from among the many open to them in 1972 because they want to do beautiful, exacting and above all lasting work.

They learn basic, traditional stitches—for in this type of needlework methods have not changed with the years—and then it is a question of experience and the development of their own individual skills.

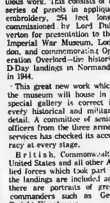
There is such a demand now for the school's services that apprentices who pass their two-year course successfully are assured jobs in the workrooms, where commissions are carried out. Others may go onto restoration work in museums.

And today many of Britain's stately homes open to the public have skilled needleworkers permanently employed maintaining their needlework treasures.

The school's patron is the Queen Mother and the president is Princess Alice, Countess of Athlone and widow of a former governor-general of Canada, who frequently pays informal visits.

One of the most famous pieces to pass through the workroom was the carpet for which the late Queen Mary embroidered the squares and border? She sent these to the school to be mounted and joined before the carpet was sold to Canada for much needed dollars shortly after the Second World War.

And a young member of the present Royal Family, Princess Alexandra, cousin of the Queen, is an enthusiastic and skilled tapestry worker.



The needlework school is run on business lines and depends for its revenues on fees for courses of instruction, the many private lessons given, the embroidery commissions and the well-stocked shop. This shop sells everything required by the embroiderer, silks, wools, frames, canvases and linens.

The exquisite gold embroidery on the train of the Queen's coronation robes was undertaken by the school. Eighteen different types of gold wire were used to embroider the design of leaves and wheat ears.

One of the school's largest and most important projects has taken five years of meticulous work. This consists of a series of panels in applique embroidery, 294 feet long, commissioned by Lord Dulverton for presentation to the Imperial War Museum, London, and commemorating Operation Overlord—the historic D-Day landings in Normandy in 1944.

This great new work which the museum will house in a special gallery is correct in every historical and military detail. A committee of senior officers from the three armed services has checked its accuracy at every stage.

British, Commonwealth, United States and all other Allied forces which took part in the landings are included and there are portraits of great commanders such as Gen. Dwight Eisenhower.

MISS ARLENE P. GILL, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Oliver Gill. Belleville recently graduated from St. Joseph's School of Nursing, Hotel Dieu Hospital, Kingston. Miss Gill, who is a graduate of BCIVS will continue on the staff of Hotel Dieu Hospital.

MR. AND MRS. RICHARD HAROLD McILQUHAM

McIlquham – May

Rev. C. W. Coleman officiated at the August 19 wedding ceremony in Holloway Street United Church when Marilyn Anne May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan May, RR1, Foxboro, exchanged vows with Richard Harold McIlquham, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. McIlquham of Belleville. David Conley was organist and soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, selected a floor length gown of daisy embossed organza with lacing at the bodice and featuring long full sleeves. A floor length veil fell from a beaded wedding ring headdress which was trimmed with daisies. She carried a mauve orchid with pink carnations.

Maid of honor, Miss Kathy May, wore a Polynesian styled gown in exotic colors of green and blue. Bridesmaids Miss Carole Sue Bongard and Miss Sharon Leal wore Polynesian styled gowns also similar to the maid of honor's, only in colors of rose and mauve respectively.

Peter Knudson attended the bridegroom while ushers were Pat Thompson and John Thomson.

For the reception which was held in the bride's home in the form of a luau, the bride's mother greeted guests wearing a mauve flowered chiffon over taffeta floor length dress with an off-white orchid corsage.

The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a floor length gown of floral design in shades of tangerine, yellow and white. Her dress was enhanced by long full sleeves and a green orchid corsage.

For the wedding trip the bride donned plaid dress pants with high rise cuffs and a red velvet jacket. A wide brimmed hat complemented her ensemble and she wore a daisy corsage.

Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Richard McIlquham will reside at Thunder Bay where they will be attending Lakehead University.

People Who Leave Their Mark

By DORIS CLARK

Have you ever thought about the people who pass through your life, a brief acquaintance and move on? I can remember an elderly gentleman who was my best friend at the age of three. He carried peppermints in his pocket. I loved them — but what I really got from him was an abiding love for the gentleness and wisdom of elderly folk.

Then when I was 10 there was the school teacher whose practice on leaving us to our own devices for a short period, was to write on the blackboard "Control Yourselves". It sowed an idea, and also helped to keep down the din — for a few minutes, anyway.

There was the minister who played baseball; the serene camp director who calmed us jittery girls when we were getting ready for a suddenly-planned overnight canoe trip. She told us about how she had packed for a trip to England with just a half hour's notice. She had poise.

There was the English teacher with the shiny nose and the drawn back hair, the clipped sardonic ways — and heart of gold. She opened up for me the wonders of Shakespeare.

I could think of others — probably dozens, who have left with me a message I have never forgotten.

Outstanding, I think, is the eloquent preacher who was forever urging us to "Stand up and be counted!" Now there's a challenge!

Dear Doris: Recently you called finance "a matter for consultation".

We have been married for 11 years. I have the family allowance to spend and my husband would supplement this if I asked for it.

Yet he never discusses bills with me and I find it difficult to know what he has and what I can spend as I am in the dark all the time. Last summer I saw a cedar chest that I fell in love with for $100 and when I asked him if I could have it, he said, "No, he'd rather see me buy clothes than that."

Now we are going to buy our first house but I want this settled before we get into a mortgage. He claims he pays his tax as he earns it, and he will say how and when it is spent.

According to his mother, his father was the same. It just won't do. — Money Worries.

Dear Money Worries: Here we go again. Money — and a man who has not learned that marriage is sharing. Neither of you knows how much he would have to pay a housekeeper if he didn't have his unpaid and devoted wife to raise him and the children? Because he is acting childish in asserting such outmoded authority.

I'm glad to hear "It just won't do." Say it to him, and make it stick.

Dear Doris: I read your column every day and find it most interesting; maybe you can help me.

I am trying to find the recipe to starch crochet work using white sugar. — A Faith ful Reader.

Mirror of Your Mind
by JOHN CONNELL

Can a wife forgive forgetfulness?

8-23

YES, if a husband habitually forgets birthdays and anniversaries, a wife might just as well forgive her husband's laxity. Let a usually thoughtful husband suddenly forget his wife's birthday, though, and he will know it. That thud will be the roof caving in on him. He might have all kinds of legitimate excuses: pressure on the job, etc. But he won't be able to pacify his wife by telling her that he put unpleasant matters ahead of thoughts of her.

Is a person glad to conquer a neurosis?

USUALLY, but there are exceptions—particularly with such a tricky condition as a neurosis. Sometimes a person functions better with his neurosis than without it. He might feel he "lost a friend" if all the defenses and compensations he had developed to help him cope with his daily life were stripped away from him. The fear of being without them might prove more of a barrier to him than did the neurosis he was finally able to conquer.

Do drug-users heed health warnings?

NO; if anything, people who rely on addictive drugs will use more in an attempt to blot out the warnings of researchers and other authorities. An addict or near-addict will generally heed only himself if and when he decides he has had enough self-delusion and he realizes he cannot solve anything by retreating behind the false security of a drug screen. When he reaches that point, let's hope he gets the help he needs.

Would Rather Dig Than Push Pencil

TORONTO (CP) — Eva Victoria Van Wooz, 19, of Toronto prefers her pick and shovel to all the pencils a high time company could shave out of a tree.

Instead of putting on a dress and going off to the office like many women her age, Eva pulls on her brown heavy-duty corduroy pants, construction boots and carries her hard hat to her job.

"I've never worked at ordinary jobs," said Eva, who now works for a construction company.

said Eva is working out fine on her job. "I told her when she came that if she wasn't as hard as the guys, I'd pay her as much as them," she said.

It was her first day on the site Monday, but already Eva thinks her arm size has increased about an inch.

She said she attended high school with the construction firm, and take three university courses at night.

"I'd never want an office job," she said. "Sitting at a desk all day would give me an ulcer."

Successful Living

Employer's Right to Dictate Rules

Dear Ann Landers: You believe the judge. Our son insists that he not be denied the right to be himself—his father says: "You must learn to compromise if you're going to live in the real world." Who is right?

John walked the streets for three solid weeks looking for a job. He is fit, has decided not to go back to college (says it's a waste of time) and is a quiet boy with strong principles. John and his father have always seen things from a different point of view. I am sure John is not as radical as his father thinks he is, nor is his father as conservative as John seems to believe.

Tonight a friend of ours called to let us know that John had been in to see him about a job. Our friend told John he didn't see how he would be meeting the public if he would have to trim his hair somewhat and get rid of his beard. John promptly let him know that he did not want the job if it meant submerging his personality and he something he wasn't.

A full-blown argument followed between father and son and, as is the case with most arguments, no one convinced anyone of anything. We would appreciate it if you would let us know how you feel about this. Could John have accepted the job without compromising? — Torn Between Loyalties.

Dear Torn: When a young man goes looking for a job he should accept the fact that he is not going to make the rules or call the signals. The burden of proof is on him—not the employer. An employer who does not want a young man with long hair and a beard will not look favorably on a fellow who says "take it or leave it."

I realize there are laws against discrimination, but there are no laws against refusing to hire an applicant with a negative personality—and two is why John and others like him lose out.

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughteris marrying a boy we do not know very well. His family lives in another city. The mother of the groom sent us the nicest list yesterday. We were surprised to see the name of a social register man in the lineup. We don't want to spoil the wedding by exposing our guests to the unpleasant experience of witnessing a fit. What can we do except tell the woman we don't want to take the chance. — On The Spot

Dear On: Almost all epileptics respond to drugs which control seizures. (Please don't say "fits.") The cousin should be filed. To exclude him would be an unspeakable act of cruelty.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently a column of yours created quite an argument. I refer to the one where you said it was in poor taste to print an invitation to an anniversary party." "no gifts please."

A couple of women said you had a lot of nerve to say "yes" or "no" on such a personal matter. Frankly, I think when people ask for your opinion you have the right to tell them what you think.

And now here's another question along the same line: I've received a wedding invitation last week and to it was attached a little card that said "the bride is doing their apartment in Italian provincial."

Do you consider such a message to be in good taste Yes or no.—Just Asking

Dear Just: No, I do not.

Nuclear Plant Check Imposed

OTTAWA (CP) — Back in the mid-1950s, in the heyday of close Canadian-Indian friendship, Canada agreed to build its fellow Commonwealth state a nuclear research reactor.

As part of the deal, India undertook to ensure that "the atomic and any products resulting from its use will be employed for peaceful purposes only." But there was no provision for on-site inspection.

Today, India could never get such an installation from Canada on the same terms — or the uranium fuel to make it work.

As one Ottawa official puts it: "Now that there is an inspection system, and techniques of verification have been developed, people don't accept the sort of commitment given by India as being precise enough."

The $20-million reactor, built at Bombay under a 1956 Colombo Plan agreement, has been a source of recurring embarrassment to Canada since it went into operation in 1960.

The Bombay plant and a similar one now being constructed by Canadian firms on Taiwan were the subject of a spate of reports not long ago from Washington and the United Nations, saying they were potential sources of plutonium for atomic bombs.

The reports were based on findings of a panel of experts working under the auspices of the United Nations Association of the United States, a private organization.

The Bombay reactor was said already to have produced enough plutonium for up to 16 atomic bombs, while the Taiwan one, expected to begin operations next year, would swiftly yield enough to produce a first atomic bomb for Nationalist China.

Both reactors are modelled on Canada's NRX reactor at Chalk River, Ont.

The widely-published reports contained a note of unstated irony, since Canada has long been in the forefront of international efforts to halt the spread of nuclear weapons.

Easily capable of producing atomic bombs itself, Canada has nonetheless deliberately rejected this option while trying hard to encourage other "peaceful nuclear" nations—including India—to do the same.

Officials here dispute the estimate given in the United Nations association report of the number of bombs that India could make using the plutonium byproduct from its Canadian-supplied reactor. They say it would be eight or nine at most.

They insist that while India is obviously keeping open its choices, especially in view of China's continuing nuclear weapons development, it has now is indisputably non-nuclear in a military sense.

"There is simply no evidence that the products of the Bombay reactor are being diverted to non-peaceful uses," said one source.

Soviet Breakthrough on Leukemia Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top American cancer researcher says Wednesday a seeming Soviet breakthrough in leukemia research raises "new hope, absolutely" for developing ways to prevent the disease and certain other malignancies or improve treatment.

Dr. John B. Moloney of the National Cancer Institute said his hope would embrace leukemia and leukemia-like diseases and also sarcomas, connective-tissue cancers.

Those together comprise 38,000 of the 640,000 new cases of all forms of cancer in the United States annually.

Dr. Moloney, an associate scientific director at NCI, said the progress reported by the Russians consists of developing leukemia in primates— monkeys or baboons—after inoculating them with blood from human leukemia patients.

Dr. Boris Lapin, director of the Institute of Experimental Pathology and Therapy at Sukhumia, in the Soviet Union's Georgia, the chief investigator on the Russian leukemia project, attended the news conference where Moloney spoke.

Moloney said there is a "strong suggestion" that the Soviets might have isolated a human leukemia virus for the first time.

Moloney said American scientists are planning to get some of the virus material from the Russians during a medical mission to Moscow in October.

He said NCI scientists will try to reproduce it in large quantities at the onetime army laboratory at Fort Detrick, Md., as part of an effort to duplicate the Russian results and also pin down the nature of the virus.

Jury Wants Safety Rules For Buildings Retroactive

TORONTO (CP) — A coroner's jury recommended Wednesday that safety regulations for apartment buildings should be made retroactive to apply to buildings such as the one where a 16-month-old girl was fatally injured July 17.

The jury was investigating the death of Denise Bennett who fell 32 feet from a balcony of the 13-storey building.

A North York building inspector told the jury the bal corny from which the child fell could not meet safety regulations for new apartments. George Parker said a 1965 building bylaw prohibits gaps of more than 4½ inches in apartment railings.

The child's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Bennett, said the girl apparently slipped through a six-inch gap.

The jury recommended that, when upgrading the building bylaws, municipalities should notify landlords of changes and periodic safety inspections should be made. Landlords should notify tenants of safety regulations, the jury recommended.

Guindon Appoints Arbitrator

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Labor Minister Fren Guindon has appointed Toronto lawyer T. J. Bastedo to represent dismissed Toronto Western Hospital workers on an arbitration board.

The appointment was made because the Canadian Union of General Employees has not nominated a person to the board within the legal time limit.

Pat Murphy, union president, said he is not happy with the appointment of Mr. Bastedo and said picket lines will be set up Thursday around the lawyer's home and office.

Three hundred and fifty workers were dismissed by the hospital July 27, three days after the Ontario Labor Relations Board declared a strike by 600 workers was illegal. Two hundred and fifty workers returned to their jobs, or were on vacation, when the board board made its ruling.

Children of God Commune Sought

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — An Ohio couple are attempting to establish a Children of God commune here and are attempting to find converts on city streets.

Gary and Jennifer Salisbury, both 20, said in an interview they are looking for a house for their commune.

A similar commune closed down recently in London, Ont., after it was found the group was in violation of a two-family zoning bylaw.

Similar communes exist in Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver, and Halifax.

Parliament Convenes Today

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament starts today the job of re-opening strike-shut British Columbia ports.

But as MPs begin consideration of emergency back-to-work legislation shortly after 2 p.m. EDT, they'll be wondering if they are sitting in on the dying days of the fourth session of the 28th Parliament.

Prime Minister Trudeau, who announced Tuesday he is recalling Parliament to re-open the ports and get grain and other commodities moving again, has been giving no clues.

He declined again Wednesday to indicate the form legislation will take, whether it will contain any penalty clauses or time limits.

Nor has he given any help to those who continue to speculate that he plans to call an Oct. 30 election, possibly announcing it in the Commons after royal assent is given to the legislation Friday.

Friday would be the last day he could call the end-of-October election. The next possible election date is Nov. 6

The cabinet gave final consideration to the legislation at a special meeting Wednesday and the bill was sent to the printers. Mr. Trudeau said he hopes it can be passed by Parliament Friday.

Meanwhile, MPs were pouring into the capital from across the country where some had been electioneering. Government planes brought some in.

Allan MacEachen, Liberal House leader, was to meet the leaders of the opposition parties today in an attempt to get agreement for waiving of the rules to permit speedy passage of the legislation through Parliament.

All parties planned caucuses before the House sat at 2 p.m. to consider their tactics. Both Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield and New Democrat Leader David Lewis said they are willing to support any reasonable back-to-work legislation.

But before Labor Minister Martin O'Connell introduced the legislation there was to be the usual 45-minute question period that would give the opposition a chance at some electioneering.

The House is to sit at least until 10 p.m. considering the bill and then meet again at 11 a.m. Friday. The Senate is scheduled to sit at 2 p.m. Friday.

NDP Victory Is Seen Mainly Protest Vote

OTTAWA (CP) — Political observers here regard the New Democrat upset victory in the British Columbia provincial election Wednesday night mainly as a protest against the 20-year Social Credit government.

It is expected to have little effect on the federal Liberal government's political plans, which are generally thought to include a federal election call for Oct. 30 or Nov. 6.

The decisive win by provincial NDP leader Dave Barrett and his party surprised spokesmen for both the federal New Democratic Party and the Conservatives. Liberal party officials were not available as the results became clear.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis said he had not "dared expect we deserve an upset," while Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin said his party expected "something like this, but not as much."

Mr. Baldwin said he thought the provincial win might make voters cautious when they cast their ballots federally.

"The anti-socialist bogey is going to bite a lot of people. Many will be casting their lot with us."

A spokesman for Mr. Lewis dismissed Mr. Baldwin's assessment as "crap," saying the win would give federal New Democrats a psychological lift and probably strengthen support for the party.

Mr. Lewis said he had no doubts that the party "will feel this upswing in the federal election that we expect soon."

"The results confirm what we had sensed for the last few weeks, that there is a real upswing for support of the New Democratic Party."

Before the provincial election there was no general feeling by federal Liberals that the party would fare much better than it did in Wednesday's provincial vote.

The party, generally considered fairly weak provincially, was led by former MP David Anderson, who started his campaign late. He himself was elected along with four other Liberals to increase the number of seats the party held before the election.

The fact that Mr. Anderson successfully held what the party already had is not precisely regarded here as a non-event by the federal party.

First Black Woman Wins Legislature Seat

VICTORIA (CP) — Despite the defeat of two female members of the Social Credit cabinet, six women managed Wednesday to win election to the British Columbia legislature, including Rosemary Brown, who will become the first black woman to sit in a legislature in Canada.

Miss Brown, known in Vancouver for her work with the status of women council, won a Vancouver-Burrard seat for the New Democratic Party and was one of five NDP women elected.

The other woman came from the Social Credit ranks. Patricia Jordan, minister without portfolio in the government of W. A. C. Bennett, was one of the few ministers who managed to retain her seat.

Defeated, however, were colleagues Grace McCarthy and Isobel Dawson, both also ministers without portfolio.

Another female member, Agnes Krippa, was also defeated in her bid to retain a Vancouver South seat for the Social Credit party.

Mrs. Krippa and Mrs. McCarthy met defeat at the hands of other women candidates.

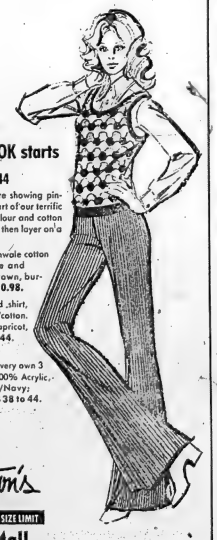
Phyllis Young of the NDP defeated Mrs. McCarthy in Vancouver-Little Mountain and Daisy Webster, wife of former MLA and MP Arnold Webster, beat out Mrs. Krippa.

Ontario Enumerations May Be Close Together

OTTAWA (CP) — If Prime Minister Trudeau goes for a late October or early November federal election, Ontario voters might feel over-enumerated.

Jean-Marc Hamel, chief electoral officer, hopes a back to back enumeration for municipal and federal elections won't turn any of them sour.

But he is worried that the federal name-takers could find "a few doors slammed in their faces."



The problem arises, if Mr. Trudeau calls an election for that time period, because of enumeration for municipal elections to be held across Ontario early in December.

Stanley Cup Winners Will Be Paid Minimum $15,000 Each

TORONTO (CP) — The National Hockey League and its players' association announced an agreement Wednesday that provides for increased player pension benefits and increased playoff awards money.

The increases were announced jointly by NHL president Clarence Campbell and Alan Eagleson, executive director of the NHLPA.

"The owners have agreed to increase the pension from $300 for each year of service at age 45 to $500 for each year of service at age 45," Campbell told a news conference.

"In addition, the order of finish and playoff awards have been increased from $850,000 to $1,381,000."

"The increase in payments to players is the result of serious and lengthy negotiations between the players and the owners in the NHL," said Eagleson.

"The bargaining was difficult but discussions were always kept reasonable.

"The fact that the Canada-U.S.S.R. series helped create a fund for the players pension benefit was instrumental in the success of our negotiations."

The new playoff and order-of-finish awards agreement replaces one announced unilaterally by the NHL last March. At that time the league, without approval from the players association, increased the total award package to $860,000.

The new awards provide for $4,000 for each of the 21 players on each team winning its division title, an increase from $2,500 previously.

Players on second-place teams receive $2,000 each, an increase from $1,250 on third-place teams $1,250, up from $750, and on fourth-place teams $750, up from $500.

The playoff award money now is distributed so that each of the 21 players on a Stanley Cup—winning team receives a total of $15,000, up from $7,500 previously.

Therefore, a player with a team such as Boston Bruins which last season won their division championship and the Stanley Cup, would receive a total of $19,000 in awards, up from the previous maximum of $10,000.

Campbell and Eagleson also announced other player-owner matters have been resolved.

Effective immediately, any player 35 years of age or over with 15 years' professional service who wishes to retire as a player to become a coach may do so, provided he notifies the league at least 10 days before the June draft.

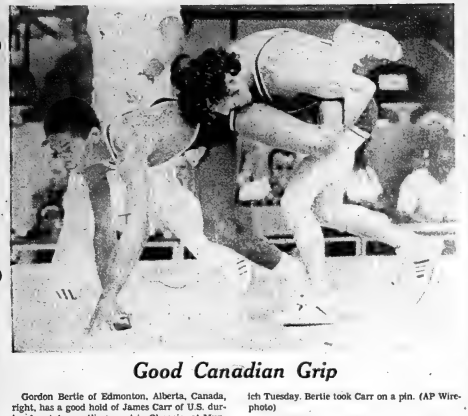
Such a player retiring to coach for another club would have to return to his original team if he wished to return to active play, unless a trade or purchase was arranged.

The player-owner council also agreed that the waiver price for a player who has been a professional for 10 years or more shall be reduced to $2,500 from $10,000. If such a player clears waivers and can then be sent to the minors, he has the option of becoming a free agent. But if he chooses this option, his guaranteed employment rights under the standard NHL contract shall cease.

Campbell, commenting on the new freedom of movement this amendment provides, also pointed out that a change in the standard player contract made last September has improved the players' position.

The offange in the reserve clause, Campbell said, removed the club's option to renew a contract with a player and made it mandatory to offer a new contract.

The new ruling stipulates that if a club does not offer a player a new contract by Aug. 10 of the year his previous contract expires, then the player becomes a free agent.



Campbell noted that this change strengthens the league's reserve clause because it makes it binding on both parties.

U.S. Turn to Lose 'Sure' Golds

MUNICH (CP) — It was the turn of the United States Olympic team Wednesday to lose gold medals it had expected to win.

A day earlier, two American swimmers had nipped Shane Gould in the 100-metre freestyle, thwarting the Australian girl's dream of four championships in a single Olympics.

This time, Nobutaka Taguchi jolted the favored Americans by breaking the world record in capturing the men's 100-metre breaststroke, Gunnar Larsson of Sweden edged another U.S. swimmer by a five-hundredth of a second in the 400 individual medley and a Russian broke a 60-year American monopoly by winning the men's springboard diving.

Meanwhile Miss Gould was back in form, breaking her second world record of the Games in the pool, in the women's 400 freestyle relay, and another in shooting as Lieut. John Writer won the smallbore three-position rifle event.

Leslie Cliff of Vancouver scored a personal victory by outswimming Miss Gould on the anchor leg of the relay in Canadian record time to give Canada a seventh-place finish, minutes before Shane showed the girls who was boss in the 200 freestyle final.

For the first time in four days, the Americans did not win the most gold. Russia captured three events—Vladimir Vasin's diving triumph, a world-record total hoist by lightweight Mukharbi Kirshinov in weightlifting and an expected victory by Ludmila Tourisheva in women's all-round gymnastics.

Over the four days, the U.S. had the most medals, seven gold, nine second-place silver and six third-place bronze. East Germany had 15 medals, five of them gold, and the Russians had five gold, three silver and three bronze.

In the unofficial point standings, based on a 10-5-4-3-2-1 count for the first six placings in final events, it was the U.S. with 173, East Germany with 116 and Russia with 90.

Canada, tied for 18th place with six points, had another gold in the bank as wrestler Gordon Bertie of Edmonton took sixth place in the 114-pound division before his three-bout unbeaten streak was ended with two defeats Wednesday. Points for wrestling will be distributed when the competition ends.

Pat Bolger of Dutton, Ont., who bowed out, ranking eighth in the 136-pound division and Harry Geris of London, Ont., who was eliminated earlier, was ninth among the 220-pounder in the best showing by Canadian wrestlers since they won their last Olympic medal in 1936.

The three-man men's gymnastics team, hampered by injuries, was far down the table in individual competition and two Canadian riflemen were far back in the smallbore three-position event.

But the yachtsmen continued to do well after two of their seven races. David Miller's Vancouver crew sailed to its second consecutive third-place finish in the soling class and the Tempest entry skipped by Ted Hains of Oakville finished fifth. The Dragon crew from Toronto was also in the top six of its division.

Robertson Keeps Pace with Spitz

MUNICH (CP) — Bruce Robertson of Vancouver matched the mighty Mark Spitz and club-mate Leslie Cliff outswam Shane Gould in the Olympic pool Wednesday, but neither Canadian got a medal.

Robertson and Spitz, the ace of the United States team, posted identical times in their heats of the 100-metre butterfly as the 19-year-old University of British Columbia student chopped a tenth of a second off his own Canadian record with a clocking of 56.85 seconds. They will meet again in the final tonight.

Miss Cliff, workhorse of the Canadian women's team, swam an anchor leg against Miss Gould, the Australian 15-year-old wonder whom she had never beaten in competition, and set another national mark. In the women's 400-metre freestyle relay, combining her 100 in 1:00.41. The former record of 1:00.5 by Marion Day of Vancouver had stood since 1968.

The performance boosted the all-Vancouver foursome past Australia into seventh place as Miss Gould, with her team out of contention, swam a relatively slow 1:01.00, saving herself for the 400 freestyle final in which she broke a world record a few minutes later.

Byron MacDonald of Mississauga, Ont., joined Robertson in the butterfly final, the first in four days with two Canadians in it, but Bob Kasting of Lethbridge, Alta., who had also qualified in his first-round heat, failed to survive the semi-finals.

Experts picked Spitz and Roland Mathes of East Germany for the top two medals tonight, but Robertson's performance threw the contest for the third-place bronze wide open.

"I was scared," he said of his first appearance in top international company. "I'm happy to make the final and I was real happy to break my Canadian record here."

Eight Canadian records have fallen since the Games began and 15 performances by Canadians have exceeded their previous competitive best, but the competition is tough.

Kicks Costly To Lowly Argos

OTTAWA (CP) — "We just shouldn't have lost that game," mourned coach Jay Cahill Wednesday night after his Toronto Argonauts dropped a 14-13 Eastern Football Conference decision to Ottawa Rough Riders.

He likely was right.

The two key plays that rankled him most were a missed convert and blocked field goal attempt—both kicks by Zenon Andrusyshyn—in the fourth quarter.

The convert, after Tony Moro took a 29-yard scoring pass from Wally Gabler, would have earned the Argos at least a tie but it turned out. The field goal—a low, flat bullet that hit the outflung paw of Ottawa defensive end Wayne Smith—would have given Toronto its first victory in five starts this year.

Even so, Moro's touchdown at 1:12 of the fourth quarter gave the Argos a 13-7 lead and only the razzle-dazzle scrambling of Ottawa quarterback Rick Cassata barred the tide for the Riders.

Defensive half Rod Woodward started it with an Ottawa interception at the Toronto 45-yard line which he ran back to the Argo 22 midway through the final quarter.

Cassata then carried to the Toronto 16. But on the next play, trying to roll to his left, he appeared smothered by alert Toronto tacklers only to squirt out of the pile and spot end Hugh Oldham roaming alone in the Argo end zone. With Argo tacklers again closing in fast, Cassata unloaded and Oldham gathered in the ball.

Gerry Orgo added the convert to two earlier field goals and, after Andrusyshyn muffed his field goal, Ottawa had its fourth straight victory to the delight of 37,472 fans.

Andrusyshyn did kick a field goal and four singles—one on a wide 36-yard field goal attempt to make it 14-13 for Ottawa.

Dick Adams kicked a 44-yard punt single for Ottawa.

To add to Cahill's frustration, the Argos moved the ball 92 times from scrimmage compared with 61 times for Ottawa and picked up 18 first downs compared with nine for the Rough Riders.

"It was a hell of a good game," Gotia said after. "But a bitch to lose.

"I know how he must feel."

DU QUOIN, Ill. (AP) — Super Bowl, sold to Hanover Shoe Farm in Pennsylvania for $1 million, won the Hambletonian Wednesday in straight heats of 1:57 2-5 and 1:58 2-5—a world record combined time of 3:53 4-5.

It was the fastest two heats ever trotted in any age bracket.

TORONTO (CP) — The Royal Canadian Golf Association has won its battle for re-scheduling of the Canadian Open championship.

The RCGA announced Wednesday that next year's Open at Montreal's Richelieu Valley Golf and Country Club will be played July 26-29—two weeks after the British Open and two weeks before the United States Professional Golfers Association tournament.

Herron Sets Bomber Style

WINNIPEG (CP) — Fullback Mack Herron scored a 120-yard touchdown on the opening kick-off Wednesday night, setting the tone for Winnipeg Blue Bombers' 49-16 defeat of Edmonton Eskimos in a Western Football Conference game.

Eskimos entered the game with a string of nine consecutive wins stretching back into last season, but Herron, leading scorer in the WFC, scrambled their game plans with a run that started 10 yards behind his goal line.

Herron's kickoff return was the second longest in the history of the Canadian Football League. Gene Gaines of Ottawa Rough Riders returned a kick-off 123 yards Nov. 11, 1964 against Hamilton Tiger-Cats at Hamilton.

"That was enough to take the wind out of anybody's sails," Bomber head coach Jim Stillwell said of Herron's sideline remole. Herron scored another touchdown in the fourth quarter for a season total of nine.

The victory moved Bombers and Eskimos into a tie for first place in the WFC, both with four wins and one loss. Saskatchewan Roughriders are in third place with three wins and three losses. Calgary Stampeders are next with a 2-3 record and British Columbia Lions trail with one win and four losses.

Bomber quarterback Don Jonas guessed right on two blitz moves by the Edmonton defence, turning one into a 27-yard screen pass to Herron and led to an eight-yard Paul Williams touchdown catch late in the first quarter.

The other game in the first intrude of the second quarter, a 37-yard pass and run that gave Williams a second opportunity to perform his end-zone touchdown victory dance for the capacity crowd of 25,210.

Tom Wilkinson, who started at quarterback for Edmonton and completed six of seven pass attempts for 74 yards, left the game early in the second quarter with an apparent leg injury.

While Wilkinson watched from the sidelines, backup Dave Syme took command, completing 18 of 30 pass tries for 232 yards. Eskimos were unable to move the ball consistently, however, and neither Sam Scarber nor Gene Foster made a dent in pushing.

Edmonton didn't get a touchdown until Scarber's two-yard plunge early in the fourth quarter. The other Eskimo major came on Tyrone Walls' 38-yard pass catch from Syme. Dave Cutler converted one Edmonton touchdown and added three singles.

Chuvalo Good For Openers

by

Maurice Switzer

Sports Editor

The Quinte Athletic Club, which opens its doors to the public next Thursday night for inspection, couldn't have asked for a bigger first drawing card.

Club president Terry Bennett has announced that his group, which intends to promote physical fitness and, eventually, amateur boxing in the city, will have Canadian heavyweight champion George Chuvalo as guest of honor at their open house.

GEORGE CHUVALO

Chuvalo's claim to boxing fame during his tenure for the past decade as king of Canada's heavyweights has been that he has never been knocked down, even though losing decisions to the likes of world champions Muhammad Ali and Floyd Patterson.

He will be on hand Thursday evening at the old Royal Canadian Legion Hall on Pinnacle St. when the new Athletic Club shows the public what it has to offer for an adult (over-20) for a $25 annual membership, or boys 5-20 for $1 monthly.

There will be a token $1 membership initiation fee for the club, which hopes to be in operation within a week. At present, installation of such equipment as speed bags, wall and floor weights, exercise mats, training bicycle, and showers are in their final stages. Long-range plans call for a sauna bath to help attract members from the spare tire midriff set.

The Club, which president Bennett stresses will emphasize physical fitness "for possibly six months — before we are able to match up any boys who want to box" got its financial impetus from a familiar source — the Belleville Tyrdmen's Benefit Fund — and help in locating their quarters at a financially feasible rate from the Legion Branch 99.

Representatives from both organizations will be on hand Thursday — when Canadian champion Chuvalo will be available for autograph-signing, rope-skipping, and speed-bag demonstrations, and possibly, says president Bennett, a brief sparring session with anyone willing to cross fists with the 1-rugged Toronto scrapper.

Right now, with such a name attraction attending their first open house, the main worry of president Bennett and fellow club organizers Floyd Crawford, Jack Fitzgerald, and Bessie McIsaac is that they will have too big a crowd.

"But the Legion people have really been great to us," says Bennett. If the crowd gets too big for the old hall, they said we can just move next door to the upstairs of the new building."

Once the hubbub of opening night dies down, the club hopes to get into operation within a week, open Mondays through Thursday evenings 6-10 p.m., and Saturdays from 10 a.m. noon to 4 o'clock. Qualified instructors will be on hand to supervise training at all times. Those who have offered their services to date include trainers Bill Sillers, Bobby Totten, Jack Lucas Gerry Downes, and George Woodhouse.

Exhibitions in boxing, karate, judo, and wrestling/ring are in the planning stages, as is a visit from a group of professional Toronto bodybuilders.

The club also hopes to have movie equipment available when boxing becomes an established part of the program which would enable participating boys to see their faults projected.

"But for now, we want to stress physical fitness for the kids." says president Bennett. "For kids from five on up."

Quinte League Expanding

Things are opening up in more ways than one for the Quinte Hockey League this season.

The top calibre "working man's league" in Belleville will hold its first organizational meeting of the season next Wednesday. Another "opening" is being provided to former senior and intermediate players "to perform in the Quinte loop. Anyone who did not play senior hockey in the 1971-72 season will be eligible to participate.

League president Al Kelleher notes that as many as six teams may be expected to answer the opening gun. Last year's entries included Belcadere Hotel, Central Taxi, Stinson Construction and Reid's Dairy.

The league has been since ice time in its regular Thursday night slot.

The city's other industrial league, the Gas House, has also been granted ice time (Monday night and Sunday morning). However the league has a large outstanding debt to the arena — (which meant place as high as $800) — which must be paid before teams will be allowed to play.

Last year's entries in the

No league meeting has yet been called for the Gas House League.

Uniroyal Pitching Good Enough

The Uniroyal Centre Tadpoles couldn't match their first game victory over Crawford Metals but their 6-4 win was good enough to move the Tavern into the finals of the Belleville Minor Baseball playdowns Wednesday.

Steve Taylor and Craig Brewer had hurled a no-hitter in their opening 5-1 win but had to settle for a four hitter in last night's second game. Stewart Emerson also saw mound action for Uniroyal who swept the best-of-three series in two straight games. Emerson pitched a homer and double to lead the winners' hitting attack.

Uniroyal now advance against Plane's Concrete in the league finals.

Minor Hockey Setting Stage

By ERIC EMERSON

Sports Staff

Belleville Minor hockey is expanding but it won't be coming apart at the seams!

The tyke division, for instance, will be bound together much better. That's because new dividers to separate the three tyke games in progress simultaneously have been provided. Last year's versions often came apart during the course of action leaving the youngest house league players wondering just which section they belonged in.

The development was one of the more minor, but interesting items to come out of Tuesday's organizational meeting.

Registration for minor hockey will take place Sept. 8 and 9 and Sept. 15 and 16. The Friday night sessions will be from 6-9 p.m. while Saturday registration will run from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Forms will be available at the Memorial Arena on those dates or may be picked up any day at the Recreation Centre, Pinnacle Street.

Fees will remain the same as last year ($6 per person or $12 per family). "That's much lower than any centre of this size in the province," observed president Don Gavey, "we've had all of the teams sponsored."

The Royal Canadian Legion will be the biggest single sponsor of minor hockey this season, backing no less than four teams.

The minor hockey program will occupy 63 hours per week at Dick Ellis and Memorial arenas this week, an increase over the 55 hours of last year. The season is also expected to run 23 weeks, an increase of eight.

Eight OMHA teams will be in operation this season, with bantam and peewee minor teams representing the two new entries.

The Western Tire Juveniles will be managed by Marsh Hopkins and coached by Lou Smrke, while the Blake Kerr Imperial midgets will again have Jerry Murphy and Robb Burrowes at the reins.

In bantam all-star play it will be the Kinsmen majors competing under the direction of Ron Hutchinson and Dave Jones, while the new Melnroy and Maines minors will be handled by Jack McBride and Gordie Bell.

Norm Harris and Gord Melnroy take over the Hollins Construction peewee majors while the minors will be managed by Bob Sullighant and coached by Bob Cook.

Towers Food City novices will have Dennis Flounlow as manager and Ted Soule as coach while Frank Pinder will direct the Wilson Concrete tykes.

All-star games will be played Saturday evenings, Sunday afternoons and Tuesday evenings with a total of 10 hours per week being set aside for those contests.

Three tournaments are slated for Belleville this season. The Lions Midget Tournament will be held November 26, the Yardmen Juvenile Tourney in January 7 and the big Shrine Peewee Tournament from March 29-31.

Yardmen Gals Two Up

BYBF had no intentions of getting 'cosy' in their second game of the Belleville and District Softball League finals last night but that's just what they did.

The Yardmen girls got the Cosy Grill for 19 hits en route to a 16-6 win and a two-games-to-none lead in the best-of-seven series.

Sheila Smith had a homer run, triple and two singles and Penny Hughes two homers and a single to lead the winners attack. Linda Empey added four safeties while Donna Lucas and Donna Preston were good for three hits apiece.

Sue Morton picked up the win striking out six and walking three. Cathy Brown pulled three safeties in support of losing pitcher Sandra Claus.

Gagne Cements In Opponents

Foster's Thurlow Peewees found themselves bricked in last night when Gagne Masonary came up with a 12-5 win in their first meeting in the best-of-three Thurlow Minor Baseball peewee semi-finals.

Will Gagne and Gary Badgley picked up the win with Ron Landry punching a triple and double in hitting support.

The same teams meet tonight at Harmony in the second game. The survivors meet the Plane's Concrete tyke all-stars for the division championship.

Clemente Ties Pirate Record

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

Records are made to be broken, but for the time being Pittsburgh's Roberto Clemente and Cincinnati's Pete Rose will have to settle for ties.

Clemente singled twice in the Pirates' 11-0 romp over San Diego Wednesday night and tied Honus Wagner's club mark of 2,970 career hits.

Rose managed one single in the Reds' 4-2 triumph over New York Mets and matched Vada Pinson's Cincinnati record of 1,881 hits.

Elsewhere in the National League, Montreal Expos ended the 11th player in baseball history to reach the 3,000-mark.

"Everybody started cheering," Clemente said, "but I didn't know why. I didn't know what was going on until I looked at the scoreboard and saw the message."

In addition to Clemente's two singles, Dave Cash hit a three-run homer, Willie Stargell chalked a solo homer and Manny Sanguillen drove in three runs with a pair of singles.

Montreal scored in all sorts of ways to beat Atlanta. The Expos got a run in the first inning off Phil Niekro on a single, two wild pitches and a passed ball. Ron Woods homered in the second and singles by winning pitcher Ernie McAnally, Tim Foli and Ken Singleton produced the winning run in the eighth. Ralph Garr and Earl Williams homered for the Braves.

Cincinnati's Rose also received a standing ovation, but said he wasn't aware of it.

"Did they stand up for me?" he asked. "I didn't realize it. I just saw my family standing and I thought someone was standing in front of them."

Philadelphia's 21-game winner Steve Carlton held Houston hitless until Tommy Helms' fifth-inning single touched off a two-run rally. Bob Watson singled another across in the sixth before Carlton left for a pinch hitter.

Chicago's Hickman socked his game-winning homer on a 3-2 pitch from Los Angeles relief ace Jim Brewer. The Cubs wiped out a 6-1 deficit in the third inning, which included two of the four wild pitches unleashed by Dodger hurlers.

San Francisco jumped on Bob Gibson for two runs and a 3-1 lead in the ninth inning on a walk ad three singles to beat St. Louis.

ROBERTO CLEMENTE ... shaded Atlanta Braves 3-2. Houston Astros downed Philadelphia Phillies 5-3, Chicago Cubs downed Los Angeles Dodgers 9-8 on Jim Hickman's 11th-inning home run and San Francisco Giants nipped St. Louis ardinals 3-2.

Clemente's second hit of the game, a seventh-inning single off San Diego's Fred Norman, left him 30 hits short of becom-

Weaver, Dobson Not On Same Wavelength

Pitcher Pat Dobson and manager Earl Weaver weren't on the same wavelength Wednesday night after Baltimore Orioles' 7-1 loss to Minnesota Twins.

"He didn't tell me that his arm had tightened up and I didn't think of asking him," said Weaver after his pitcher came back after a rain delay and was hit hard.

Dobson looked like two different pitchers gainst the Twins—pitching shutout ball before the 34-minute rain delay interrupted the seventh inning, and then getting whacked as the home team scored all its runs.

Despite losing, the Orioles stayed tied for first place in the American League East with Detroit after the Tigers lost a 4-1 decision to California Angels.

Oakland Athletics improved their margin in the West to 1½ games when they beat Cleveland Indians 2-0 while the second-place Chicago White Sox lost to Boston Red Sox 4-2.

New York Yankees trimmed Texas Rangers' 3-1 and Kansas City Royals turned back Milwaukee Brewers 6-2 in Wednesday's other games.

Andy Messersmith stopped Detroit on three hits and Vada Pinson knocked in two runs to power California over the Tigers. Messersmith struck out nine batters and held the Tigers hitless until two were out in the ninth inning, when Dick McAuliffe tangled to centre.

FRANK HOWARD

Howard a Tiger

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Tigers announced today the purchase of Frank Howard, slugging outfielder-first baseman, from Texas Rangers for an undisclosed cash price.

A spokesman for the Tigers said that because Howard will not join the team until Friday, he will not be eligible to play in any American League playoff series or World Series competition.

The biggest man in baseball, the 6-foot-7, 285-pound Howard is making a poor showing with the Rangers this year.

However, he commands one of the game's top salaries, $115,000 a year. He has only nine home runs and driven in 31 runs while hitting .230 as a part-time player.

Tough Charter Rules Imposed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission has taken a hard line on charter flights, issuing four new regulations to protect passengers from being stranded overseas with worthless ticket vouchers.

Air Canada officials in Montreal said Wednesday they had received a telegram from the commission setting down new and tougher rules for charter flights. The message was also sent to other airlines.

The new regulations say airline carriers must prove they have been paid for both the going and returning portion of the flight that carriers must investigate every passenger to make sure he is a member in good standing of the chartering organization; that carriers can bring back only those passengers they flew out of the country; and that carriers are required to provide a manifest showing all passengers' names, their home address, their passport numbers and nationality. This document must be delivered immediately after the flight has returned.

The penalty for breaking the new regulations is reported to be loss of operating licence.

The telegram from the CTC to Air Canada said the new regulations were issued "in light of the present situation of stranding passengers at, for ex-

Canadians stranded at foreign points this summer included 830 tourists left in Europe by a financial dispute between a Montreal-based charter referral service and a Swiss airline, Bassar.

The charter referral agencies are outside federal jurisdiction and there are no provincial regulations preventing them from operating.

Such agencies often offer travellers cheap one-way tickets to Europe with vouchers to be redeemed for return tickets at some point in Europe.

When travellers try to exchange their vouchers for tickets home, they are told the vouchers no longer are valid because the charter ticket agency no longer exists.

Travellers then are faced with the prospect of having to buy passage on a regularly scheduled flight, at a time when such flights are crowded.

Federal officials say the long-standing affinity charter rule is the biggest headache.

The affinity rule is an international regulation that allows an organization whose main purpose is not travel to charter a flight at lower rates than regular-scheduled flights

Zorro Leaves Mark

Zorro Grattan proved it was number one at the Frontenac Downs Wednesday night harness races but with a driver like Hugh Wemp there was never any doubt.

Grattan's ninth race victory in 2:06 was the fastest time ever for the Trenton horse and it also marked Wemp's 72nd victory of the racing season. Wemp is a common sight in the winners circle at the Kingston, Belleville and Brockville tracks and with a victory on Dandy Duke in the eighth he made his appearance in front of the grandstands twice last night.

The seventh race exactor of Arlas E. Junkin and Pierre Princess returned $103.50 for the big pay-off of the night.

Other race winners were Zeke Sam in the first; Single's Rusty in the second, Star Heel in the third, Garou in the fourth, Weiner Slee in the fifth, Charlie C in the sixth, and Glory Hatch in the 10th.

A ladies' day crowd of 1,300 pushed $41,566 through the betting wickets, the highest total since opening day.

Entertainment Briefs

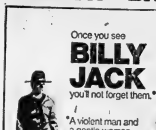
HYANNIS, Mass. (AP) — Entertainer Donald O'Connor will continue to perform in a production of Promises, Promises despite a neck injury suffered Tuesday when he fell from his bed. A spokesman for the Cape Cod Melody Tent said O'Connor was treated at Cape Cod Hospital and released with a neck brace.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The late actress Joi Lansing has willed her entire estate to her husband, Stanley Todd, 49, of Marina del Rey. The blonde actress, who died Aug. 7 of cancer, gained fame for her role in the Robert Cummings television series. The will, filed Wednesday in Superior Court, gave no estimate of her total wealth.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Two mid September concerts of the rock music group The Grateful Dead have been cancelled because of insufficient security personnel for crowd control, the Saratoga Performing Arts Centre said Wednesday.

A spokesman said the cancellation of the Sept. 15 and 16 concerts followed meetings between the management of the centre, the rock group, and law-enforcement officials.

Kenneth E. King, public safety commissioner for this resort community of 20,000, estimated the band would attract up to 25,000 fans each day.



NEW YORK (AP) — Former Beatle John Lennon gave a concert for charity Wednesday, proceeds going for facilities for retarded persons in New York.

John Lennon and his wife, Yoko Ono, were on for 75 minutes with the seven-man hard rock band, Elephant's Memory.

Go to Thieves

Another music fan is loose in Belleville.

Last week it was musical instruments — to the tune of $2,250 — that were stolen. This time, it's automobile stereo equipment.

Jack Morrison of 430 Bridge St. East discovered the tape deck and nine tapes missing from his car this morning. The goods were valued at $90.

Mr. Morrison had not driven the car since Monday.

A wrecked Mazda stored at Paul Ainsworth Car Mart on North Front Street was also broken into as thieves made off with an eight-track combination radio Monday night. In addition, three wheels and the battery were lifted.

City police are investigating both robberies.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

FRIDAY, SEPT. 1

Aries (March 21-April 19): Most of the day is taken up with mental expressions, the evening with emotional urges. Nothing is to be lost.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Where you have the final say, nothing material is a problem but where loved ones are involved, your budget is confused.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Refuse to be resistant to both high pressure and soft sales pitches—you have them coming at you from all sides.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Investigation reveals hidden details in your work; fills your day with special satisfaction. Vindication of some of your ideas.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Let off steam in some constructive or harmless way, not in fast travel. The news of the day includes items of much interest.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Circumstances become complex, you are over-scheduled, so cancel or postpone some activities. Home conditions of importance.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are readily involved in social activities without much thought about your budget. Career decisions have less strong an emotional factor.

Just One Drink Brings Hangover

By G. C. Thosteson, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband has a problem that he has taken to the doctor. You see, every time he has one drink, whether one beer or one cocktail, he ends up with a terrific headache the same evening or the next day.

Everyone insists that he had his eyes examined. He just has, and it has nothing to do with his vision.

At age 28 he is in misery at social affairs. What could possibly be causing these headaches? Can you become allergic to alcohol? — Mrs. W. F.

Well, I've heard of more menacing afflictions than this, but I can see that it's a nuisance at a party.

Alcohol dilates small blood vessels, and some individuals are unduly sensitive to this and can get what are called cluster headaches.

There are, of course, other causes of cluster headaches, but since your husband has pinpointed a drink as the thing that troubles him, it would appear that he has found the culprit.

The obvious answer is to avoid alcohol. His physician might—I'm not saying I would do so myself, but it's a possibility—elect to give him an ergot preparation to counter-act the dilation of the small blood vessels. But that seems to me to be reaching a long way, instead of ing a risk that might better be avoided. Too much ergot can cause trouble, too.

If he's trapped into ordering a martini like a tourist as a martini docs. Ginger ale and a twist of lemon can make a fairly convincing dry manhattan. Whisky and cola looks the same if you forget to put the whisky in.

If he pours down quite a lot of those drinks, who knows? Maybe he'll get a reputation for being able to drink a lot without showing it. And without headaches yet.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had a cataract operation but still saw floaters afterward. I asked why the doctor didn't take it all out and he replied: "You have to leave some of it." I understood if it wasn't all removed it would grow back. Is it true that some has to remain? I don't believe it. — Mrs. W. H.

Well, you'd better believe it. The "floaters" are tiny specks in the fluid of the eyeball. They are not in the cataract, which is the lens as the extreme front of the eyeball.

You can remove the lens (the cataract) and you must then replace the lens. But if you removed the eyeball itself, where the floaters are, yuh would destroy vision completely.

The floaters, in other words, have nothing to do with the cataract or cataract operation.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is there any diet to prevent formation of kidney stones? — Mrs. R.C.

Several. Because there are several forms of kidney stones, which differ chemically. Hence different diets are used, depending on the type of stones that you'll have to consult your doctor who, after laboratory tests of stones, will know what type of diet to use.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R

is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Opening lead—jack of clubs.

A safety play is a measure taken by declarer to guard against unfavorable distribution. It will sometimes cost declarer a trick to invoke the safety play, but he should be willing to deliberately lose that trick if it insures the contract.

South got to six notrump after his artificial two club bid and North's negative response. A club was led, taken by declarer who cashed the ace of spades, played a diamond to the queen, and discarded a club on the king of spades.

Had the diamonds been divided 3-2, South would have won thirteen tricks, but when he led a diamond to the ace and West showed out, he had to go down one. He could now do no better than concede a diamond, whereupon East cashed a diamond and a spade to defeat the slam a trick.

Declarer's method of play was wrong. He should have realized that only a poor diamond division could stop him, and he should have taken the necessary steps to guard against that contingency.

Cashing the ace of spades at trick two was certainly right—but when he then led a low diamond and West followed low, he should have played the eight from dummy.

In the actual case, the eight would have lost to the ten, but South would then have been in a position to point to twelve ironclad tricks.

More often than not the safety play would cost declarer an overtrick, but this $4-point trick is a mere drop in the bucket compared to the value of a slam. Playing the eight insures the slam against any 4-1 diamond division, and South therefore should have played it.

His failure to exercise the proper precaution cost him 1,750 points!

Tomorrow: Test your play.

Dream Realized

Barrett Is First NDP Premier of B.C.

COQUITLAM, B.C. (CP) — Dave Barrett assumed the lead part in a life-long dream Wednesday night as he watched 20 years of Social Credit government end and became premier-elect of British Columbia's first New Democratic Party government.

"All my life I dreamed of the day there would be a CCF or NDP government: that day has come," the portly 41-year-old social worker told a news conference.

He said he needs a few days to transform the dream to reality, and will spend them on a fishing trip with his family. His immediate moves are choosing a cabinet and deciding when to call a session of the B.C. legislature.

Although Mr. Barrett said he "felt a week ago we were going to win," he admitted he "gave no previous thought" to forming a cabinet.

The premier-elect entered his riding headquarters here receiving tribute to Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

"The first thing I want to do is to publicly express my appreciation to Mr. Bennett for the service he has given this province," he told cheering supporters in a victory address.

"Anyone who gives the best years of his life deserves recognition, regardless of party, and he certainly deserves that."

The two party leaders will meet within a week to arrange the transfer of power, but Mr. Barrett wasn't too sure Wednesday night how it would come about.

"I hope to meet with Bennett soon. But I don't know who contacts whom; this is a new experience for me."

It was also a new experience for the party faithful, to whom he paid tribute as the "Three thousands" who have worked for the NDP, and its predecessor the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, for 40 years.

The thousands who gathered at the headquarters began to smell blood early in the evening. They cheered wildly at each indication of an NDP victory, after staring almost incredulously as the results were posted. When the victory was clear, the scene resembled bedlam, as everybody was hugging each other, crying for joy and savoring the victory they felt had been denied them for so long.

At the news conference, the NDP leader scoffed at suggestions that the biggest obstacle will be coping with a hostile business community. He said he would make good his campaign promise to increase corporation taxes, but pledged to give small businessmen a break.

He promised that one of the first bills his NDP government will put through at the next legislature sitting—possibly this fall, but more likely in the spring—will be "the toughest election-campaign bill in all of Canada." He said it would include measures requiring full disclosure of campaign funds, both on the party level and for individual candidates.

Mr. Barrett also pledged to meet all previous commitments to repeal existing legislation. High on the list are Bill Three, which limits teachers' salary increases, and the B.C. Mediation Commission Act with its compulsory-arbitration aspect.

But above all, the premier-elect promised that all his government's future legislation would be "people oriented."

He promised party workers in his short speech that the victory is the beginning of a "people's century in British Columbia."

"The people of B.C. have a right to expect a great deal, and we've got to deliver."

Six of Eight Provinces Defeat Governments

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier W. A. C. Bennett's defeat by New Democrats in Wednesday's, British Columbia general election follows a provincial political trend that has seen six other administrations defeated at the polls and only two re-elected since the last vote here in 1969.

The roster of defeated Governments includes: Jean-Jacques Bertrand's Union Nationale in Quebec; G. I. Smith's Conservatives in Nova Scotia; Louis Robichaud's Liberals in New Brunswick, Ross Thatcher's Liberals in Saskatchewan, Harry Strom's Social Credit administration in Alberta, and most recently Joseph Smallwood and the Liberals in Newfoundland.

The two provinces that returned their governments were Prince Edward Island which re-elected Premier Alex Campbell and the Liberals and Ontario, which returned the Tories under Premier William Davis.

The string of election defeats started in Quebec April 29, 1970, when Premier Robert Bourassa's Liberals stunned the country by smashing the Union Nationale at the polls.

Liberal Gerald Regan took the helm of the Nova Scotia government Oct. 13, 1970.

Thirteen days later Richard Hatfield led the Tories to a stunning upset over Mr. Robichaud's Liberals, ending 32 of 58 legislature seats to end 10 years of Liberal rule.

The New Democratic Party returned to power in Saskatchewan June 24, 1971 [illegible]

In Alberta, Conservative leader Peter Lougheed rode a "time for change" slogan into the driver's seat one year ago Wednesday—Aug. 30, 1971.

And then came Newfoundland. Premier Smallwood put his Liberal mandate on the line Oct. 23, 1971. Frank Moores' Conservatives hit off a big chunk of it but the election ended in a dead heat.

Mr. Moores managed to form a government in a sea of shifting political allegiances

Red Rockets Hit Saigon Air Base

SAIGON (AP) — Communist forces fired rockets into the big air base at nearby Bien Hoa early today and carried out a series of hit-and-run attacks in scattered points.

The Saigon command said 14 Vietnamese were killed and 35 were wounded in the attacks. One American adviser was wounded, and eight U.S. and South Vietnamese planes were destroyed or damaged at Bien Hoa.

Fifty-one 100-pound rockets were fired at the sprawling air base 15 miles northeast of Saigon before dawn, but nearly a third landed in an adjoining village.

Initial field reports said three Vietnamese airmen were killed and three were wounded on the base, and seven civilians were killed and seven wounded in the village.

The only major fighting reported was at Quang Tri, on the northern front, where stalemated battle has been going a heavy toll on both sides for the last two months.

VEHICLE SURVEY

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government is doing a survey on the effect recreational vehicles—such as small trailers and motorhomes—have on highway traffic. "We're trying to determine if the vehicles are having an effect on capacity," says Alex Cherwenuk, a traffic studies engineer. "It could be that we may require additional lanes, climbing lanes on hills, or turnouts sooner than we had anticipated."

After 20 Years As Premier - - -

Bennett Has Good Wishes for Leader of 'Socialist Hordes'

KELOWNA, B.C. (CP) — Premier W. A. C. Bennett's "great years" as head of the Social Credit government in British Columbia came to a startling end Wednesday when voters chose a New Democratic Party government headed by Dave Barrett.

The 71-year-old premier, who was elected for a record 11th term as leader of the Social Credit party, had warned during his quiet re-election campaign that "the greatest hordes are at the gate."

He had said a vote for the Liberals or Conservatives was a vote for the NDP.

"They always come in by the back door when the free enterprise vote is split."

But Wednesday night, when it was clear the NDP had swept into power, Mr. Bennett said he will be a supporter of Mr. Barrett in the NDP well.

"I hope he employs the potential of premier as well as I enjoyed it in the years that I had been premier. There's no job in the province that is more fulfilling where you can do things for people.

He said he would return to Kelowna, "get my feet on the ground and hand over the reins of government in an orderly way to my successor Mr. Barrett in the shortest possible time."

"I'll give every co-operation I can to the new premier and I'll say again how pleased I am that the finances of the province are in such good shape.

"I've nothing but gratitude for the people of the province with no ill will to anyone and left by Premier Bennett and Social Credit."

In his second visit to Okanagan South party headquarters, the veteran politician was calm and smiling among his stunned supporters. The party's 1972 campaign manager Ted Dodd and the voters in his riding at returning him to the legislature where he had held the seat since 1961. He will be re-elected as a Conservative.

"I have no regrets about losing the election. "I've had 20 years of being premier of the province. We won seven successful elections provincially for the Social Credit movement. . . . That's a great record to be proud of."

"I'm still of confidence about the great future of our province."

Mr. Bennett, who will celebrate his 72nd birthday on Sept. 6, would not comment on his own political future. When asked whether he would serve the full term as MLA, Mr. Bennett laughed and said:

"One thing at a time one thing at a time."

"My long-range plans are to have a little more time with my family . . . and enjoy life a little bit more."

The self-made millionaire left Conservative ranks after outspoken scraps with party officials, two unsuccessful attempts at the party leadership and disenchantment with the Grit-Tory coalition which administration formed in 1947 under Liberal premier Byrne. (Sous) Johnson.

On Aug. 1, 1952, Mr. Bennett became premier of a minority Social Credit government, with a one-seat lead over the old Cooperative Commonwealth Federation, forerunner of the NDP. It was the last minority government in B.C.

Social Credit won a clear majority the following year.

With Wednesday's final count still to come, Mr. Bennett was 6,800 votes ahead of NDP candidate Frank Snowsell, and the premier had won about 50 per cent of the vote. Mr. Bennett won by a margin of 9,996 votes in the 1969 election.

The premier first arrived at his party headquarters shortly after 9 p.m., an hour after the polls closed, and said "it looks like a win for the NDP." He only stayed a few minutes and refused to concede the election formally.

During the evening, party workers watched the election returns on television with increasing disbelief as 11 of the 15 cabinet ministers were defeated in the NDP sweep.

'Government Defeated Itself'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Defeated Conservative Derril Warren said Wednesday night the defeat of Social Credit was "a sad moment in British Columbia for Premier W. A. C. Bennett."

Mr. Warren said he would announce his future in the Progressive Conservative party within 20 days, but he stressed that he would remain in provincial politics. Two PC members were elected in the 55-seat house.

During the campaign, he said, he would resign as Tory leader if he wasn't elected in his riding of North Vancouver-Seymour.

On the possible causes of Social Credit's defeat, Mr. Warren said the government had alienated too many groups. Mr. Bennett's age had become an issue and the last-minute question of the party's leadership affected the outcome.

"The result was a definite shift from Social Credit," he said. "The government defeated itself."

However, he hoped that the NDP government would be "a transitional phase in the politics of the province."

Important to Mr. Warren personally, he said, was the return to the legislature of Dr. Scott Wallace, who was elected in the last election as a Social Credit member but ran as a Conservative this time.

Son of Mafia Chief Has Interests in WHA

WINNIPEG (CP) — Joseph Colombo Jr., president of the Italian-American League, has purchased a Winnipeg home store owned by Gilbert Eaton of the Eaton department store family, and plans to live here while looking after his interests in the World Hockey Association.

Mr. Colombo, son of Colombo Sr., a reputed chief of a Brooklyn, N.Y., Mafia family, said in an interview Wednesday he is planning to marry Lesia Lucan, a 21-year-old Winnipeg girl, and live about two months of each year in the home on Winnipeg's fashionable Wellington Crescent.

Mr. Colombo said he had "a substantial interest" in the fledgling WHA, although most of his investments are "in United States teams.

Joseph Sr. is recuperating from an attempt on his life June 28, 1971 in New York City while he was attending an Italian-American League rally. Joseph Jr. took over the presidency of the league, said to have seven-million members, several months ago.

Origins of the league are traceable to the spring of 1970 when Joseph Sr. began leading a nightly picket of the New York offices of the FBI to protest the prosecution of Joseph Jr. on charges of conspiring to cash silver coins into more valuable ingots.

Joseph Jr., was acquitted of the charge after the U.S. government's chief witness recanted his testimony.

Organized Crime Infiltrates All

QUEBEC (CP) — Organized crime has infiltrated all levels of society including governments and police, Maurice Saint-Pierre, director of the provincial police, said Wednesday.

Mr. Saint-Pierre spoke to reporters after presenting the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police with the report of their organized crime committee.

After the closed meeting he told reporters:

"We have found that organized crime has tried to infiltrate at the level of administration, be it business, be it newspapers, be it police, be it governments, be it municipal or civic authorities.

"They have tried and they will try, not always with success, but sometimes with success.

He refused to say where organized crime has successfully infiltrated.

Mr. Saint-Pierre's report said new police techniques involving inter-force co-operation show promise in dealing with organized crime.

Mr. Saint-Pierre said in the report gambling, loan-sharking and pornography remain in the forefront of organized crime activities. Current trends were towards real estate, fraudulent building schemes and infiltration or takeover of financial institutions.

Organized crime also was becoming more involved in the distribution of hard drugs and "known criminal figures were exercising influence and control over unions in connection with construction of large building complexes, other projects and enterprises."

The report also said organized crime is organizing gambling junkets to European and other spots where gambling is legal.

"There have even been reported incidents of 'enforcers' coming to Canada from Las Vegas to make collections, this shows the close connection between junket operations and loan-sharking which is widespread in many other activities," the report said.

Protection rackets "are still evident in many fields."

The report said Vancouver and Montreal are focal points of narcotics in Canada, with Winnipeg reporting increased activities in this field."

Hamilton Traffic Produces Barricade

HAMILTON (CP) — A group of demonstrators blocked a busy city street Tuesday night to draw attention to what they consider unnecessary heavy truck traffic.

About 70 people, members of the York Street Opposition Union (YOU), set up barricades and directed all traffic away from the street.

The placard-carrying demonstrators also handed out leaflets to passing motorists, but most of the drivers had little time to figure out what it was all about before making the requested detour.

Some vehicles, however, refused to take the detour and trouble erupted.

Police forcibly moved some demonstrators out of the way but most put up only a token resistance.

There were no arrests or injuries.

The group is demanding that all trucks be banned from the street, except for buses and local deliveries.

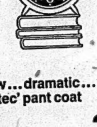
They also request an end to truck routes through all of the city's residential areas.

Democrats Say GOP Nit-picking

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican charges of "devious cover-ups" have drawn Democratic claims of "nit-picking" in the latest round of accusations over presidential campaign money-handling under a new law.

While Democratic presidential nominee George McGovern's campaign has "attempted to hold its candidate out to the public as above reproach, his organization has in fact resorted to devious cover-ups in various fund raising activities," Republican National Chairman Robert J. Dole said Wednesday.

Dole called for an investigation by the General Accounting Office—which the audit agency said is already under way. "I believe there is substantial evidence that the McGovern campaign apparatus has committed at least seven technical violations" of the new political finance law requiring disclosure of the names of persons making contributions, Dole said in a letter to GAO.



A GAO official said: "We plan to give this the same type of treatment we gave the Republicans."

Frank Mankiewicz, McGovern's national political director, told reporters that the GAO already has begun a "routine" audit of McGovern finances before Dole asked for it.

Dole charged that the McGovern campaign received at least $10,000 from a London-based committee called Americans for McGovern Abroad, which has not registered with the federal elections office.
